'NOBODY TOO BIG' FOR SCHNEIDERS' NOTE SALESMEN

Paper Totaling More Than $400,000 Put Out by Ex-Convict in His Enterprises in Five Years.

BANKERS, BROKERS, MERCHANTS "SOLD"

Hearing on Application for Warrants in Case Involving the Tyrola Phonograph Co. Tomorrow.

The practical school of salesmanship conducted by Edgar Schneiders, 60-year-old ex-convict, disposed of between $400,000 and $500,000 of notes in the last five years, the Post-Dispatch has learned. Schneiders' high-pressure salesmanship course began in 1919, with his release from the penitentiary, and continued until last week.

A complaint to the Circuit Attorney by a retired farmer who had lost his lifetime savings of $2500 was the push that sent Schneider's house tumbling down and introduced him once again to the authorities. Three enterprises which he dominated—the Tyrola Phonograph Co., the National Distributing and Sales Co., and the North American Sales Co.—are now under investigation.

Farmers were not the only ones who lost money after listening to Schneiders and his eloquent associates. Their boast that "nobody comes too big for us" is proved true by the list of investors, which includes bankers, brokers and merchants. Storekeepers and workmen are numerous and the inevitable widow is present.

Popular Selling Points.

Selling headquarters were in St. Louis and St. Louisans suffered most financially. Elsewhere in Missouri the salesmen achieved the desired results in and around St. Joseph, Washington, Union, De Soto, Crystal City and Portage des Sioux. Popular Illinois places were East St. Louis, Olney, Ramsey, Flora, Coffeen and Tilton.

The fact that several of the salesmen possessed penitentiary records did not become known until late, it seems. As has been told, Edgar Schneiders was convicted in 1913 of forgery and served 19 months of a two-year sentence. His brother, August, who died last April, served six months for embezzlement. Austin Peck Jr. served 10 months of a five-year sentence for embezzlement in 1921 and was paroled. Robert Peck escaped prison when a two-year sentence for embezzlement was reversed by the Supreme Court.

Notes at Large Discounts.

The method of the Schneiders School of Salesmanship was to insert advertisements in newspapers, offering promisory notes at large discounts, frequently as high as 35 per cent. When the reader responded to the lure, Schneiders went out to see him in an expensive car, sometimes manned by a dignified negro, and invited the prospect to Schneiders' home, where deals were usually made in the case of St. Louisans. Those who were impressed by the automobile and residence probably did not know both were heavily mortgaged.

The stone-front bungalow at 4522 Arsenal street, facing Tower Grove Park, which the Schneiders family occupies, is one of the most impressive residences in South St. Louis. Their Pierce-Arrow touring car, although a 1919 model, has been given a new top and painting and remains equally impressive. Edgar Schneiders disclaims ownership and says both belong to a son, Arthur, who is about 28 years old, and is associated in his father's enterprises. Another son, Harry, about 16 years old, now drives the Pierce-Arrow.

From Merchants.

The promissory notes were obtained from furniture and music dealers, saloon keepers and other storekeepers in payment on contracts whereby they were to be agents for Tyrola phonographs and radiographs. The givers of the notes almost invariably refused to pay when due, asserting the contracts had been violated by Schneiders and others, in that the machines were misrepresented and cost more than better-known makes, and that the full number were not delivered. Where contracts called for four or six machines, quite often only one was received.

One of the heaviest losers is believed to be Arch R. Smith, 6925 Plateau avenue, who is owner of

SHENANDOAH RETURNING TO HANGAR AFTER TRIP TO SEA

Naval Dirigible Reports by Wireless She Will Arrive at Lakehurst Ahead of Schedule.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 16.—Wireless messages received at the naval air station tonight from the dirigible Shenandoah, which today engaged in maneuvers with the Atlantic flight squadron of the navy, 500 miles off the New England coast, stated that all was well with the ship and that she expected to reach Lakehurst at 1:15 a. m. The position of the ship was off Atlantic City.

The Shenandoah left her mooring mast yesterday before noon and, after cruising over the Jersey coast, put out to see around 6 p. m. When the ship left here she was not expected to return until late Sunday.

LIQUOR JAILS MOTHER OF 18

Holder of Roosevelt Medal Admits Drinking Moonshine.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Mrs. Emma Pross, 48, mother of 18 children and possessor of an anti-race suicide gold medal sent her by former President Roosevelt, was in the county jail today charged with disorderly conduct. Warden Wesley Westbrook said that he did not believe she belonged there and is investigating her case with a view to getting her out.

Mrs. Pross' own story is that she "was sitting on a park bench crocheting and they arrested me for that. Of course, I was drinking a little moonshine, but I ought to get out."

Lucy Page Gaston Dying.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 16.—There is no hope that Lucy Page Gaston, famous anti-cigarette crusader will survive the cancer of the throat from which she is critically ill, it is announced today. The patient was removed from the Presbyterian Hospital to the Hinsdale Sanitarium. She requested the change so that she could be near her friends in Hinsdale. An operation was performed several days ago to grant temporary relief, but last night the patient had a relapse.

What "A New Car Every Year" Means

Automobile "fans" and men of large incomes often buy new cars every year.

That puts cars which are good and serviceable upon the market at greatly reduced prices.

That is somebody's good fortune.

Those who want an auto and do not feel like investing the price of a new one, or those who need another for business calls, get good cars at most attractive prices.

In St. Louis, the most of these car bargains are to be found in the classified "Automobiles" columns of the Post-Dispatch.

That's a hint to the wise!

BANK ROBBER, ALLEGED SLAYER OF 18 MEN, KILLED

Roy Daugherty, With Record of Crime in Three States, Shot in Hiding Place in Joplin.

SUSPECTED IN CASE OF ASBURY HOLDUP

Served Terms in Prison in Oklahoma and Missouri for Bank Robberies; Victims Were Possemen.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., Aug. 16.—Roy Daugherty, 54 years old, robber and ex-convict, whose crimes had stretched over three states—Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma—in the last two decades, died late today with his boots on.

Daugherty, whose pistol is said to have 18 notches on its handle, each representing a life taken in resisting arrest, fell from bullets fired by Detective Chief W. F. Gibson and Detective Len Vandeventer, in a residence on the outskirts of the city, where he had been in hiding.

In the house besides Daugherty were a woman, a small girl and a baby. Daugherty, seeing officers surrounding the house, seized an automatic pistol.

Detective Chief Gibson approached the back door to prevent escape from that exit. As he reached the door Daugherty began firing. Gibson ducked, one of the bullets taking a piece out of his straw hat, and returned the fire.

Daugherty fled back into a room, bleeding from three wounds, and ran into Detective Vandeventer, who fired, and the robber fell over on a bed, a bullet through his heart.

Four in Robber Gang.

Daugherty had been sought by the police for several weeks in connection with the robbery of the Bank of Asbury at Asbury, Mo.

The Joplin police, in killing Daugherty, say they got the last of the alleged robbers of the Asbury bank. Jesse Cockran, an Indian, and Len Brookshire are in the Missouri penitentiary serving 50-year terms for the robbery. Guy McKenzie, the alleged fourth member of the gang, is in jail here under a charge of first degree robbery in connection with the hold-up.

The shooting today was not the first time that Detective Chief Gibson had encountered the robber. Several years ago the detective broke into a house where Daugherty was in hiding and got the drop on him. Daugherty was arrested at that time for the robbery of the Bank of Oronogo and served a term in the Missouri penitentiary for it.

Many Banks Robbed.

He is alleged to have robbed a score or so of Missouri and Oklahoma banks. His most extensive crime career was in Oklahoma, where he is said by the local police to have killed most of the 18 men whose deaths are charged to him.

At one time, while barricaded in a house, Daugherty, according to the police, killed four members of a posse in Oklahoma. He served two terms in the Oklahoma penitentiary for bank robbery and was wanted for several charges in the two states at the time of his death.

The body is being held in the morgue of an undertaking establishment pending action of the Coroner. Daugherty has no known relatives here.

Asbury Bank Robbery.

The robbery of the Asbury Bank, Nov. 26, 1923, in which about $1000 was taken—was followed by a pistol fight with citizens who followed the robbers out of town and opened fire. Two of the four robbers, standing on the running boards of the automobile in which they were fleeing, returned the fire.

Later three of the robbers were forced to surrender by a motor cycle policeman near Crestline, Kan., but the fourth robber, surprising him, forced him to drop his revolver. Then the four put him at the wheel of their car and forced him to drive them into Oklahoma.

White House Closed for Repairs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—In the absence of the President and his family, the White House is to be closed to the public, and will undergo a summer overhauling. The stream of visitors that poured into it daily for months was stopped today. This did not prevent hundreds from walking about the grounds. The doors will be thrown open again Aug. 28.

BUILDING ARMORED CARS TO PREVENT MAIL ROBBERIES

Postoffice Department Tries Out Device to Defeat Train Holdups.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—In an effort to prevent railway mail robberies, the United States Postoffice Department has contracted for the building of 3000 specially designed cars, armored heavily, and equipped with protective devices, to defeat attacks by armed desperadoes. A spokesman of the department said that one of the cars had been delivered to the railroad yards at Melrose, N. Y., and, if it meets the tests to which it will be subjected, the others will be rushed to completion. The armored mail car, designed under Government supervision, is said to be the result of the Postoffice Department's reaction to the railway mail holdup near Chicago June 12, in which $2,075,000 in money and bonds were stolen. Night robbers at that time attacked a special mail train at Rondout, Ill., using gas bombs, and took 40 pouches of mail.

The car has many features reminiscent of the armored tanks used in the World War. It is equipped with slits through which its occupants can thrust rifles and revolvers. It has a system of locks which makes it impossible for anyone to gain entrance without the co-operation of someone on the inside. It is understood that it also will be equipped with devices to counteract poison gas.

Representatives of the Postoffice Department said that losses from train mail robberies have been as high as $6,000,000 in one year.

'JELLY ROLL' HOGAN'S RESORT IS RAIDED

One of Five County Bars Where Deputies Reported Finding Liquor or Home Brew.

Deputy sheriffs under Chief Deputy Cartwright raided five soft drink places, including one conducted by Edward J. (Jelly Roll) Hogan, in St. Louis County, last night. A quantity of liquor or home-brew was found in each place, they reported, and the proprietors were arrested and released on bond.

Hogan's place, the Blue Front Cafe, at 9025 South Broadway, was the first raided. In a side room off the bar, the officers found two loaded sawed-off shotguns and then located a quantity of liquor in the barroom. Hogan objected to their actions and Cartwright placed handcuffs on the gang leader.

"Leave Me Just One Rod."

Hogan, however, induced the Chief Deputy to remove them, and then pulled a revolver from his pocket, with the remark: "I don't want to be arrested with this on me." Two other revolvers were found in the place. Hogan, who was charged with possession of intoxicating liquors, was released on a $1000 recognizance bond signed by him at the place, with instructions to appear tomorrow at the Sheriff's office in Clayton. The gang leader urged the officers to "leave me just one rod—you know how I'm fixed," but they took all the weapons with them.

56 Cases Poured Into Street.

The deputy sheriffs next raided the saloon of John Boamgard at 9201 South Broadway, where a quantity of liquor was found, they said. They then went to the open air garden conducted by Asa H. Morgan, 9301 South Broadway, and seized 57 cases of "home-brew." the bottles of 56 of these were broken in the street, while a crowd looked on and the other was retained as evidence.

The Tel-Ro Inn, conducted by H. J. Brown on the Telegraph Road near South Broadway, and a place conducted by Edward Carroll at 319 Lemay Ferry road, were the last places raided. Liquor was found at these places also, the officers reported, and the proprietors, like those of the other places, were arrested and then released on $1000 bond each.

$17,301,580 PAID BY STATE IN SOLDIER BONUSES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 16.—A total of $17,301,580 had been paid by the State up to today on 129,500 claims for the Missouri soldier bonus, for military service during the World War, and 13,500 claims remain unpaid, the Adjutant-General's Department announced today.

Virtually all the remaining unpaid claims are ones held up for correction of some error in proof of claim, or in ability to locate the claimant because of change in address.

BERLIN AND PARIS EXPECTED TO O. K. LONDON PROTOCOL

Definite Belief in German Capital That Cabinet Will Have Sufficient Majority in Reichstag.

NATIONALISTS MAY CEASE OPPOSITION

Little Enthusiasm Among French Over Herriot's Bargain, but Ratification Seems Probable.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Despite widespread disappointment over the Government's failure to obtain a more conciliatory concession on the question of the Ruhr evacuation, there is a very definite impression current in political circles that the Marx-Stresemann Cabinet will command a sufficient majority in the Rechstag, both for the approval of legislation having to do with the Dawes report and on the general question of confidence with respect to the Government's procedure in London.

While the Nationalists are already doing considerable talking in advance in opposition to the Government's yielding on the Ruhr issue, their present protests are not viewed as reflecting the party's ultimate attitude on the floor of the Reichstag, and there is a strong suspicion that the party will refrain from casting active oppositional ballots, thus assuring the Cabinet a clear-cut majority.

First Reading Saturday.

Foreign Minister Stresemann will discuss the London protocol with the Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday, according to present plans. The Reichstag will enter upon the first reading of the Dawes measures Saturday, concluding with a general debate about the middle of the following week, which would permit the German Government to undertake formal ratification of the London pact before the end of the month.

With the return of the German delegates it is believed that much misapprehension under which the German public is now laboring with respect to the general settlement reached in London will be cleared up and that the parliamentary situation will be made more secure for the Ministers.

Herriot's Supporters Confident of Ratification.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—A Cabinet meeting has been summoned at Elysee Palace for Aug. 19. The Chamber of Deputies and the Senate will be convened Aug. 21. The settlement by the London conference will be the chief subject under consideration.

M. Herriot's bargain with the Germans for the evacuation of the Ruhr and the agreement on the Dawes plan have been received in political and parliamentary circles without enthusiasm and with a rather uneasy relief, but ratification seems probable. All are glad that the agony finally is over, but few are exultant at the terms, the Premier's friends and foes alike bracing themselves for a warm debate in the Chamber and Senate over ratification at the end of next week. And neither side appears to relish the prospect.

Supporters of M. Herriot and the Government are confident that ratification will be obtained easily in the Chamber, and that it will be merely reluctant in the Senate. Its opponents so far have displayed no vigorous intention to defeat approval, but the opposition leaders may accomplish much in the next few days in lining up their forces.

Public Welcomes Settlement.

The general impression tonight, however, is that they will let off a good deal of steam during the discussion, yet allow the conference terms to be ratified. Some of them have expressed the view that they do not dare defeat ratification and overthrow the Government because the work would have to be done over again under more difficult conditions, and that if they approve under protest they can always blame Herriot when things go wrong.

The French people generally welcome the settlement, but apparently there is no marked confidence that the problem has been finally solved. It is accepted rather as the most promising solution thus far, but it is argued that it was obtained at too great a sacrifice. They realize the truth of what their financial writers have been telling them—that money is not going to pour into France and

ALLIES AND GERMANY SIGN PROTOCOL ON DAWES PLAN; AGREEMENT TO QUIT RUHR

TERMS OF PROTOCOL SIGNED BY DELEGATES AT LONDON

In Case of Germany's Default, Reparations Commission May Take Allies' Recommendation as to Sanctions.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The agreements concluded tonight by the London conference take the form of a final protocol with four annexes. The final protocol is a brief document in French and English. It is signed by Ramsay MacDonald, as President; by Secretary-General Sir Maurice Hankey, the allied secretaries, the German secretary and a representative of the Reparations Commission. The American secretary does not sign.

The protocol states that the President informed the representatives of the Powers and of the Reparations Commission assembled at the Foreign Office that all the Governments concerned and the Reparations Commission have confirmed their acceptance of the Dawes plan and that by means of the conference certain agreements annexed to the protocol have been signed or initialed by the parties concerned.

Agreements Cannot Be Varied.

These agreements are mutually interdependent and cannot be varied, except that the dates will be advanced, as the original dates presupposed that the first steps would be taken Aug. 15. The parties concerned will meet later in London to attach formal signatures to the documents which have not been signed, and a certified copy of the agreements as concluded between the allies will be communicated to Germany.

Annex 1 of the protocol is the agreement of Aug. 9 between the Reparations Commission and Germany, whereby Germany agrees to take necessary measures to promulgate and enforce the laws required to carry out the Dawes plan in the form approved by the Reparations Commission, especially relating to the bank of issue, the railways and industrial debentures and to apply certain provisions regarding control of the revenues assigned as security for the annuities.

The Reparations Commission undertakes to do its best to carry out the Dawes plan, particularly in the way of facilitating a loan, and both the Reparations Commission and Germany agree to help to carry out any additional agreements, including arrangements for modifying the Dawes plan. If there is a disagreement on the interpretation of the provisions, the dispute shall be submitted to arbitration.

Action in Event of Default.

Three of the annexes to the protocol embody agreements for dealing with sanctions to be applied by the allies to Germany, in the event of her possible default under the Dawes plan, restoration of Germany's economic unity and the setting up of a transfer committee to receive and distribute reparations in kind from Germany.

The Reparations Commission augmented by an American member, is to supervise in the first instance the operation of the Dawes plan. In case of Germany's default, the Reparation Commission may take the allies' recommendation as to the action to be taken; sanctions may not be applied unless flagrant defaults are established, and in case of a flagrant default the allies shall confer as to the nature of the sanctions. Any decision by the Reparations Commission regarding defaults not taken by unanimous vote may be appealed to the Arbitral Commission.

To Safeguard Securities.

The members of this arbitral commission and the American member of the Reparation Commission shall be selected by unanimous vote of the Reparation Commission, and in default of this, by the president of the World Court at The Hague. In the event the allies have to apply sanctions to Germany, they will safeguard the specific securities pledged to the service of the £40,000,000 sterling ($200,000,000) loan to Germany. Service of this loan is to have absolute priority as regards any moneys of Germany so far as such moneys have been subjected to the general charge in favor of the loan and also as regards any difficulties that may arise through the imposition of sanctions.

The preliminary agreement for the restoration of German economic unity is confirmed in the terms already published. Germany must fulfill the stipulated obligations in launching the Dawes plan and the allies must restore German administrative civil and economic control throughout the Ruhr, in accordance with a time table to be enforced progressively as Germany fulfills her part. The entire program for the restoration of Germany's fiscal and economic unity is to be completed by Oct. 5 next.

Transfer Committee's Powers.

In its handling of reparations in kind by the Transfer Committee, Germany recognizes the right of the Transfer Committee to use its funds to pay for deliveries of certain products even after fulfillment of the Versailles Treaty obligations, and agrees that such products need not be confined to those specified in the treaty, due regard being paid to Germany's own requirements. Germany further agrees to facilitate these deliveries under ordinary commercial conditions.

The allies agree to prevent reexportation of these deliveries. Deliveries are to be fixed by a program drawn up by the Reparations Commission in consultation with the Transfer Committee. If there is a dispute as to the program, either within the Reparations Commission or between the Reparations Commission and Germany, an arbitral committee of three independent persons shall lay down the program for defined periods, and such commission shall also determine upon the complaint of an allied Government whether there has been willful discrimination or obstruction by the German Government.

An elaborate scheme is outlined for the arbitration of the different kinds of disputes that may arise in consequence of the work of the Transfer Committee. All arbitral boards not chosen unanimously by the Reparations Commission shall be nominated by the President of the World Court.

AUG. 30 SET FOR FORMAL RATIFICATION CEREMONIES

Approval of Settlement Must Be Given by French Parliament and German Reichstag.

'FIRST PEACE TREATY,' MACDONALD SAYS

Ruhr Agreement Provides First Troops Must Begin to Evacuate This Month; Aug. 15 Next Final Date.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Peace between France and Germany came one step nearer tonight, when the representatives of the Allied powers and Germany assembled in Premier MacDonald's room in the Foreign Office and signed a protocol providing the means for putting into effect the Dawes plan, designed to settle the perplexing reparations problem. The agreements were initialled at 8:50 a'clock.

The London conference, after 30 trying days, has thus been brought to a successful conclusion. All eyes now turn to Berlin and Paris, anxiously watching to see if the German Reichstag and the French Parliament will support Chancellor Marx and Premier Herriot in the bold step they have taken.

Both these Premiers belong to minority governments which are none too stable, and the reaction of the German and French peoples will be watched with some apprehension until their legislative bodies approve and make it possible for German and French representatives to meet with the representatives of the other interested powers at Paris, Aug. 30, and attach their formal signatures to the documents.

Leaders Express Satisfaction.

Premier MacDonald, as president of the conference, presided at tonight's meeting, which was attended by about 200 delegates and experts from the various powers. The session was strictly informal and lacked spectacular features, as the entire conference has.

It was a business meeting in a business office, and more like a directors' conference than a diplomatic function. The British Prime Minister and Premiers Herriot and Theunis, Chancellor Marx, Ambassador Kellogg, Baron Hayashi of Japan, and Prof. De Stefani, Italy, all made brief addresses expressing their satisfaction over the successful conclusion of the conference.

M. Herriot said: "We see the dawn, and hope soon to see daylight."

Marx Thanks MacDonald.

Chancellor Marx thanked Premier MacDonald especially for "the human understanding" with which he had dealt with the delicate problems.

Ambassador Kellogg expressed the opinion that the delegates were all of the mind that the Dawes plan was "the greatest piece of constructive work of modern times," and added that he desired to extend his sincere congratulations to Gen. Dawes.

The German, French and Belgian delegates and Premier MacDonald had been through such a strain in the last 48 hours in effecting a settlement of the French and German differences about the Ruhr exacuation, which were blocking the entire conference, that they rushed from the Foreign Office in great relief immediately after signature. MacDonald started at once for Scotland; many of the French and Belgian officials took the night boats homeward and the Germans will depart for Berlin early tomorrow to take up their battle with the Reichstag for ratification of the protocol.

Neither the Germans nor the WOMAN "CAGED" IN COURT

English Tribunal Reverts to Penal Prictice of Middle Ages.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A reversion to a penal practice of the Middle Ages was witnessed today in the Jersey Royal Court, when Daisy Southard, after being sentenced to pay a fine of $10, was placed in an iron cage in the courtroom and subjected to the gaze of the curious spectators.

The woman soon went into hysterics, and had to be removed. The prisoner, who is a widow, was convicted of having made a false declaration regarding the birth of her child, in an effort to have it regarded as legitimate. Her husband has been dead three years. The "caging" practice was discontinued in England about 100 years ago.

DAVIS ADVOCATES VOICE FOR LABOR IN MANAGEMENT

Expected to Give Full Exposition of Views in Labor Day Address at Place Yet Undesignated.

STOCK HOLDING BY WORKERS FAVORED

Nominee Will Make Two Addresses Friday at Sea Girt—Columbus Speech Being Prepared.

By the Associated Press.

LOCUST VALLEY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—In his Labor Day speech John W. Davis very likely will give a full exposition of his views, first stated in his acceptance address, that democracy in government and democracy in industry alike demand the free recognition of the right of all of those who work, in whatever rank or place, to share in all decisions that affect their welfare.

On behalf of the Democratic presidential candidate it was stated today that his conviction is that there can be no lasting settlement of industrial unrest until the workers have a share in the councils of industry and that labor's knowledge of its own needs gives it a right to a voice in all matters of government that directly or peculiarly affect this right.

Would Know Cause of Disputes.

With labor having a voice in the mainagement of industry, Davis believes there will be removed the main cause for industrial disputes, because there will be full opportunity for the workers to have knowledge of exact conditions respecting the adequacy of wages and other matters which usually form the basis of disagreement.

The Democratic nominee also is represented as holding to the view that the plan of stock distribution to the workers now in operation in some lines of industry should be given wide application as one that has and will prove helpful alike to labor and to industry.

With respect to representation in Government circles, Davis believes that those agencies dealing with labor should be given into the charge of men who have had practical experience and who thus would bring to their task an intimate knowledge both of the problem and questions demanding solution and of conditions as they exist in practice rather than in theory.

The Democratic nominee remained at his home here today marshaling material for his forthcoming addresses. He spent the entire morning in his study and made substantial progress on the speech he is to deliver at Columbus, O., Aug. 26.

Two Speeches Next Friday.

Before going to the West, Davis will deliver two addresses in the East, both at Sea Girt, N. J., next Friday, it was stated today at his headquarters. The first will be before the State Democratic Committee and the second at an open air meeting.

The place for the delivery of the Labor day address still is undetermined. While some of his advisers have urged that he make at least one speech between Aug. 26 and Sept. 1, it is not at all certain that he will do so as, personally, he does not believe in too great an expenditure of effort and ammunition in the early stages of the campaign.

Besides working on his addresses, Davis conferred today with Senator Copeland of New York, who volunteered his services in the campaign, and played a round of golf with George Gardiner, a former law partner.

Allies and Germany Sign Protocol on Reparations

French were fully satisfied with the compromise agreement on the Ruhr evacuation, but both delegations scored many points which they believe will appeal to their publics and ease the way in obtaining ratification.

The specific promise of the French to evacuate the Ruhr absolutely within one year from Aug. 15 and to evacuate Dortmund immediately are great prizes for the German delegates, although they had hoped that the period would be narrowed to six months.

MacDonald won the admiration of all the delegates by the fearless and dashing manner in which he handled the tangled Ruhr situation, speaking with equal frankness to both Herriot and Marx and doing much to keep wartime animosities down.

The French and German delegates had many long conversations during the conference concerning their future tariff arrangement, and at times this commercial feature threatened to be a serious handicap to the Ruhr settlement. But they finally agreed to meet Oct. 1 in Paris to begin negotiations for a commercial treaty. The German delegation insists that it made no trade on tariff arrangements to gain the Ruhr evacuation decision and that it will begin negotiations in Paris untrammeled by any pledge to admit Alsatian iron ore or other French products free.

Turn Backs on War.

Premier McDonald, in addressing the delegates, characterized the results of the conference as the first really negotiated agreement since the war. It was more than words printed on paper, for it was in fact the first peace treaty, inasmuch as the delegates at this conference had turned their backs on war and thoughts of war, he said.

MacDonald spoke of the difficulties the German Ministers face. He knew their burdens were heavy, he said, and their people might not be too happy at the results achieved, but he commended to German study the system of arbitration agreed upon, whereby defects in the Dawes plan might be remedied.

"In other words," said the Premier, "The period of national isolation is ended and that of exchange of views and of reasonable exchange of experiences has begun. That is the advance the London conference has made. However, our work is only beginning, and we must continue step by step the work of peace making and restoration. There is a long way before we reach the goal of European peace and security. But I think we are on the right road."

Beginning of New Era.

Herriot, in the name of France, expressed gratitude to MacDonald, who, he said, had guided them patiently and loyally. He declared that to put the Dawes plan into operation was a difficult work, the beginning of a new era. All the problems of the war were not solved, he said, but he saw the dawn; France had suffered much, but she only asked for her rights.

Chancellor Marx also thanked MacDonald for his understanding. He pointed out the heavy task of the German delegates and the responsibilities they had assumed in accepting the Dawes plan. They were much encouraged by the provision for arbitration. He expressed the hope that this would always be used and that war would come to an end. He also hoped that in the future there would be brought to all international conferences the spirit of peace which had reigned over the London conference. Germany was prepared to collaborate in the work of peace.

Other Unsolved Problems.

In referring to the London conference as the only step in the restoration of Europe, MacDonald pointed out other unsolved problems.

"There is the question of the inter-allied debts," he said. "The question of disarmament and national security, the question of the composition and authority of the League of Nations, the question of doing justice by arbitration. None of these is a simple problem, none of them solvable by sacrificing one nation to the interests of another. They all require international agreements between peoples whose representatives are on terms of absolute equality and who are absolutely free to accept or reject the proposals.

Peril in Economic Problems.

"There is another great class of dangers which we have to face. I refer to the economic problems which are bound to arise, as soon as the Central European Powers find their feet. There will be an attempt on the part of soulless international combines, using the weapon of political pressure, to subordinate the common interests for their own. The defense of national interests and well being against such moves must receive the most careful consideration and firm action of democratic Governments.

"The all-important thing today is that we should be sure that we are on the right road. I am sure that, however prolonged or brief may be the rule of each of us—mere straws in puffs of popular favor—we have every reason to be proud that it has been our good fortune to take part in this historic conference."

The French and Germans finally settled their long controversy over the military evacuation of the Ruhr by an exchange of letters today in which they agree to the principle that Aug. 15 of next year be fixed as the final date when the French and Belgian troops must completely evacuate the Ruhr territory.

Partial Evacuation Now.

They have also agreed that a partial evacuation will begin on Aug. 30 of this year, when the foreign soldiers will leave Dortmund and the cities and places outside of the Ruhr which were not occupied in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Versailles.

The Belgians join with the French in the letters covering these points. Both the French and the Germans, in their letters, insist that they have not altered their opinions about the legal questions involved in the occupation of the Ruhr.

The French insist that the occupations were justified by the treaty of Versailles while the Germans declare that the sanctions were illegal and voice the expectation that the evacuation will be finished earlier than next August.

MacDonald Prepares Letter.

Prime Minister Macdonald is preparing a letter in which he will deny charges that he coerced the Germans into acceptance of the French demand that the Ruhr occupation continue for one year longer. It is also expected that he will issue a statement, expressing the hope that the evacuation may be even speedier than the agreement provides.

The French and Belgian prime ministers made a joint statement declaring it was obvious that the entire sanctions territory would be evacuated as soon as the French troops left the Ruhr, in other words that the military evacuation would be absolutely complete next August 15.

To this MacDonald gave his approval, thus binding the British along with the French and the Germans to the absolute fulfillment of the agreement on condition that the Germans live up to the provisions of the Dawes plan.

The provision for immediate evacuation of Dortmund was inserted as an example of good will on the part of the French and Belgians.

RESTRICTIONS ON LOAN PREVENTED

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—One of the final acts of the international reparations conference was the adoption of an important resolution dealing with the financial phases of the Dawes plan. The resolution reads:

"It is agreed that putting into execution of the Dawes scheme and the arrangements for that purpose embodied in the present agreement depend upon the issue of a loan of 800,000,000 gold marks ($200,000,000) for the purpose of the plan and are conditional on this issue.

"The allied Governments, desiring that this loan should be successfully raised and contemplating that the loan will be the first lien on security pledged thereto, will invite the central banks in their respective countries to use their good offices to facilitate the placing of the loan."

After the resolution was formulated, the American delegation made a statement in which it was declared:

"We understand that this resolution does not restrict the German Government's entire freedom in negotiating the loan with bankers of its own selection."

The American statement was to prevent possible restriction of Germany's financial negotiations to the central banks, instead of permitting them to negotiate for the loan in the open market, and when the conference agreed to it the resolution was adopted.

Logan's Work for Peace Recognized by All, Dawes Says.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Learning from London today that the allied and German representatives had signed an agreement in acceptance of the Dawes plan, Brigadier-General Charles G. Dawes sent the following cablegram to Col. James G. Logan Jr., at the American Embassy in London:

"The great work you have done from the beginning to the end in the effort for world peace is now recognized by all, including the people of the United States. I send my sincere congratulations.

(Signed) "CHARLES G. DAWES."

Marx Replies to Congratulations Cabled by Dawes.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Owen D. Young, known as the man behind the Dawes plan, after attending the final plenary session of the reparations conference tonight, said to the Associated Press:

"I wish to express my great pleasure that the plan has gone through. Ambassador Kellogg and Col. Logan, by their tactful and able aid, have been large contributors to the success of this conference."

The German Chancellor tonight received a cablegram from Brigadier-General Dawes, reading:

"May I offer my congratulations on the outcome of the conference."

Chancellor Marx replied:

"Many thanks for your congratulations. I hope that the future developments may justify the successful outcome of the conference."

FRANCE MAY QUIT RUHR BEFORE YEAR

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON,
London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

(Copyright, 1924, by Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The New York World and Post-Dispatch is able to announce exclusively a fact that may have been decisive in bringing about a solution of the Ruhr problem through the French written guarantee of evacuation of the Ruhr within one year from yesterday.

Chancellor Marx received a communication, which it was intended should be kept secret for the present, from Premier Herriot, to the effect that in October, when the negotiations for the international loan to Germany come up, he may be able to reconsider the period of one year for evacuation of the Ruhr which the Germans now are compelled to accept.

When Stresemann met Herriot in Downing street tonight for the final plenary session of the London conference, the German Foreign Minister informed the French Premier he had been inundated for the last three days with letters and telegrams begging him not to sign the agreement.

"So have I," replied Herriot, and both statesmen laughed.

The next move in the European tangle will be serious disputes between the French and the Germans as to the commercial treaty to be negotiated Oct. 1. The main reason why Herriot, under pressure from Louis Loucheur, held out for a year's occupation was to be able to bring pressure to bear on the Germans during these commercial treaty negotiations.

The French propose extracting from the Germans, if possible, a most favored-nation treatment with little reciprocity, an extension beyond next Jan. 10 of free imports from Alsace-Lorraine into Germany, notably iron and textiles and 51 per cent participation in the Ruhr mines.

Behind the conference scenes of the last few days the big struggle has progressed on these points, the German Ministers trying to get Ramsay MacDonald to intervene to get the French out of the Ruhr, on the ground that Loucheur, representing the Comite des Forges, the French metallurgical combine, contemplates swallowing up the Ruhr industries and that this will be a severe blow to British trade.

MacDonald, however, refused to jeopardize the success of the conference when he saw Herriot was in earnest in holding out for a year, and Ambassador Kellogg's advice to the Grmans Thursday to accept a year, which he gave despite his emphatic denial that he had sided with the French against the Germans, was a determining factor, according to leading German spokesmen, in causing Berlin to yield.

KELLOGG CALLS AGREEMENT 'DAWNING OF A NEW DAY'

American Ambassador, Addressing London Parley, Commends Statesmanship That Brought About Settlement.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—American Ambassador Kellogg, speaking at the International Conference this evening, just before the German and Allied delegates initialed the agreements for the execution of the Dawes plan, said, addressing Premier MacDonald:

"Mr. President, I cannot too highly compliment the delegates of all nations represented at this great International Conference upon their firmness, ability and broad-minded statesmanship which has brought the conference to a successful consumation. It was evident from the beginning that you came here with the firm determination to settle most of the difficult problems which, in times of peace, have confronted the leading nations of Europe—I might say, of the world.

Basis of Europe's Prosperity.

"I believe it was evident to statesmen of all the world that a settlement of the reparations, adjustment of national finances and the rehabilitation of Germany lay at the foundation of the future prosperity of Europe. A permanent settlement on the basis of fairness and justice to all nations engaged in the war was the only sure guarantee of peace. It was with this view that the Reparations Commission, representing the Allied countries, appointed the Dawes Committee to suggest a plan for such settlement.

"As I have said before, they were all able, high-minded and patriotic men with wide public experience and knowledge of financial and economic conditions. I believe more than four weeks of careful study and intercourse between the delegates has demonstrated that the Dawes report was the greatest piece of constructive work of modern times, and I wish, on behalf of my country, to extend to Gen. Dawes and his associates my sincere congratulations.

Loyally Supported by Coolidge.

"From the very beginning, when an expert committee was proposed, to the consummation of your work, this plan has had the hearty and loyal support of the President of the United States and the American people. Complicated and difficult as the problems were, that report has stood the test of the most careful scrutiny and has been the basis of this settlement, for it was founded on sound economic, social and, I might add, political principles which have been evolved by the experience of the ages.

"I do not for a moment minimize the difficulties which have confronted this conference and, but for your ability, your patience and your faith in the people of your various countries, it could not have succeeded. Disagreements there have been, growing out of difficult conditions, political and economic, in different countries. But with the determination to succeed, a confidence which never wavered, and the sincere desire of accommodation of differences, you have brought this conference to a successful issue.

Dawning of a New Day.

"I may be too much of an optimist, but I believe this settlement is the dawning of a new day, the hope of millions of people. The revival of industry and prosperity so necessary to the happiness and progress of mankind. Animosities engendered by the war cannot continue. Nations, as individuals, must live in amity and this conferenec is the beginning of the harmony which presages the brighter future.

"I shall not take the time of this conference to review its work, it speaks for itself. Its daily proceedings have been followed with intensive interest by thousands of people—in no place more than in my country.

"It is the first great step in the restoration of confidence in our civilization. It puts in force a sound economic plan for reuniting German industrial life, giving the German people hope for the future and an opportunity to discharge the obligations growing out of the war.

"The influence of this settlement will be far reaching. It will not be confined to the Allies and Germany, but will be spread to many other nations, especially those border states so intimately connected with the great nations of Europe. There must be friendly intercourse, exchange of products and a revival of industrial activities if Europe is to be prosperous and her people happy.

Recognition of Arbitration.

"There is one feature of this settlement which I wish to emphasize, and that is the recognition and furtherance of the principles of arbitration for settlement of international disputes. In my opinion, the great hope for the peace of the world lies in arbitration and judicial settlement between nations, and I am very glad the conference has contributed so much to forward this plan.

"I would have been glad to have seen these questions referred to the World Court, but I realize many of them were of a technical nature, requiring men experienced in finance, commerce and economics.

"Promises have been made and promises exchanged, and we feel sure that performance will follow in the same whole-hearted fashion. Your work will be well done only when the will of the people is enlisted. I believe the nations will give this support to the engagements taken. They are offered hope, work and accord, and this opportunity the people will gladly welcome.

"In closing, permit me to say for myself, Mr. Logan and my other colleagues that we deeply appreciate the great compliment you have conferred upon us and our countrymen by inviting us to your deliberations and to thank you for your uniform courtesy and friendly spirit."

DEFENSE CLAIMS FOUR NET GAINS IN FRANKS CASE

State Expert Admits "Split Personality Might Be Evidence Towards a Mental Disorder."

ADMITS HE NEVER EXAMINED YOUTHS

Loeb and Leopold Find Merriment in Heated Exchanges Between Counsel and Witness.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Testimony of Dr. H. Douglas Singer, fourth alienist for the prosecution, that Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold Jr., were entirely normal when they kidnaped and killed 14-year-old Robert Franks last May 21, was subjected today to the cross-examination of the aging but vigorously alert Clarence S. Darrow, chief defense counsel.

The hearing to determine whether Judge John R. Caverly shall inflict the death penalty on the youths on their plea of guilty, or impose penitentiary sentences on the plea for mitigation of punishment, was enlivened by frequent clashes of Darrow with the witness and again with Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney.

Loeb and Leopold found much cause for merriment in the heated exchanges between counsel and witness.

At adjournment the defense claimed these were net gains:

Admission by Dr. Singer that he had reached conclusions by observation and not examination; that a split personality, described by defense alienists as existing in both boys, "might be evidence towards a mental disorder;" that the present ages of both Loeb and Leopold is the critical time for developing "mental sickness;" and that a dream life might influence personality.

Report on Murders Admitted.

Dr. Singer did not deviate from his general declaration that he had found no evidence in his observations nor in the testimony of defense experts to sway him from his conclusions that there was "no evidence to indicate a diseased mind in either youth," and that they had displayed normal emotions and that their phantasy lives contained nothing abnormal.

The other leg of the triangular plea of the defense—functional disorders of the endocrine gland systems—was not touched upon today. Darrow was gratified by getting into the record a statement by James Quinlan, at one time an official of the State Penitentiary, but now a lawyer, that 340 persons had pleaded guilty to murder in Illinois in the last ten years and that only one, Thomas Fitzgerald, nearly 40 years old, had been hanged. Darrow's point was to bring out that no youths of the ages of Leopold and Loeb had paid the supreme penalty upon pleas of guilty, and that Crowe, who has termed the Franks case a "perfect hanging case," sentenced Fitzgerald.

Once in today's short session, Crowe charged that the defense was trying to cheat the law. Darrow countered by accusing Crowe of having held Loeb and Leopold illegally while he forced confessions from them. At another point the two argued heatedly when Crowe referred to the youths as "criminals."

"You are not trying to fool me, are you doctor?" presaged one of Darrow's tilts. "You are not trying to avoid us, are you?"

The doctor, retaining his calm under the inquisition by Darrow, each time shot back invitations to try and find out.

"What other names do they use for 'split personality'?" asked Darrow.

"Phantasies, delusions, illusions, mannerisms, etc., they are all evidences of a split personality," replied Dr. Singer.

The "schizophrenic person," was a newcomer in the hearing. He was introduced by Dr. Singer in a book in which he had sought to define more definitely persons with split personalities, Darrow reading extensively from the work.

It was in that connection that the defense council obtained the admission from Dr. Singer that schizophrenia, the inclination of parts of the personality to split off, is more likely to develop into insanity in intelligent persons of the approximate age of Loeb and Leopold than in others.

Cross-examination of Dr. Singer was unfinished when the hearing was adjourned until Monday. It was indicated the defense would end its questioning by Monday noon. There is only one remaining witness, Dr. W. O. Krohn of Chicago, a veteran expert witness in murder trials, and regarded as the prosecution's "ace." Attorneys estimated that a day and a half would suffice for hearing his testimony, permitting arguments in the hearing to be started possibly Wednesday morning.

PHARMACIST DROWNED

CARL V. A. HAGENOW.

CARL V. A. HAGENOW, DRUGGIST, DROWNED

He Was on Second Day of Vacation With Wife at Resort on Gasconade.

Carl V. A. Hagenow, 25 years old, member of a well-known South Side family of pharmacists, was drowned yesterday afternoon when swimming in the Gasconade River at Sweetburg, Mo., about 150 miles from St. Louis.

He was on the second day of a vacation at Cave Lodge, a resort there, with his wife, Leona, when the drowning occurred. Telephone messages received by his family did not indicate what caused him to sink, but it is their belief that he was stricken with cramps.

He was not considered a good swimmer and rarely engaged in that sport because of past attacks of cramps. The body has not been recovered.

Hagenow conducted a drug store at 3008 South Grand boulevard. His father, Theodore F. Hagenow, has a drug store at Grand and Lafayette avenue. His brother, Theodore C. Hagenow, is also a pharmacist.

Hagenow and his wife lived at 4249 Cleveland avenue, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Eckermann. They had no children.

BERLIN AND PARIS EXPECTED TO O. K. LONDON PROTOCOL

any relief from their overwhelming debts and troublesome financial condition, still complicated by the budget deficit, can come only through drastic governmental economies, with higher taxation, which is far from pleasing.

Comment of Berlin Press on London Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The Nationalist press is greatly excited over the developments at the London conference. The Kreuz Zeitung doubts whether Germany will be able to bear the burden involved in the execution of the Dawes scheme so long as the freedom of the industrial regions is unrestored. It say that once again German statesmen are putting their names to a protocol which is tantamount to the abandonment of German prestige abroad and which, for the "illegally" occupied areas, means a prolongation of suffering.

The Bortenzeitung, which believes the prolongation of the Ruhr occupation will be exploited by the French as a means of pressure to extort concessions from Germany when time comes for the conclusion of commercial treaties, predicts difficulties in the Reichstag and probably in the French and British parliaments before a final settlement is reached.

Foreign Minister Stresemann's newspaper, Die Zeit, confesses that the news from London is no occasion for jubilation, although, it says, the concessions the German delegates obtained must not be underestimated. It thinks the German delegates achieved almost superhuman results, considering the fact that they have been confronted with difficulties seldom experienced by representatives of a big country at a similar conference.

But valuable as have been their achievements, Die Zeit believes they will be clouded by the bitter feelings that "the principal aim of our efforts and our most ardent desire, namely, immediate liberation of the Ruhr, could not be accomplished." The Catholic organ, Germania, writes in a similar vein.

AUTO HITS BOYS ON BICYCLE

John Stone, 14 years old, of 4329 North Second street, and Freeman Hogan, 15, of 89 West Ferry street, coasting down Angelica street on a bicycle, were struck by the automobile of Clem Hannibal, 3843 Labadie avenue, as they crossed Broadway.

Hannibal took the boys to the City Hospital where they were treated for cuts and bruises.

The La Follette-Wheeler Independent Progressive presidential ticket last night was indorsed by Local No. 242, Maintenance of Way International Union, meeting at Broadway and Geyer Avenue. The local has 500 members, mostly employes of the Terminal Railroad Association, and is the largest local of maintenance of way men in Missouri.

A committee of 25 members of the local was appointed to circulate petitions requesting the Secretary of State to place La Follette electors on the November ballot. The committee also will solicit funds for the La Follette organization here.

The St. Louis Beer Bottlers' Union, with 1400 members, the largest local union in St. Louis, adopted a resolution indorsing La Follette Friday night and voted to assess each member $1 for the local La Follette campaign fund. William M. Brandt, executive secretary in charge of State headquarters of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign, spoke at both meetings. All present at both meetings who vote in St. Louis signed the La Follette petitions.

As has been told, the German-American Citizens' Alliance, representing 20,000 members of St. Louis German societies, and Central Trades and Labor Union, representing 65,000 to 70,000 St. Louis trade unionists, also have indorsed La Follette. Negro leaders have predicted that La Follette will get votes of thousands of St. Louis negroes because of his trenchant denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan.

KID M'COY EXAMINED BY ALIENISTS IN HIS CELL

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—The McCoy-Mors case, which resulted in the killing of Theresa Mors, divorced wife of a wealthy antique dealer, Tuesday night, and the arrest of Kid McCoy, ex-pugilist, was without marked development today.

The district attorney sent three alienists into McCoy's cell to examine him mentally and physically. The former prize ring idol willingly bared his body to the trio but his mind and his heart remained covered under the seal of silence put on his lips by his attorneys.

The police revealed late last night that they had found a woman who heard Mrs. Mors' last words and the shot that cut her down, as well as the footsteps of two men running from the apartment where the body was found.

Mrs. Iva Martin, neighbor of the dead woman told of hearing Mrs. Mors cry: "Oh, my God, don't do that." Then there was the sound of a shot and the thud of a falling body. Two men, said Mrs. Martin, ran from the apartment. One of these she saw clearly in the moonlight, and he was not McCoy. The second man she could not describe.

The district attorney declares that the county grand jury will indict the ex-fighter on a murder charge early next week, when the case is laid before that body.

BODY BELIEVED TO BE MATTEOTTI'S FOUND NEAR ROME

Corpse Discovered in Culvert Definitely Identified as That of Slain Socialist Deputy, Press Asserts.

SMALL FILE STILL 'STICKING IN BREAST

Specially Treated Gold Tooth Said to Have Aided Victim's Friends in Identification.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 16.—Two months' search for the body of Giacomo Matteotti, who disappeared June 10, a few days before he was to make an anti-fascist speech in the Chamber of Deputies, apparently has borne fruit in the finding of a body this morning which is believed to be that of the Socialist deputy.

The body was discovered in a culvert near the village of Scrofano, a few miles from Rome, and while official announcement concerning the discovery still is lacking, and although the official Stefani Agency issued a communique tending to discredit the report, all the afternoon newspapers say flatly that Matteotti's body has been found and definitely identified.

Gold Tooth Aids Identification.

Identification, according to the newspapers, was made by persons well acquainted with the deputy who recognized a specially treated gold tooth and the shape of his head and high cheekbones. Members of Matteotti's family have not yet been given an opportunity to identify the body because the investigation of the police and judicial authorities is not yet complete.

The authorities are said to attach great significance to the finding yesterday of pieces of a coat of a texture similar to that worn by Matteotti the day he disappeared. This garment was discovered near the spot where the body was found today.

File Still Pierces Breast.

Although the body is in such condition as to lead medical specialists to the belief that death occurred about two months ago, a small file was found still sticking in the breast. Another bit of evidence pointing strongly toward definite identification is the fact that police dogs, which had been given the scent through the Deputy's discarded clothing, showed much excitement the moment they entered the vicinity where the body was found.

TWO RIOT CALLS AT ONCE FOR MINOR DISTURBANCES

Police Compelled to Subdue Negro Whose Auto Hit Several Parked Cars.

Two riot calls were received by the police almost simultaneously, about 1:30 p. m. yesterday, for minor disturbances.

A negro speeding south in Jefferson avenue in an automobile, struck several parked cars and was halted when he ran into another negro's wagon at Randolph street. Policemen and detectives were pursuing him. He put up a fight against arrest and had to be subdued with the butt end of a revolver. Many negroes gathered and some one turned in a riot call, which brought several car loads of officers. The machine was identified by W. L. Prack of the Ward Motor Co., as one stolen from 407 North Euclid avenue at 11 a. m. The negro, whom physicians said was suffering from alcoholism, said he was Garnett Thorman, 23 years old, of 2329 Scott avenue.

Meanwhile, two other negroes, Deputy Sheriff William Anderson of 3415 Hickory street and Gay Hudson of 3128 Chouteau avenue, a public mover, were getting into difficulties at Theresa avenue and Hickory street over $15 Hudson claimed Anderson owed him for moving. Anderson said two companions helped Hudson beat and disarm him. Hudson said he threw the deputy's revolver over a fence, but policemen arrested a negro running on Hickory street with the weapon.

FIRE TRUCKS COLLIDE, TWO MEN SLIGHTLY HURT

Hose and Salvage Vehicles Damaged When Returning From Small Fire.

A fireman and a member of the Salvage Corps were injured in a collision of fire apparatus at Third street and Clark avenue at 5:15 p. m. yesterday as they were returning from a small fire at First street and Clark avenue.

Fred Springmeyer, 2125 North Fourteenth street, who was riding on the rear of a truck from Salvage Corps No. 1, 1213 Pine street, suffered a wrenched back and body bruises when the truck was struck by the hose truck of Engine Co. No. 2, Third and Vine streets. William Stinger, fireman on the hose truck, was bruised. Damage to the trucks totaled $600.

U. S. INVESTIGATES IDENTITY OF GAY CABARET SHIP

Craft Selling Drinks Off 12-Mile Limit Believed to Be the Former German Liner Kronprinz Wilhelm

WAS SOLD IN MARCH TO BE SCRAPPED

Government Under Whose Flag It Is Registered Will Be Asked to Suppress Vessel's Activity.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Federal authorities tonight moved to learn the identity of the 17,000-ton "seagoing booze palace," which was reported today by the "Herald-Tribune" to be cruising off the 12-mile limit, dispensing preprohibition drinks to wealthy land lubbers.

Little stock was taken, however, in the newspaper reporter's evidence that the huge passenger ship on which he told of having spent a night in the company of gay and liberal drinkers—men and women—was the former North German Lloyd liner Friederich der Grosse.

The description of the vessel, her dimensions and equipment tallied more closely, said the authorities, with the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm, which was interred during the war, became an American transport, was renamed the Von Steuben and disappeared from official records last March 14 when the Shipping Board sold her at Baltimore for scrapping purposes.

Time for Overhauling.

Plenty of time has intervened since March for the undisclosed owners of the Von Steuben to have overhauled her and installed the glimmering bar, cabaret and hotel accommodations described by the news reporter, authorities pointed out.

At the same time they declared there was ample evidence that Friederich der Grosse, a smaller vessel was burned in the Pacific last year, while sailing under the post war name of "City of Honolulu."

Officials disagreed as to the extent of the Government's jurisdiction over the floating saloon or those wealthy visitors who, by power boat, rum runner or private yacht to partake of the mystery ship's conviviality. Capt. W. V. E. Jacobs, commander of the coast guard, New York district, announced he had started an investigation to establish the identity of the craft. Then, he said, the Government, under whose flag she is registered—the news reporter said the British flag—would be called upon to suppress the vessel's activities.

Although Capt. Jacobs took steps to learn the identity of the unknown craft abroad which the newspaper man got his thrills, he continued to disbelieve that such a craft actually had been entertaining guests off Fire Island for more than a month, as reported. Coast Guardsmen, patrolling from Cape Cod to Cape May, never had seen or encountered such a salt-water oasis, he declared.

The Captain advanced a theory that the vessel described was a member of the permanent Jersey coast rum fleet, and that its skipper, bored by dull times on the row, might have held occasional receptions off Fire Island for rum-running patrons, bootleggers and their guests. Such parties were becoming common among vessels of rum row, said Capt. Jacobs.

The news reporter's description, however, was not of a bootlegger's party. He told of engaging passage, with several other men with feminine companions, on a high-powered launch bound for the nameless ship whose huge bulk by day and maze of glimmering lights by night had mystified the residents of Long Island.

He told of boarding the craft, at last; of paying a $5 cover charge and $5 for a stateroom for the night; of being ushered into the presence of a jazz orchestra, a staff of busy bartenders; and a part of 60 revelers who drank and danced the night away.

His narrative included the description of a menu of beverages where the cheapest drink was Scotch at $1 and the most expensive was mint julep at $2.50, with wine at $20 and upward, by the bottle, and champagne to be had in abundance at fat-purse prices.

The characters of the story included a Captain in British uniform, who did not drink; a crew of natty dressed sailors with cockney accents; numerous and sundry wealthy men and women, old and young, of polished manners and democratic demeanor; a negro jazz orchestra; bar tenders, waiters, stewards and stokers.

Only one night was spent aboard the mystery ship by the Herald-Tribune reporter. He slept for two hours in his $5 stateroom. Then, he chronicled, he returned to land aboard the roaring speed boat that had brought him to the mystery ship, leaving his companions of the night behind to sleep away the effects of the festivities.

Four Women Meet at Grant Statue Every 10 Years, Bringing Their Offspring Along

An Odd Agreement, Signed 20 Years Ago by Young Employes of Skirt Firm, Brings Them Together Second Time.

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, usually calm and soldierly, looked anxiously down from his pedestal in City Hall square and said to himself: "The clock's striking two now. I wonder if they'll come."

A few minutes later a woman with two grown sons approached, stood near the monument and wondered the same thing. Not long had they to wait, however, for soon two other women, accompanied by sons and daughters, five in number and ranging in ages from seven to 19 years, walked toward the monument, one from Market street, the other from Twelfth street.

The three women, each of whom wore a bow of blue ribbon, hailed, met and embraced one another with the freedom of old friends, long separated, meeting again. The younger folk were made acquainted, for they had been but small children, or were not yet born, when in 1914, ten years ago on the same day and hour, a previous reunion was held at the Grant monument.

"Wonder why Mrs. Droesch doesn't come?" inquired one of the matrons anxiously. For an hour they waited, while eager questions were asked and confidences exchanged on husbands, children, bobbed hair, clothes and household affairs.

Finally it was suggested they try to find Mrs. Droesch, one of the three matrons thinking she knew where the missing member lived. As they left, Gen. Grant, again assuming his soldierly bearing, sighed and to himself said: "Well, I guess I'll have to wait another 10 years now, before I learn the outcome of this."

Second Decennial Reunion.

This meeting at Grant's Statue, which took place at 2 p. m. on the second day of this month, was the second decennial reunion growing out of an unusual agreement drawn up and signed by four St. Louis girls in 1904. The fourth member was found the same afternoon, not having forgotten the agreement, but being unable to leave the house.

Mollie Peters, Lulu Starck, Nelda Weber and Agnes Herr, the oldest of whom was 20, were chums employed at the Max Shulz Skirt Co., at 1123 Washington avenue, not now existing.

It was the year of the World's Fair. Many strange people and new sights were to be seen. The life of the city was quickened. This spirit touched the four girls, suggesting the possibility of experiencing adventure and romance, and they were curious to know what the enlivened city would bring to each one.

Signed Written Agreement.

"I wonder where we will all be 10 years from today," remarked Miss Weber to her friends while at lunch one day. After a few minutes of pleasant conjecture it was suggested that a reunion be held 10 years later. Accordingly, an agreement was written, witnessed by friends, and signed by the girls. Stamp pictures of the principals were pasted on the pacts, each signer retaining a copy. A verbal agreement was likewise made whereby each member was to wear a bow of blue ribbon at the proposed reunion in order to make recognition unmistakable. The contract reads as follows:

St. Louis,
March 1, 1904.

We, the undersigned agree to meet at the City Hall, Grant statue, Aug. 1, 1914, at 2 o'clock. We also agree to bring children with us, or if none, bring dogs or cats.

MOLLIE PETERS,
LULU STARCK,
NELDA WEBER,
AGNES HERR.

The cat and dog clause was included, of course, for any signer who at the end of 10 years might be a spinster.

Shortly after the agreement was signed the girls became separated, and although they have lived in St. Louis most of the following years, they have not corresponded; and except for chance meetings, where conversation was purposely restrained to casual matters, they have not met. "It would have spoiled the reunions if we had nothing new to talk about," explained one.

"Perhaps the cat and dog clause hastened matters, but whatever promise of adventure and romance there was, it took form for all of us in marriage before the first reunion," said Mrs. Nelda Weber Rudolph, yesterday. Mrs. Rudolph, who married in 1904, lives at 4724 Terrace avenue, and has two children, Dorothy and William Jr., 19 and 14 years old, respectively.

"The next year Mollie Peters became Mrs. Harry Droege, now living at 1046 Montgomery street. She has three children, Dorothy, Harriett and Bennett, 17, 12 and 7 years old.

"Lulu Starck, too, within a year after the agreement, married William Schmidt, lives now at 4921 Lisette avenue, and has two sons, Roland and Lester, 18 and 15 years old.

"In 1908 Agnes Herr married Frank Droesch. She lives at 1918 De Soto avenue and has three children, Rosalie, Francis and Dolores, 14, 11 and 3 years old.

"Marriage Big Adventure."

"And I'm sure we're all glad the way it turned out. Our marriage was our big adventure. The things we used to dream about are not always the things we want. We have our homes and our children. They're real."

Extracts from a newspaper clipping describing the 1914 reunion, read:

"The City Hall cat, after inspecting the group gathered about the Grant Monument yesterday for a reunion, quietly departed elsewhere. That was no place for her. Each of the four women present had brought with her two children. The stipulation in the contract for a dog or cat, if there were no children, passed unheeded. . . . The women have agreed to meet again in 1924, the place to be the same."

The day after locating Mrs. Droesch, this year, the four girlhood chums, with their children, held a reunion picnic at Forest Park, where it was agreed to assemble again at Grant's statue in 1934, "to talk over new times." Grandchildren, if any, must be brought along.

'NOBODY TOO BIG' FOR SCHNEIDERS' NOTE SALESMEN

the Sunlight Chemical Co., 452 North Boyle avenue, cosmetic distributers. Smith was a banker at Coffeen and Ramsey, Ill., when he bought an interest in, and became trustee of, the Tyrola Phonograph Co. Under his trusteeship, Schneiders asserts, $50,000 in trustee's certificates were floated.

St. Louisans' Losses.

Smith's loss is reported to be $34,000. Another St. Louisan Charles Lovekamp, invested $18,000, and a resident of Portage des Sioux let go of a similar amount. Ernest Noennig, the original complainant to the Circuit Attorney, lost only $2500, but he had no more. Even Austin Peck claims Schneiders is indebted to him.

"When I was paroled on account of having tuberculosis in 1921, I spent 15 months on my father's farm near Poplar Bluff and then went on the road selling toilet articles," Peck said yesterday. "For three months, from January to April, 1923, I was a salesman for Schneiders. When I quit he owed me about $300 in commissions.

'I never had an interest in the business and got only my commissions—20 per cent of what I sold. My brother, Robert, sold agency contracts for Schneiders and was not otherwise interested in the company."

The Pecks became acquainted with Schneiders while they were stock brokers. Later Edgar Schneiders helped get bail for Robert Peck.

"Outside" Phonographs.

Those who bought contracts for Tyrolas were under the impression the National Distributing & Sales Co. had its own factory. However, the phonographs were bought "outside," the Universal Cabinet and Phonograph Co., Ninth and Monroe streets, supplying some. When Schneiders attempted to capitalize the radio popularity by combining a radio set and a phonograph in one console cabinet, he purchased the sets from the Security Radio and Electric Co., 2209 South Thirty-ninth street.

Schneiders is a native of Switzerland, hence the Tyrolean names. In 1914, after he had been divorced, he eloped to Edwardsville with Miss Stella Wasche and was married. He was then a pawnbroker. He is a rapid and persuasive talker, despite a foreign accent, and is tall, thin and stoop-shouldered. His dress, like the automobile and house, is impressive.

A hearing on Niennig's application for warrants against Schneiders is to be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon before Assistant Circuit Attorney Johnson.

FEDERAL OBSERVERS AT GASOLINE INQUIRY

Attorney-General Stone Watching Missouri Hearing in Interest of Anti-Trust Action.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 16.—Representatives of United States Attorney General Sotne, who last June filed anti-trust suits in Federal Court at Chicago against more than 50 of the principal oil companies operating in the country, will be here as observers when the State's gasoline price inquiry is resumed Wednesday. Five of the principal officers of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana are among the witnesses summoned for the hearing. The Federal Department of Justice has been collecting evidence for more than a year concerning practices of the oil companies. Evidence developed in the hearings here may be utilized in the Government's anti-trust suits, it is said.

In the suits filed by the Government, Attorney General Stone sought an injunction to restrain the more than 50 companies from alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust act. He charged the companies with an illegal combination to control the production of gasoline by pooling asserted patent rights. The principal defendants named were the Standard companies of Indiana and New Jersey, the Standard Development Co., the Texas Co. and the Gasoline Products Co.

Purpose of State Inquiry.

The Missouri inquiry was instituted by State Attorney General Barrett, under a provision of the State anti-trust law, to determine whether grounds existed for filing anti-trust proceedings against the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and possibly other oil companies operating in Missouri.

Witnesses at hearings this week testified that the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana dominated the Missouri field and other dealers were afraid to undersell it for fear of price-cutting reprisals, and that in several localities retail dealers determined their prices by calling the Standard representative on the telephone, sometimes daily. Several dealers testified of alleged efforts by competitors to throttle price cuts, and one Kansas City independent dealer asserted jobbers and wholesalers had refused to sell gasoline to him after he cut prices.

While Barrett has not disclosed his plans for the hearings next week, it is understood the testimony to be taken will bear upon the manner in which the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana became the dominating influence in the Missouri field, and why other Standard companies, which operate in other zones and are said to be independent of each other, do not invade the Missouri field. It is understood he will seek to show that alleged agreements have been made between the major companies which give the Standard of Indiana a controlling position in Missouri.

Certain Records Called For.

Barrett has called on the Standard company to produce certain records and contracts Wednesday. The company officers he subpenaed, all of Chicago, are Dr. William Burton, president, and inventor of the Burton "cracking" process for the recovery of gasoline from crude oil; Alan Jackson, vice president, in charge of sales; Edward Seubert, vice president, secretary and treasurer; R. E. Clark, general auditor, and Edward Bogardus, assistant to the vice president in charge of sales.

Company Represented.

Nearly a dozen representatives of the Standard Company were present at the hearings this week. Company attorneys entered their appearance but did not cross-examine witnesses, although offered an opportunity by the State to conduct cross-examinations.

After testimony had been presented to show the Standard dominated the Missouri field, John D. Clark of Chicago, vice president and a director of the Standard of Indiana, took the stand at his own request and made a brief statement on behalf of the company.

Clark stated that the company manufactured virtually all the gasoline it sold in this territory and that the prices were fixed at the Chicago office of the company for the 10 States in which it operates. This price is based on the cost of production, he asserted, and varies only with changes in the price of crude oil. Reductions below the fixed price are made in local territories when necessary to meet competition, Clark said, but such a reduction must be authorized from the Chicago office.

PRESIDENT HAS QUIET DAY WITH FATHER

Helps Put Up Porch Swing—Flowers Put on Family Grave.

By the Associated Press.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 16.—In his boyhood home here, President Coolidge started his vacation today again with his father and in the company only of members of his family.

Laying aside Government cares and political problems, at least so far as physical actualities were concerned, Mr. Coolidge spent the first day of his visit here as he had planned—resting.

With Mrs. Coolidge and son, John, he drove here early this morning from Ludlow, the nearest point a railroad could carry the party, arriving just in time for breakfast with the President's father. The family stopped off on the way here at the cemetery just ouside the town, where a month ago Calvin Jr. was buried and where als the President's mother and sister are buried.

Flowers Placed on Graves.

Another visit to the cemetery about noon, when flowers were placed on the graves, was their only other trip from the homestead. Later in the morning the President made a brief inspection of the farm yard in the rear of the house. It stretches on into the wooded slopes of the foothills which overlook the premises and which border both sides of the hamlet.

This afternoon Mr. Coolidge assisted his father in erecting a swing on the small front porch and he spent much of the remainder of the afternoon resting in it. Mrs. Coolidge sat on the front steps for a while as the President's father picked weeds from the lawn. With Mrs. Coolidge, the President took a short stroll about dusk. Early tonight the lights from the lamps in the little white painted home were blown out.

From early this morning tourists stopped at the lane leading from Plymouth's other road and on which is the Coolidge home, but it was shut off to visitors, for the first time, and except for a few neighbors Mr. Coolidge received no one.

Above the general store just across the road from the Coolidge house, offices were set up and C. Bascom Slemp, the President's secretary, arranged to carry on such business as is necessary during the vacation period, but Mr. Coolidge did not appear there.

Every Summer but Three at Home.

John Coolidge, the President's father, welcomed the family on their arrival at the home. He clasped the hand of each as they left the automobile and kissed each member. Mr. Coolidge has welcomed his son home every summer but three since he left as a boy.

"The three times he missed," the father reminiscenced today, "were just after he started law practice. He pretended to have too much business then, but I suspect he didn't have the money to get here."

Last vacation Mr. Coolidge administered the oath of President to his son in the home here.

After getting the President and Mrs. Coolidge settled, the father came down to the general store and busied himself directing newspaper men and photographers who had accompanied the party from Washington. There are few houses and almost all of those who came with the President made headquarters in some of the nearby cities.

Tomorrow afternoon, in the Union Church, directly across the road from the house, the President plans to attend services. Just next to the church and in a house attached to the general store, Mr. Coolidge was born. Nearby, on the side of one of the foothills bordering the Green Mountains, the President's father and his father were born.

NELSON AND BAKER FRIENDS RESENT INSURANCE TALK

Indignant Over Intimations That Reciprocal Interests Aided Candidates in Primary.

BARBEE'S NAME ADDS TO THE AGITATION

Old Line Companies Perturbed Over Situation They Fear in Case of Bunceton Man's Election.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 16.—Representatives of reciprocal insurance companies of Kansas City and partisans of Dr. Arthur W. Nelson of Bunceton, Democrat, and Sam A. Baker of Jefferson City, Republican, the nominees for the governorship of Missouri, today indignantly resented intimation that the reciprocal interests had aided in nominating Nelson and Baker.

Intimations of reciprocal political activity in the recent primary, which had been scattered widely by the friends of certain candidates for gubernatorial nominations, who were defeated, were repeated more strongly yesterday. The reason lay in the public announcement by Dr. Nelson that he intended to ask the new Democratic State Committee, members of which soon will be chosen, to designate Joshua Barbee of Kansas City as its chairman.

Barbee, who was headquarters manager at Jefferson City for Nelson during the primary campaign, is an attorney, who formerly was Deputy Superintendent of the State Insurance Department and who now is associated in the practice of law here with Charles M. Howell, attorney for the American Reciprocal Insurance Association.

Howell and Walter Chorn, another member of the Howell firm, who is a former State Superintendent of Insurance, like Barbee, were strong supporters of Nelson in the primary campaign.

Old Line Agents Perturbed.

Representatives of what in insurance language are known as the "old line" companies are somewhat perturbed over the probable election by the Democratic State Committee of Barbee as its chairman, fearing that, if Nelson is elected, Barbee, Howell, Chorn and other Democrats closely allied with the reciprocal interests would have a powerful voice at Nelson's ear when the time arrives to appoint a Superintendent of the State Department of Insurance to succeed Ben C. Hyde, Republican, the incumbent. The insurance superintendency changes with each shift of administration at Jefferson City.

The superintendency of the Missouri department is a powerful factor in the fight between "old line" and reciprocal companies. Twelve of the more powerful reciprocals are domiciled in Kansas City, while most of the larger old line companies have headquarters in the East. Many of the Eastern States are not overly friendly toward the reciprocals.

Missouri has a retaliatory statute and other weapons in the hands of her superintendent of insurance which can be used to handicap and sometimes punish companies whose headquarters are in States which appear to discriminate against Missouri companies.

If the head of the Missouri department is friendly to the old line companies the reciprocals are declared to get little attention in their fights to break into the Eastern States where the old line companies are strongly intrenched. If he is friendly to the reciprocals they get this aid.

In the recent primary fight, so far as can be ascertained, agents of the old line companies took little hand in the Democratic contest. The last issue of the National Underwriter before the primary, printed on July 31 (the primary was on Aug. 5), urged in a story under a St. Louis date line that Floyd E. Jacobs of Kansas City be supported by those friendly to old line companies because of the impressive reciprocal backing them alleged as being given to Nelson and because the race was regarded as between Nelson and Jacobs. Little evidence of active help for Jacobs extended from insurance sources, however, has been found.

Barbee and Howell.

Barbee declared that his entire connection with Nelson's campaign had been prompted through personal friendship of many years' standing, Barbee having come originally from Saline County, which adjoins Nelson's home county of Cooper.

"The reciprocal companies have had nothing to do with Dr. Nelson's campaign," said Barbee. "Dr. Nelson nor I nor anyone else with authority to speak for him has made any promises with regard to the appointment of a superintendent of insurance or any other office, so fas as I know, and I think I know. Not a cent of reciprocal money went into his campaign."

Howell, when asked about the same matters, said he had supported Nelson partly on personal grounds, and partly because the Pendergast faction of Kansas City Democrats, with which he is friendly, had done so. He said in a written statement:

"I represent as counsel a number of Reciprocal Insurance Associations and Mutual Insurance companies. These organizations are purely co-operative in character and insure their members against loss by fire and casualty on practically a cost basis. The members themselves really constitute the organizations and, therefore, it is practically impossible for them to make contributions in political campaigns.

"So far as I know, and I think I am fully advised, none of these organizations has directly or indirectly made any contributions to the campaign funds of any candidate in either party during the primary campaign which closed August 5."

It will be recalled that before a hearing of the Senate Insurance Committee, at Jefferson City, during the regular legislative session of 1921, former Supreme Judge John Kennish, now dead, charged that reciprocal interests had aided gubernatorial aspirants on both sides during the campaign of 1920.

Supt. Hyde, appointed by his brother, the Governor, is a close friend of Howell and of Barbee, who, though appointed by Gov. Gardner, was retained as chief deputy by Hyde for more than a year. Ben Hyde, by utilizing the Missouri retaliatory statute in behalf of the Missouri reciprocals in several cases, and by making determined efforts to reduce insurance rates in this State, has become intensely unpopular with the old line companies.

Hydes Supported Baker.

Both of the Hydes vigorously supported Baker for the Republican nomination for the governorship in the recent primary, and the National Underwriter, in the same article previously referred to, declared that friends of the old line companies in Missouri should support Victor J. Miller of St. Louis, as it was expected that Baker, if elected, doubtless would carry out the insurance policies of the present administration.

Some of the old line insurance men here who are Republicans were supporting Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd, however, and it is not known whether any insurance men gave Miller substantial aid.

"We couldn't make our crowd see what the reciprocals were doing," said one old line insurance man who wouldn't permit use of his name, "so we couldn't get them to do much."

Ben Hyde said he thought it was extremely unlikely that the Baker campaign had received any reciprocal money.

"Far as I could find out, they didn't get much from any source," said he. "We didn't even have money for poll workers here."

Efforts to reach Nelson, who was at St. Joseph today, and Baker for personal statements were ineffectual. Baker so far has kept his own counsel on his choice for the State chairmanship in his party.

COL. C. A. SINCLAIR DIES AFTER OPERATION

Well Known Drillmaster Expires at 65—Was With First Regiment 25 Years.

Col. Clarence A. Sinclair, for 25 years connected with the First Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, and for many years drillmaster in various Masonic orders, of which he was a thirty-third degree member, died at 6:15 o'clock last night, at Missouri Baptist Sanitarium. He was 65 years old.

Col. Sinclair submitted to an operation two weeks ago for intestinal complications. He rallied after the operation, but failed to recover and yesterday noon he became unconscious. His death followed a few months after that of his wife, which occurred April 12, after several weeks' illness from sleeping sickness, which presumably resulted from an attack of influenza.

Born and educated in St. Louis, Col. Sinclair became engaged in the paint business with his father, and at the time of his death was president-treasurer of the Sinclair Paint Co. From 1899 to 1903 he was Colonel of the old First Regiment. He extended his interest in military affairs to the functions of drillmaster in the Masonic fraternity, and was patrol captain in both the Shrine and Scottish Rite.

Col. Sinclair was a past potentate of Moolah Temple and a past commander, Knights Templar, and was captain-general of St. Aldemar Commandery. He was a member of Mount Moriah Lodge, Bellefontaine Chapter, and was a vice president of the new Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children.

Surviving him is a nephew, Walter E. Bamber, with whom he was associated in business. He resided at 5654 Bartmer avenue. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

BOTTLING PLANT IS HELD UP

Four Men Get $86 From Driver of the Elk Co.

Four young men, two armed and masked, held up Esia Seltzer, treasurer, and Joseph Tenge, a driver, of the Elk Bottling Co., 1418 North Garrison avenue, at 6:15 p. m. yesterday, taking $86.95 in collections from Tenge. The robbers entered the place from an alley, forced the two men to the wall, searched both, finding nothing on Seltzer, and escaped by the alley, running toward Cass avenue.

One of the robbers forced the manager, George Smith, of 6420 Manchester avenue, and the butcher, Adelbert Beleuge, to stand in line with five other persons in the store, two of whom were children, while the other robber emptied the money receptacles. The pair fled in a Ford touring car.

WHOLE SPANISH LINE MENACED BY MOORS

King Alfonso Trying to Buy Peace, Say Reports to Paris.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Menaced by the Riff tribes along the whole line in Morocco, the Spanish army is in a critical position, according to reports reaching Paris, which add that King Alfonso has sent Echevarietta to buy peace. Echevarietta, a Bilboa millionaire ship owner, alone has been able to negotiate with Abdul Krim, having brought about an exchange of prisoners two years ago.

Although the Spanish have six times as many soldiers as the Riffians, they have been unable to stop the Riff attacks. The Spanish casualties are reported to have been fewer than a score, but the Spanish army is said to have little liking for continuing the fight. The Spanish General Aizpuru may meet the same fate as that of Gen. Berenguer, who recently was convicted on the charge of being responsible for the Moroccan debacle of 1921.

The Spanish outpost Hartan, on the right bank of the River Lau, is surrounded. Taguesit, on the left bank, now is menaced. At Tetuan the troops, which had been hurriedly sent, are barely able to keep the Riff tribes in check.

The tribes are reported to be assembling, as if for a big offensive, and the fate of the Spanish directorate is believed to depend on whether it can avoid a disaster.

Police Tangle Up to Jury.

MARION, Ill., Aug. 16.—The disposition of Herrin's two police forces rested today in the hands of a jury in the county court in which the trial of John Ford, former chief of police of Herrin, and Harold Crain, former assistant chief. Both had been appointed to the police force by Mayor C. E. Anderson for a term of 30 days. On expiration of this period they failed to get the reappointment, but declined to surrender their offices, and Mayor Anderson instituted the criminal proceeding after filing a suit of replevin to recover the insignia and property of the police department from the two defendants.

STATE FAIR OPENS WITH PARADE BY 'KATY' EMPLOYES

Eight Thousand Persons, Including St. Louis Mayor, Present; Racing Starts Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 16.—Missouri's twenty-fourth annual State fair opened today with an attendance of more than 8000. It was Katy Day and employes of the M.-K.-T. Railway, from numerous division points and elsewhere north from Parsons, Kan., thronged the grounds after staging a parade through the business district. Two special trains from Parsons brought in 1500 visitors.

The exhibits in all departments are large. Starting Monday, racing and other features will be added, with night horse shows. Among visitors to the exposition today was Mayor Henry W. Kiel of St. Louis.

SUPERIOR STOVES & RANGES BRIDGE BEACH & CO. SAINT LOUIS

For nearly 90 years Bridge-Beach has built stoves, ranges and heating appliances. This long experience, and the ability of an old established organization combine to make the Bridge-Beach Furnace the outstanding heating system of today. To this add a low first cost and small upkeep cost and you have the reasons for Bridge-Beach popularity.

BRIDGE-BEACH
Warm Air Furnaces

What do you know about heating? Do you realize that dry, dead oppressive air in a home causes even hardy house plants to wither and die? Have you ever thought that this kind of air in your home is harmful to you and your family just as it is to plants?

Bridge-Beach means lots of live, moist, healthful heat—always. A Bridge-Beach Furnace heats the air to the proper temperature, automatically adds just the right amount of moisture and then circulates it throughout your home.

Be sure—be safe! Insist on Bridge-Beach for healthful heat. Reduce the chances of nose irritations, colds, sore throats, influenza, grippe and other ailments that start with improper heating.

The Bridge-Beach fire door has an inside lining with a 2-in. air-entrance duct between it and the outside. Cold air entering the supplementary draft door is heated before it passes into the combustion chamber—it mixes freely with the hydro-carbon gases and aids combustion. Chiefly valuable when burning soft coal, especially after a fresh charge is added. Reduces smoke nuisance.

Before you buy any furnace, investigate the Bridge-Beach. Send for illustrated book, "Bridge-Beach Furnaces." Write, or phone Colfax 300—ask for Furnace Department.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN SCHOOL TO BE HELD HERE FOR WOMEN

Republican Representatives of National Committee to Hold Three-Day Session.

Training of women political campaign speakers is one course of the political campaign school to be held here Sept. 15, 16 and 17 by the Republican Woman's Club, under supervision of Mrs. William Wolff Smith of Washington, D. C., connected with the Republican National Committee.

The announced speakers for the school include Gov. Hyde, Sam A. Baker, Republican nominee for Governor; Congressman Cleveland A. Newton, former Gov. Martin G. Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania and State Superintendent of Schools Francis G. Blair of Illinois. The talks will include discussion of many phases of political work and government. An hour and a half a day will be devoted to preliminary practice in speaking.

A similar school will be conducted at Kansas City Sept. 18, 19 and 20.

BODY OF YOUNG WOMAN FOUND UNDER A BRIDGE IDENTIFIED

South Dakota Rancher's Daughter Left Home in Auto Accompanied by Young Man.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Aug. 16.—Part of the mystery surrounding the finding last Wednesday of the body of a young woman under a highway bridge near Bedford, Ia., was solved last night when she was identified by Elmer McKinney, a Herrick, S. D., rancher, as his daughter, Lillian, 22 years old.

There were bruises on the girl's body, but how she died remained a mystery. Dispatches from Bedford have quoted the coroner as saying the bruises did not indicate blows of sufficient strength to have caused death. One theory advanced was that poison may have caused death. Mr. McKinney said his daughter left home Aug. 5 in an automobile, accompanied by Carl Hough, 22, of St. Charles, S. D., who is being sought.

"BARREL ROLLING" IS CONDEMNED BY RED CROSS EXPERTS

As Many Drowning Cases Lost That Way as Saved; Easier Method Shown.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Barrel rolling as a method of freeing the lungs of water to revive persons taken unconscious from the water, was condemned as "most hazardous" today by experts of the Red Cross life saving service at headquarters of the organization.

"It is to nearly drowned persons," it was said, "almost as certain in dealing death as a dose of corrosive poison is to a determined suicide. Probably more lives have been sacrificed during the minutes lost in searching for a barrel than were preserved through use of the barrel."

The simplicity of the prone pressure method of resuscitation, the experts declared, has "outlawed" the barrel rolling and has demonstrated how much more effective and easier is the former expedient.

In a statement prompted by the recent death of a youth here when after 14 minutes in the water he was rolled on a barrel, the Red Cross said:

'Forget the barrel; waste no time Lay the victim on his stomach; extend one arm directly over the head; bend the other arm at the elbow and rest his cheek on the hand to keep nose and mouth off the ground. Kneel facing forward, straddling his legs. Place palms of hands on each side of back, just above belt line. With arms straight, lean gradually forward, pressing downward and forward and counting slowly, 1, 2, 3. Swing your body back, counting slowly four, five. Straighten arms and repeat pressure. Keep up work steadily until breathing begins. Unless a doctor takes charge, remove victim well covered on a stretcher to a hospital or to his home. Don't get discouraged; stick to it for two, or even three hours if necessary."

Contributions to the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund amounted to $208.98 last week, bringing the fund to a total of $2017.20.

A new high mark for returns from an amateur show this season was set by The Quatrelles, a girls' club, who gave a show at 5748 McPherson avenue Aug. 9 and earned $75.55. The previous high mark was set by children at 3703 Utah place who earned $53 with an entertainment. The members of the Quatrelles include: Beatrice Fischlowitz, Viola Hunter, Violet Leonard, Isabelle Levy, Theresa Mayer, Roberta Robertson, Ruth Solomon and Ursula Trask. Many others helped to make the show and carnival a success, among them were: Marie Cicardi, Aaron Fischlowitz, Alice Fischlowitz, Gladys Hunter, Bernard Kornblum, Jean and Harvey Guenther, Paula Leonard, Rosalie Solomon, Herbert Trask and Jack Trask.

Neighborhood children gave a show at 2118 Mullanphy street July 31 under the direction of Miss Beatrice Quinn and added $40 to the Ice Fund. This is the second year Miss Quinn has directed an Ice Fund shew and her assistants were: David Freelander, Lester Kiel, Rose Silverman, Ethel Goldstine, Adele Kottler, Barbara Kelfer, Mildred Blaker, Lawler Drone, Ben Silverman, Philip Silverman, Gilbert Smith, Bryant Walsh, Doris Springer, Louise Shaw, Maxine Shaw, Lucille Blaker, Oscar Kottler, Helen Stern, Clark Hopgood and David Zickchick.

Children Aid Fund.

An Ice Fund show at 2225 Alberta street on Aug. 7 netted $25 A sale of refreshments followed the performance. Music was furnished by Miss Leona Flad and Miss Adele Menne, and the costumes for the caste were made by Miss Helen Brusselback. The actors were: Bernadine Becker, Mildred Kaelin, Helen Menne, Harriet Meyers, Louise Schmaltz, Irene Kaelin and Rose Mary Menne.

Children residing in the 4300 block of De Tonty street, gave an entertainment for the Ice Fund on Aug. 8 and earned $23.13. Those who took part were: Wilma and Emery Nieman, Sidney and Paxton Ackerman, Florence and Beatrice Baskin, Eleanor Jean Wright, Victoria Hernan, Madeline and Edward Raithel, Helen and Mary Flood, Sarah Berg and Ruth Benjamin.

Ten children gave a show at 3633 Tennessee avenue and earned $14 for the babies' fund. Those who helped make the affair a success were; Katherine and Beulah Heier, Marcella Kotte, Robert Lickert, Helen and Nora Lange, Frank Maybaum, Lorine Rucker, Marian Stone and Francis Stone.

Other Benefit Shows.

An entertainment at 6809 Magnolia avenue earned $6.55 for the Ice Fund. The workers were: Margaret Parker, Gertrude Rascher, Hassel Hale, Lillian Hale, Virginia Cusack, Dorothy Greenwall, Ruth Parker and Paschel Riddle.

Children residing at 815 Leland avenue, University City, sold novelties and realized $4 for the fund. Their names follow: Roslynd Maizner, Henrietta Maizner, Thekla Stern and Jean Stern.

A show was given at the residence of Mrs. William Lewry, 3128 Geyer avenue, Aug. 12, by four boy friends of the babies, and $1.75 was raised and sent to the fund.

Five direct cash donations were included in last week's additions to the fund. Thomas Stanion, 506 Olive stret, sent $10; $4 came from "friends;" $2 was sent by Grandma A. G.; $2 was received from 4307 Obear, and $1 from Mrs. E. M. B.

ROLLS OUT NEW 'CARTWHEELS'

U. S. Treasury Distributes More Silver Dollars in East.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The silver dollar, or "cart wheel," as it is frequently called, will soon be more generally in use in the Eastern states, the United States Treasury Department having begun a program of distribution today by placing one such coin in the pay envelope of each of several thousand Government employes. The coin has been rare in the East.

It has been estimated that the upkeep of paper money costs the Government about three percent of its total face value, while the maintenance of silver dollars cost practically nothing. There are about 709,000,000 "care wheels" available, of which about 440,000,000 now are required by law to be held in the Treasury against silver certificates and notes outstanding.

ANALYZING SEIZED BEER

An analysis of three gallons of beer, seized Friday at the roadhouse of Marie Hirt, Fifty-first street and Lake Drive, East St. Louis, is being made by Federal authorities to determine whether it exceeds the alcoholic content permitted by law. Mrs. Hirt was not arrested, having promised to appear and give bond if the beer proves intoxicating.

Prohibition agents, after making a futile search of the place, visited the yard in the rear. Several kegs which they examined in the yard were empty, but one was found to contain the beer. A temporary injunction has been granted against the roadhouse.

HEDGLEIGH PARK DEVELOPING FAST

Education Board Plans to Build High School and Stadium on Tract.

The rapid development of Hedgleigh Park at Natural Bridge and Union avenues, under the management of Bush-Burns Realty Co. has been a source of surprise to real estate operators. Last April this property was a brick yard of 50 acres, operated by the Hydraulic Press Brick Co. Now it is fully graded, a complete sewer system has been installed, water and gas mains laid, curbs are set, the streets are being paved with concrete, and buildings are in course of erection. The Fruin-Colnon Contracting Co. has charge of all construction work.

The Board of Education has acquired a part of this ground, fronting 1800 feet on the west side of Kingshighway and extending to Norwood avenue on the west, a distance of 580 feet. It is planning to erect a new high school and a stadium for the use of all public schools.

More than 3000 feet has been sold.

A. B. CHRISTOPHER COMPANY MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

The A. B. Christopher Co. has moved to new quarters at 806 Chestnut street, room 203, from 1028 Hodiamont avenue. Associated with the firm are J. R. Christopher, H. M. Goode, James B. Mustain, V. B. Black, Paul Terry and A. Henrichs.

The following sales have been announced:

1224-26 South Seventh street, for Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rudolph, to a client; 1314 St. Ange street, nine-room residence for Mrs. Singleton to a client; 1511 Semple avenue for A. T. Dickens to a client; 3430 Walnut street for Margaret Walsh to a client; 6641 Chamberlain for Miss Francis L. Behrens to a client; 2823 Bernard avenue for Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Lauber to a client; 3201 Salena avenue, for George Pollard to a client; 2624-26 Whittier street for Joseph Mouton to a client; 5110 Bulwer avenue, for Carl Stifel to a client; 5112 Bulwer avenue, for Carl Stifel to a client.

LARGE VACANT TRACT TO BE BUILT UP WITH FLATS

The Granite Mortgage Co. has purchased from Simon Van Raalte a tract of vacant ground with a frontage of about 3000 feet, situated about 3500 north, between Blair and Florissant, fronting on Destrehan, Angelrodt, Agnes, Herder, Branch, Florissant, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. This property was a part of the Stifel Estate.

The new owners intend to build single and double flats as this is considered a desirable renting neighborhood, being surrounded with industrial plants and convenient to four car lines.

The deal was negotiated by the interested parties without the aid of any real estate firm. Several builders are now negotiating with the new owners for the building of flats.

LACLEDE ANNEX HOTEL LEASE IS PURCHASED

James and Francis O'Brien have bought the lease and furnishings of the Laclede Annex Hotel at the northwest corner of Broadway and Chestnut streets.

F. D. Michael, proprietor of the Laclede Hotel, was the seller.

About six years ago Michael acquired a 20-year lease of what was then known as the Houser Building converting it for hotel purposes at a cost of $200,000. It has since been operated as the Laclede Annex Hotel, with notable success.

The new owners operate the Woodbine Hotel. The transaction was handled by Daly & McCabe.

LARGE WESTMORELAND PLACE HOME IS SOLD BY TERRY

The house at 44 Westmoreland place has been sold to a client of Albert T. Terry & Co. It contains a reception hall, living-room, dining-room, sun parlor, den, kitchen, butler's pantry and maids' dining-room on the first floor; five bedrooms and three baths for guests on the second floor with bedrooms and bath for servants in a separate wing, and four bedrooms and two baths on the third floor. The ground has a 100-ft. frontage with a side driveway, brick garage, shade trees and shrubs. The new owner will use it as his future home.

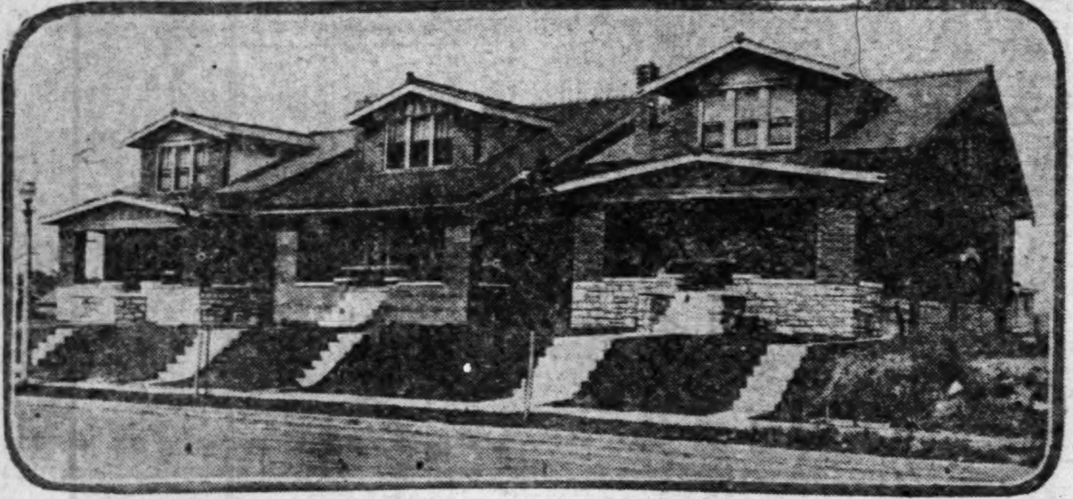
Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Kansas City. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for twenty-six years and in more than nine thousand cases. The book is sent postpaid free to persons afflicted with Piles or other rectal troubles who clip this item and mail it with name and address to Dr. McCleary, 500 Parkview Sanitarium, Kansas City, Mo.

Bungalows Being Erected on South Side



Grand Dover Park of Holly Hills is a center of notable building activity operations in this addition embracing bungalows, flats and apartments. These building operations are being financed by the Federer Realty Co., which placed the addition on the market.

August Stein has just completed several eight and nine-room bungalows of attractive design and arrangement in this area and has four others of similar design under construction. A photograph of the completed buildings are shown in this connection.

STOCKE RESIDENCE TO BE A FEATURE OF SUBDIVISION

The residence being erected for Christian Stocke, president of the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co., on Cecil avenue in Skinker Heights, will be one of the architectural features of this subdivision.

The building will be two stories and a basement in the Italian style with exterior walls of hollow tile, stuccoed with a stone base. The entrance will be of carved Bedford stone. The roof will be of red tile. A garage will be in the basement, accessible by a drive at the west.

The first story will comprise living, dining, breakfast and sun rooms, kitchen, pantry and enclosed porch. The entrance hall will be elliptical with a winding circular stair to the second floor.

The second story will comprise four master bedrooms with dressing rooms and baths, a sleeping porch and two maids' rooms and bath, the latter being separate from the remainder of the house and reached by an independent stair. In the attic will be a store room.

The living-room and sunroom will be in Italian detail, while the dining room will be in the Adam period.

The residence will be heated by oil and equipped with an incinerator and automatic icing equipment.

The ground in the rear is to be laid out as a formal garden. The residence is to be completed in February, 1925.

$5800 FRAUD CHARGED AGAINST BROTHERS

Man Alleges He Paid for Movie Theater Stock That Was Pledged for Loan.

Warrants charging that they obtained $5800 under false pretenses were issued yesterday against Hyman Komm of 1314 Shawmut place and his brother, Sam, of 5083 Kensington avenue, on complaint of Abraham Mizes, 1345 Montclair avenue, who told the Prosecuting Attorney's office that they had sold him one-sixth interest in two Franklin avenue motion picture theaters.

Mizes complained that the stock already had been pledged by the Komm brothers for loans and further that they had failed to deliver to him the "fat dividends" he was promised or the $50 a week salary which was part of the alleged deal.

Mizes asserted that Hyman Komm and his brother had painted alluring pictures of what the Majestic Theater at 1022-24 Franklin avenue, and the Palace Theater at 1310 Franklin avenue, were making. He claimed the Komms had represented the dividends from the two amusement places to be $600 a week. They told him, he asserted, that they were drawing $50 a week salary, in addition to their dividends from the one-third interest they owned.

It was agreed, according to Mizes, that he should purchase half of the Komms' holdings for $12,500, paying down $5800, all his savings, and giving notes for the balance.

"But how am I going to pay the balance?" Mizes said he asked them.

"You pay that out of your $50 a week salary and your dividends," they replied, according to the complaint. Mizes was to reduce the debt by $250 a month.

After he had paid his money neither the dividends nor the salary was forthcoming, Mizes asserted.

Hyman Komm, who is listed in the city directory as president of a wall paper store at 1918 Franklin avenue, is out of town. His brother declined to make any statement in his absence.

STORMY WEATHER HOLDS U. S. WORLD FLYERS IN PORT

Commanders of Vessels on Patrol Report Heavy Gales; Clear Near Iceland Coast.

LOCATELLI MAKES HOEFN HORNAFJORD

Italian Aviator Reaches Port on East Coast of Iceland After Foggy Hop From Faroes.

By the Associated Press.

ON BOARD U. S. S. RICHMOND, Aug. 16.—The stormy weather in the path of the American army world fliers continued this morning and the Richmond sent notification to the cruiser Milwaukee that Lieut. Smith and Lieut. Nelson would not start today on the flight from Iceland to Greenland.

Most of the United States naval vessels stationed at intervals of about a hundred miles apart between Iceland and Greenland, today wallowed in a bleak and deserted sea awaiting the next move of the army world fliers. Weather conditions reported by the ships indicated strange uncertainties in this latitude.

The destroyer Reid, which is nearest Iceland, reported that the weather was fine and clear. The Billingley and Richmond, at midway stations, reported a heavy sea and a gale.

The cruiser Raleigh, lying off Angmagsalik, Greenland, reported that last night the wind was blowing at 46 miles an hour with a falling barometer. Conditions today were worse and the vessel ran out to sea, clearing the ice.

The Richmond and Billingsley, stationed midway between Iceland and Greenland, encountered heavy seas and high wind, while the Reid, off Reykjavik, resting place of the aviators, reported good weather.

Destroyer's Crew Enjoys Ice Cream From Real Iceberg.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

INDIAN HARBOR, Labrador, Aug. 16.—The United States cruiser Milwaukee has wirelessed the destroyer Lawrence that the flight of the American army world flyers from Iceland to Greenland has been postponed one day on account of bad weather. Preparations here are being rushed to completion for the reception of the flyers.

The weather here is unsettled but the flight meterorologist says it probably will clear soon.

Ice cream was served last night at the wardroom dinner on board the destroyers Lawrence and Charles Ausburn, the delicacy probably never before having been served in Labrador. It happened this way: Capt. McCord of the Charles Ausburn heard of a stray iceberg in the ocean north of Indian Harbor. He had a hankering for ice cream, so, accompanied by a party of 15, he went aboard a motor launch and criused 15 miles to the berg. Landing on the iceberg, the party climbed a ridge and chopped a supply of ice while schools of grampus frolicked around the berg.

The ice was taken to the flagship, where the ice cream was made and served to the officers and correspondents.

Not Enough Fog to Cause Serious Difficulty, Locatelli Says.

By the Associated Press.

HOEFN HORNAFJORD, Iceland, Aug. 16.—Lieut. Locatelli, the Italian aviator, who is making a trans-Atlantic flight in the wake of the American army world fliers, arrived here at noon today from Thorshavn, Faroe Islands.

The Italian aviator make a good landing in the Icelandic harbor and he and his companions were in excellent condition. He said he had experienced some fog on the trip from the Faroe Islands, but not enough to cause serious difficulty.

Maj. Zanni, Argentine Flyer, at Bangkok, Siam.

BANGKOK, Siam, Aug. 16—Maj. Pedro Zanni, Argentine round-the-world flyer, arrived here today from Tavoy, Burma, where he was forced to stop yesterday on his trip from Rangoon because his gasoline supply had been exhausted.

Trawler in Port With MacLaren and Damaged Plane.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C., Aug. 16.—The Canadian Fisheries trawler Thiepval, bearing Major A. Stuart MacLaren, British aviator, who made an unsuccessful attempt to fly around the world, arrived here today. Lashed to the rigging of the Thiepval was all that was left of the MacLaren airplane, which was badly damaged in a forced landing near Komandorski Island. The Thiepval is coaling here and expects to sail for Vancouver Sunday.

MacLaren said that he would try again if American planes that have reached Iceland from Seattle in a similar entreprise fail to complete the flight.

SAFETY COUNCIL TO AID IN MISSOURI CRIME SURVEY

Special Committee Named to Co-operate With Bar Association.

In response to the request of the State Bar Association for civic and other organizations to participate in the proposed survey of crime and criminal procedure in Missouri, as outlined in a recent report of a special committee of the association, a special committee of the Safety Council has been appointed by Oliver T. Remmers, president. The members of this committee are George F. Haid, former City Counselor; Charles M. Talbert and Herman Ppoehrer.

"The Safety Council," Remmers said, "from the very nature of its organization has a vital interest in the control of crime, inasmuch as this has a great deal to do with the safety of our citizens. The Safety Council has made some investigations in various parts of the country relative to the way crime conditions are being surveyed and heartily congratulates the special Committee on Crime, Criminal Law and Procedure of the Missouri Bar Association on the splendid report they recently rendered. The Safety Council will co-operate to the fullest exten with the Bar Association in this matter."

TRIED TO ROB A CATHEDRAL

Klan Official Gives Aid in Search for Suspected Man.

By the Associated Press.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 16.—State authorities seeking to run down those responsible for the invasion of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception Saturday night had confessions today from Gordon Wells and William McCreedy that they took part in the attempted robbery and had assurances from E. L. Rash, Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan for the Burlington district, that the Klan organization would do all in its power to bring back by Monday William C. Moyers, who was a Klan organizer.

Moyers was named by Wells and McCreedy as having instigated and taken part in the visit to the church. Moyers' home is in Virginia and it is understood he is there.

BOTTLE-A-DAY LAW REPLACES NEWFOUNDLAND DRY ACT

Measure Awaits Only Signature of Governor of British Province.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 16.—Newfoundland's new bill, governing the sale of alcoholic beverages, is ready for the Governor's signature If signed, it will replace the prohibition act which has been in effect since 1915. The legislative council gave the bill final passage last night.

The act allows the purchase of a bottle of spirits a day by any one person and gives to hotels the right to supply guests with beer and wines. The restrictive measures are drastic.

LEMON JUICE BEST TO WHITEN SKIN

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It cannot irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It cannot be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

WOMAN DRIVER'S VERSION OF FATALITY

Husband Issues Statement Giving Wife's Description of Child's Death.

Robert A. Crabb, attorney, of 4468 Forest Park place, whose wife was held Friday on a Coroner's charge of criminal carelessness after her automobile had struck and fatally wounded a 3-year old child at Forest Park Thursday afternoon, issued a statement last night containing his wife's version of the accident.

The victim was Silvia Burgin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burgin of 3615 Lafayette avenue. With her mother the little girl was crossing the driveway, that bounds the park on the east and parallels Kingshighway, a short distance south of Lindell boulevard and opposite the Laclede Pavilion. The automobile struck Mrs. Burgin, hurling her aside, and a rear wheel passed over the child's chest. The mother was critically injured and thus far has been unable to make a statement.

Sounded Horn.

"My wife was coming home from a visit to the home of our daughter, entering Forest Park from Skinker road," said Attorney Crabb. She then proceeded eastward until she reached the eastern edge of the park, making the customary turn from Grand Drive to go south. As she approached the cross walk leading into the park and which takes the pedestrian to the Laclede Pavilion, she noted a couple on this walk.

"She sounded her horn in such a manner as not to startle them, and being signaled to the right of way, she drove her machine over the walk at slow speed. This gentleman who had given the right of way stated to me that at the time she passed him she could not have been going more than six to eight miles an hour.

"After traveling about, as she thinks, to the end of the white guide line in the middle of the road, my wife saw a woman suddenly appear in front of the left fender of her machine. She appeared to be in a crouching position. Although Mrs. Crabb made every effort to stop her car the accident happened.

Inquest Testimony.

"At the inquest there were some slight variance in the testimony of witnesses as to just where the accident occurred, but they were all agreed that Mrs. Burgin and the little girl were crossing the drive from 20 to 50 feet away from the brick walk which should be used by pedestrians. None of the witnesses could state where Mrs. Burgin came from, one stating that she appeared to jump in front of the car, and another that she appeared to float in the air. This indicates the suddenness of her appearance.

"All the witnesses agreed that the car was traveling very slowly and was brought to a stop almost at once. I have very carefully gone over the ground with the witnesses and am sure as to these facts.

"My wife has twice taken the safe driver's course given by the Safety Council, and I am certain that she was not speeding and that she used all the precautions humanly possible. No one regrets more than we this unfortunate accident, but we are comforted in a small measure by the belief that it was unavoidable on Mrs. Crabb's part."

Crabb is a member of the Safety Council and has been active on committees appointed to work with the police in halting speeders.

On advice of counsel, Mrs. Crabb did not testify at the inquest. The case will be presented to the grand jury.

Burgin, a chemist at the Monsanto Chemical Co., came here with his family from Switzerland, their native country, about six months ago.

CARDS SWAMP BRAVES, 9-2; BROWNS WIN TWO FROM RED SOX

Rickeymen Make All Hits Count

Cardinals Give an Exhibition of Pinch-Batting, Piling Up Nine Scores on Nine Safeties.

BOTTOMLEY SENDS BALL OVER FENCE

Stuart Hurls a Good Game and Only Errors Prevent a Shutout — McNamara Pounded in Seventh.

By Dent McSkimming,

The Cardinals gave a fine demonstration of pinch-hitting yesterday, driving in nine runs on nine hits and beating the Boston Braves who obtained eight hits, but scored only two runs.

Johnny Stuart, pitching for the Cardinals, was so effective that the Braves would not have scored a single run except for aid lent by Cardinal errors. Mike Gonzales, after catching a foul fly in the fourth inning, threw poorly in trying to get a runner going to second and thus permitted a run. In the seventh, Rogers Hornsby fumbled a grounder with a double play before him, and the man who reached second on the error later scored.

The final score might not have been so one-sided had John Cooney remained in the pitching box for Boston, but he was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning. McNamara, who pitched the seventh and eighth for the Braves, was hammered for four hits and four runs.

The Big Seventh Inning.

Jack Smith's swinging bunt to McInnis after two were out in the seventh started the Cardinals on a batting rampage which sewed up the game. Smith, away from the plate almost before he bunted the ball, sprinted fast and beat McInnis to the bag. Then Holm hit a clean single to center-field.

Rogers Hornsby, who had obtained but one hit, a bunt, off John Cooney in three trips to the plate, smashed a line dive to left center which hit high on the screen and netted three bases. Two runners scored ahead of him, and when Jim Bottomley hit over the right field fence for a home run, Hornsby scored.

Had John Cooney been given perfect support by his infielders the Cardinals might not have obtained their early lead, which necessitated the Boston pitcher's removal later for a pinch-hitter. In the very first inning the Braves cracked when Shortstop Bob Smith dropped Holm's easy fly in short left field. Hornsby followed with a safe bunt, filling the bases and then Cooney issued his only base on balls off the game, walking Bottomley and forcing in a run.

Brother Jim Cooney Hits.

Blades fanned in the pinch, but Jim Cooney slammed his brother's pitching for a single to right, scoring two runners.

In the third, when the Cardinals scored two runs, Tierney's fumble of Jim Cooney's grounder permitted Blades to cross the plate, Blades had tripled to right, scoring Bottomley.

Although there were five errors committed, there were also some sparkling fielding plays. Jack Smith's catch of McInnis' low line drive in the eighth inning and his rifle-like throw to Bottomley, doubling Padgett off first, was a well executed maneuver which checked a Boston rally.

Smith backed up against the right field fence to haul down Stengel's hard smash in the sixth inning.

Wind Robs Hornsby of Homer.

The high wind from the north prevented Hornsby from registering a home-run in the third inning. The ball was hit with terrific force but it hovered high in the air, held back by the breeze, and nestled in Wilson's glove.

Blades followed with a smash to right which was not hit with unusual force but the wind carried the ball over Stengel's head for a triple.

Herman Bell is scheduled to work for the Cardinals in the third game of the series this afternoon and Joe Genewich will probably pitch for Boston.

Lucky Triple for Pipp in the Ninth Wins for Yankees

Archdeacon Misjudges Fly With Two Out — Score Is 3 to 2.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Pipp's triple over Archdeacon's head, a ball the White Sox outfielder misjudged, with Dugan and Ruth on bases, won for the Yankees in the first game of the series here today in the last half of the ninth with two out. The score was 3—2.

Cvengros pitched well and struck out Meusel just before Pipp hit his winning blow.

FOUR BRITISH YACHTS SHIPPED FOR RACES WITH AMERICAN CRAFT

(Copyright, 1924.)

SOUTHAMPTON, Aug. 16.—Four six-meter yachts left here today with their British owners aboard the Aquitania for New York, to compete for the British-American cup at Oyster Bay. One of the yacht owners is Lady Baird, widow of the late Admiral Sir John Baird, the first yachtswoman ever invited to compete in an international event. Discussing the chances of the British boats, Lady Baird, who owns the yacht Thistle, said to the New York World and Post-Dispatch correspondent:

"I think we will be handicapped by the lighter winds and seas we probably will encounter in Oyster Bay. I have had three new lighter sails and a new lighter mast made for my next boat.

"We have, though, an advantage in that all four yachts were thoroughly 'tuned up' during Cowes week."

ANGLER'S ASSOCIATION ELECTS CHICAGO MAN

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The National Association of Scientific Angling Club, in sesseion here, today elected the following officers:

President, Edwin F. Sutter of Chicago; vice presidents, Jack Herman of Portland, Ore.; Otto H. Peters of Buffalo, L. J. Hurst of Indianapolis and Arthur J. Neu of Newark, N. J.; secretary, Frank S. Leach of Chicago; treasurer, R. S. Geffers of Chicago.

The convention next year will be held in Portland, Ore.

Today Fred Arbogast of Akron, O., in a distance cast with a plug, cast 244 feet 8 inches, bettering the previous record by 35 feet. William Stanley of Chicago tied his mark of 99.8 per cent, made by Denver in 1923 in the half-ounce accuracy bait event.

Helen Wills Wins 2 U.S. Net Titles

Youthful Champion Retains Singles Tennis Crown by Defeating Mrs. Molla Mallory, 6-1, 6-3.

THREE VICTORIES DURING THE DAY

California Girl, Paired With Mrs. Wightman, Wins Semifinal and Final Match in Doubles.

By Charles E. Parker,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 16.—For another 12 months the laurel chaplet symbolic of the national women's lawn tennis championship, will circle the chestnut tresses of Miss Helen Wills of Berkeley, Cal.

Today, at the Forest Hills stadium, in the final match of the anual title tournament, Helen vanquished Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory in straight sets, 6—1, 6—3.

A gallery of 8000 persons—by far the largest tennis throng of the season—saw the youthful champion successfully defend the title she won from the self-same Mrs. Mallory one year ago.

Not a few among that assemblage came to the stadium carrying doubts as to the girl's ability to retain the crowd. They had seen the Norse woman—title holder for the six years prior to 1923—in her spectacular march to the final round. They knew of her keenness to regain that title. They were aware of her extraordinary strength, her great skill and her splendid courage. And many thought—many of them—that an inspired Molla might achieve her heart's desire.

Not a Chance for Molla.

That thought, which amounted to a fear in the minds of Miss Helen's host of supporters, was quickly dissipated, however. The demure Californian, heroine of many a gallant struggle since her pigtail days of three years ago, reported to the court in her most brilliant form, matching or surpassing all of Molla's tennis assets and bringing with her that athletic treasure, youth—confident youth.

Figuratively the coast girl launched Molla's hitherto scoring service, allowing the Norsewoman to win but once on her own delivery. Helen scored liberally with her own service—not with service aces, but forcing errors from her opponent's racquet. And in every department of play and in court generalship Helen far outshone the once unconquerable Molla. In courage alone could the one-time champion match her schoolgirl rival and Miss Wills was not to be beaten by courage alone.

Not Like Her Other Foes.

In reaching the final bracket Mrs. Mallory had relied, and with success, on her driving skill. There had been pace and depth and amazing angles to her terrific strokes and rare anticipation of opponent's returns when service returns were possible. But in her match with Miss Wills she met a player whose racquet control, whose whistling pace and whose tactical scheme simply would not permit Molla to play her game.

Repeatedly she caught Molla off balance or forced her out of position to properly execute her usually effective drives, and the list of nets and outs charged to the former champion tell eloquently what happened on such occasions.

Mindful of Miss Wills' erratic backhand in her match Friday with Miss Mary Browne, Molla sought to make that her chief point of attack.

Shows a Strong Backhand.

But the California girl no longer was displaying a weakness in that quarter. Miss Wills answered drives to her back hand with drives to Molla's back hand, and there was a little more zip, a little more spin and a little more difficulty on those which Molla was forced to handle.

Miss Wills was obtaining beautiful angles from both her forehand and back hand. Her perfect control enabled her to take command of the game, maneuver Molla, out of position and then score tellingly.

There was no flagging in Mol-

French Net Team Here For Match With Australians

Lacoste, Borotra and Brugnon Appear in Practice Match at Forest Hills.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The French Davis cup team, winners of the European zone play, this season, began preparations today, soon after their arrival, for their match with Australia at Boston, Sept. 4, 5 and 6, to determine America's 1924 challenger.

The three stars of the squad engaged in an exhibition match during the national women's championships at Forest Hills a few hours after leaving the steamer Paris, Jean Borotra, the Wimbledon champion, pairing with Rene Lacoste to defeat their countryman, Jacques Brugnon and Watson M. Washburn of New York, former American Davis cup player, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

The Frenchmen displayed surprisingly good form, considering that they had not lost their sea-legs, and convinced spectators that they will be dangerous factors in the concluding Davis cup play. Borotra and Lacoste especially impressed with their speed and versatility of stroking.

Next week the invaders will gain practice by participating in the doubles championships at the Longwood Club, Boston, which also will be the scene of their Davis cup matches with Australia.

A fourth member of the team is Alain Gerbault, hero of a spectacular trans-Atlantic voyage some time ago in a small boat. It is unlikely, however, that he will play in the team matches.

MISS EDERLE RETAINS HALF MILE SWIM TITLE

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Miss Gertrude Ederle of New York's Women's Swimming Association, retained her national half-mile championship today in a women's swimming meet in the Charles River Basin when, with her six-beat crawl, she crossed the line well ahead of her 10 competitors. Her time was 13 minutes 59 seconds, 40 seconds short of her Indianapolis pool record.

WOMEN TO PLAY GOLF AT RIVERVIEW CLUB

On Wednesday, Aug. 20, 1924, the St. Louis Women's District Golf Association will play at Riverview Club on invitation extended by Dr. S. A. Van Hoefen, chairman of the golf committee. Jim Fairman, professional at Riverview, has promised some interesting and surprising innovations for Riverview's guests on that day. As is the custom at these district meetings, the events will start at 9:30 a. m. and will finish before luncheon.

Sisler's Men Show Punch at the Plate, Every Man on Team Getting a Safety in Opener—Scores: 10-2 and 6-4.

By Burt Whitman,
Sports Editor, Boston Herald.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—George Sisler's Browns cut themselves a large piece of old fashioned fruit cake this afternoon, taking a double header from the Red Sox, 10-2, and then 6-4. This peeved a 16,000 crowd, lured to the park by virtue of the speed of the Browns and the four straight wins for the Fohl's over the White Sox. But it was a different team from the sagging Chicago Sox with which the Hub hose were concerned today and the flag certainly does not look any more remote from Sportsman's Park as a result of the twin victory.

The Browns won because they hit in the pinches, fielded well and had much better than average pitching from Dixie Davis in the opener and then from Vangilder in the finale. Dixie held the Abolitionists of here to five hits in that first game, while the Browns were slamming Messrs. Murray, Fullerton and the rookie Charley Jamerson, from Arkansas, for a flock of hits, including six doubles and a triple. Then Elam kept down the Sox seam busters to eight hits in the second game and the Browns combed Howard Ehmke for 12 hits.

Maybe the success of Dixie and Elam in keeping Ike Boone from doing much at bat was the secret of the Missouri success. When Ike does not hit then the Sox have little chance to win.

Browns Field Brilliantly.

But aside from the pitching of Sisler's men there were remarkable fielding plays tossed into the picture by Walter Gerber and Bill Jacobson. Maybe there are better fielding shortstops some where than this Gerber person but they are not in the big leagues. He was everywhere around and near his patrol, digging bad hops out of the dirt or stabbing them in the air and making those instantaneous throws of his over to Sisler

Jake made two delightful clutches in the second game, which was tighter than the opener, and as such was a better setting for stellar fielding. He raced back almost to the flagpole in the fourth and caught Shano Collins' mighty bang over his shoulder. No two other centerfielders in the business could have gone back so far and so successfully for this smash. In the ninth he topped off his gardening by racing far to right center into the zone usually labelled for three bases and caught Danny Clark's drive.

Gerber There in the Pinch.

Gerber backed up his fielding by making a single in the sixth inning of the second game which chased over two runs. Sisler got a one shot in the ninth off Ehmke that sent over the run which won, however, so we must not forget the boy manager.

The score was tied at two all in the fourth inning of the opener, when Robertson crashed a triple off Murray to right. Severeid came through with a double that counted Robby. That was the end of Murray. Fullerton came in, but the Browns kept right on getting runs very easily, and how they gradually piled up their 10 to 2 win is not particularly vital, though Sisler got a double and two singles and Jake contributed two doubles and a single to make him fit to perform the fielding marvels in the second game.

Sisler Wins No. 2.

The second game was a battle, however, until Sisler decided it in his favor with a single that scored the two runs in the ninth. In the first Ehmke walked Evans. Sisler beat out a roller and McManus' lazy double to right scored Evans. Gerber's wide peg to Sisler on Collins in the second, a steal and Picinich's single tied it for Boston at one-all. The Sox went ahead in their third, when Wamby singled, stole second and scored on Boone's only single of the day. Boone dropped McManus' hoist in the fourth, Marty reaching second and scoring on Robertson's single to center.

A Sisler single, McManus being hit by Ehmke, a bunt, a walk and then Gerber's single to center gave the Browns two runs in the sixth. Wamby walked, stole second and scored on Collins' single. The Fohls tied it at 4-all in the eighth, when Wamby doubled off the left field fence, took third on Boone's out and chased home on Harris' infield single to Robertson. Ehmke started his own ruin in the ninth when he walked Gerber. He later passed Evans and then a Sisler single scored the fifth run for the Browns—the one that won. McManus followed with a single that registered the sixth and superfluous Missouri counter.

Sisler's Batting Feature of Browns' Double Victory

BOSTON, Aug. 16.

GEORGE SISLER'S batting was an outstanding feature of the Browns' double victory here today. After going hitless in 12 times at bat in New York, Sisler connected safely six times in 10 trips against Boston pitching.

In the first game, Sisler drove Evans home in the third inning with a single. He stole second but died there when Jacobson struck out. George singled to start the fifth inning, but failed to score. With two out in the seventh, Sislr doubled to start a three-run rally.

Three more hits were made by Sisler in the second game. He beat out an infield roller in the first inning, beat out another infieled hit, starting a two-run rally in the sixth frame, and his third single, with two out in the ninth, drove in Vangilder with the run that put the Browns ahead.

Shawkey Suspended For Rubbing Ball On His Uniform

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.

ROBERT SHAWKEY, veteran pitcher of the New York Americans, today was notified of his indefinite suspension by B. B. Johnson, president of the American League, as the result of his altercation with Umpire Hildebrand here last Thursday.

As Shawkey was put out of a game for rubbing the ball on his uniform, his punishment is expected to be ten days, the rules providing for an automatic suspension for that period for infractions of the pitching rules.

MAY BE NECESSARY TO OPERATE ON BENNETT'S BROKEN RIGHT ARM

Herschel Bennett, reserve outfielder of the Browns, who has been out of the game for almost a month because of a broken arm, is in St. Louis for the purpose of having the arm examined by Dr. Robert Hyland, the club physician.

It will not be know until tomorrow what progress has been made. There is a small chip off the bone at the point where the fracture occurred and if this particle has not knitted properly, it will be necessary to perform an operation to correct the trouble, according to Dr. Hyland.

Bennett reports the arm feeling well. He has been spending his time at his home in Springfield, Mo.

KENNETH WILLIAMS IS BACK HOME DUE TO ILLNESS OF HIS WIFE

Kenneth Williams, the Browns' regular left fielder has returned home, leaving the team in the East. The serious illness of his wife caused his return to St. Louis after the series at New York.

Williams has been out of the game for a month, resting an injured foot.

JOHNSTON CAPTURES TWO TENNIS TITLES IN NEWPORT TOURNAMENT

Beats Snodgras And Helps Trim Kinsey Brothers

Doubles Victory Comes When Kinseys Default After Robert Turns His Knee.

PAIRS WITH GRIFFIN

Little Bill Romps Through Singles Match, Winning in Straight Sets, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

By Brian I. C. Norton,
National Doubles Champion with William T. Tilden II.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—W. M. Johnston of California won the invitation singles at Newport today by defeating Harvey Snodgrass very decisively by 6—2, 6—2, 6—2.

Those who did not watch the match closely imagined that Snodgrass did not play up to his usual form, but this was not the opinion of the other players, and most of us agreed that it has been years since Little "Bill" has played as well as he did this morning. I personally have only seen him produce the great tennis he did this morning on one previous occasion, and that was when he easily defeated Vincent Richards in the world's championship at Wimbledon in 1923.

No matter how hard Snodgrass hit, Johnston hit his return a little harder, Snodgrass tried a chop, a slice, a top-spin drive, a flat drive, but none of them made any difference to Johnston. Whether the ball came on his backhand or forearm, Johnston stepped into the shot and the ball sailed down either of the sidelines with great pace, and wonderful accuracy. Against this great pace, Snodgrass could not keep a very good length and this gave Johnston just the chance he wanted.

Johnston's Deadly Volley.

Little Bill hit any short return of his opponent's down to within three or four inches of the baseline and then took the net. Johnston is without doubt the greatest volley player that lawn tennis has ever had. His anticipation was quite uncanny and he never failed either to win the point with his first volley or else give Snodgrass a very hard shot for his next, which usually resulted in a winning volley from Johnston or an error by Snodgrass.

The games went with service to one, all in the first set when Snodgrass led at 40—15 on Johnston's service, but Little Bill hit three clean aces and won the game and led, 2—1. Johnston quickly ran to a lead of 4—1 before Snodgrass won another game, and after Snodgrass had won his service after deuce had been called three times, Johnston ran out with the next two games and the first set at 6—2.

Johnston in Straight Sets.

The tennis was very interesting to watch, and the pace awfully fast. Continuing to practically hit Snodgrass off the court with his wonderful length space, Johnston quickly ran to three love in the second set, before Snodgrass again won his own service. The next game was a love game to Little Bill Two service aces, a beautiful forearm volley and a smash made from almost on the back line. The score was now 5—2, Johnston leading, but Snodgrass served beautifully when he got two service aces and won his second game of the set.

Johnston won his own service and the second set, 6—2, and ran to 4 love in the third set. At this point Snodgrass made his last effort, which won his two games, but the next two and the match were easily Johnston's.

Doubles Final Exciting.

The final of the doubles between Johnston and Griffin and Kinsey brothers produced a very exciting match. The Kinseys had to default in the final set when Bob suffered a twisted knee.

Both these teams were mentioned as probables for the Davis Cup doubles team, and naturally they were all keen on winning. If ever the Kinseys had a chance of winning it was today, as not only was Johnston tired from his singles match against Snodgrass, but neither he nor Griffin had recovered from their three and a half hour match against Snodgrass and Walker at Westbrook yesterday.

The games went with service to three-all, and Johnston won his service and led, 4—3. Then Johnston and Griffin broke through Bob Kinsey's service and led, 5—3, but Griffin lost his service and after Howard Kinsey had won his delivery, the score was five-all. Johnston again won his service and led, 6—5, and then for the second time in this set they won Bob Kinsey's service and with it the first set at 7—5.

Kinseys Wait for Errors.

There is very little to write about this match, as it is the same old story of the Kinseys being very steady and lobbying every other shot, and simply waiting for their opponents' errors.

Helen Wills Wins 2 Net Titles; Beats Mrs. Mallory in Straight Sets

la's courage. She fought for every point and roused the gallery to many applauding demonstrations. But as the match progressed a wistful expression came and hope faded and then vanished from her swarthy countenance. Molla knew she was facing a conqueror. She fought on and still on, however, making her most gallant stand when Miss Wills, with the first set won, had gained a 5—1 lead in the second, for it was then that Molla, for the first time in the match won two successive games, winning her own service, 4—1, and then taking a 5—3 game on Miss Wills' delivery. It was her last stand and it was an inspiring one. By means of it she pulled up to 3—5. But that was as far as she could get, for Miss Wills won the next game handily and took the set and the match and the crown that goes with it.

Mrs. Mallory's service record is quite the most noteworthy item in the figures of the match. She failed to win her service once in the first set, and succeeded in winning but once in the second. The weakness of that weapon spelled her doom and Miss Wills' skillful racquet pronounced it.

Score and stroke analysis of the Wills-Mallory match follows:

Win Doubles Easily.

Except for a spectacular first set with Mrs. Dudley and Miss Browne, which went to deuce several times, Miss Wills and Mrs. Wightman, the Olympic champions, dominated their two double matches. Miss Goss and Mrs. Jessup, who have held the title themselves three times, made a gallant bid for the final, but found themselves outgeneraled and outdriven at critical junctures.

Mrs. Jessup was the outstanding performer on her side of the net, employing her service effectively, while Mrs. Wightman's brilliant overhead play and chop strokes gained many points. Miss Wills was visibly tired from the effect of her two previous matches and made many errors, but clinched the match with a clever shot that had so much "English" it bounded back into the net on her opponent's side.

Paris With Vince Richards.

Miss Helen Wills, who gained her fifth major crown of the season today when she was victorious in both the national women's singles and doubles, will bid for a sixth title next week, when she plays in the national mixed doubles at Boston, with Vincent Richards, youthful Davis cup star, as her partner.

This brings into partnership the two outstanding younger stars of American tennis ranks for the first time and their progress will be watched with interest against such combinations as William T. Tilden and Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, the champions, Rene Lacoste, of France, and Miss Eleanor Goss, and Jean Borotra, another French Davis cup star, and Mrs. George W. Wightman.

Remarkable Season's Record.

Miss Wills' two victories today, which added laurels to the double triumph, she also scored in the Olympics and her victory with Mrs Wightman in the Wimbledon doubles final, marks probably the greatest string of successes any American woman star has ever recorded in a single season.

Miss Wills' tournament record over the past few seasons now has few, of any, equals in court annals. From a youngster in pig tails who first attained fame in 1921, when she won the national girls' championship, the Californian in three years has risen to the greatest honors the court holds—supreme in her country and rivaling, if not surpassing, the best abroad. Only the question of supremacy with Mlle Suzanne Lenglen remains unsettled, but the French star's sudden illness at Wimbledon spoiled the setting for a duel this year between the best of Europe and America.

Pirates Win and Reduce Giants' Lead to 3 Games

Pittsburg Ties Score in Eighth and Scores Victory in Twelfth, 5-4.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 16.—Amid scenes of wildest excitement by 35,000 het-up fans, Pittsburg tied up the score at four-all in the eighth inning and then proceeded to win it in the twelfth amid scenes as heroic.

Emil Yde, left-hander, started for Pittsburg and for five innings held the Giants hitless. Bentley opened the sixth with a triple. Then followed a single, triple and sacrifice fly, good for three runs. Carey's triple and Barnhart's single gave the Pirates one in their half. In the seventh the Giants got one on three singles.

Then came the hectic eighth. Moore batted for Yde and doubled. Barnhart's single scored him. Cuyler tripled to left, scoring Bigbee, who ran for Barnhart, and Wright scored Cuyler with a sacrifice fly. Morrison held the Giants in check during the remainder of the game.

In the Pirates' twelfth, two were down when Bigbee scratched a hit to Jackson. Cuyler rolled one off Jackson's chest for a single. Wright singled sharply to center, Bigbee counting. Cuyler, up six times, got five hits, including a triple and played a stellar game afield.

When the score was tied a shower of straw hats covered the field and the same scene was repeated in the twelfth.

The four defeats here cut the Giants' lead to three games.

Firpo Declares He Has Taken Off 8 Pounds, But He Looks Fat

"It Ees All Lies," Is His Answer, Through Interpreter to Question About Eating Steaks Morning, Noon and Night.

By BURRIS JENKINS JR.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Aug. 16.—It was the same Luis Angel Firpo, last seen by the writer moving dazed, but proud as a lion, through the storm of shouting people at the Polo Grounds last summer. The same Wild Bull of the Pampas, looking as undaunted as he did after losing that fight against Jack Dempsey in the second round, but heavier and with a slight fulness around the jowl and a puffiness of the cheek which were lacking even in his condition, so assailed at the time by critics of that historic battle.

He asked us how he looked as we sat with him after supper on the porch of his cottage overlooking Saratoga Lake, where the Senor has been training about two weeks—the same cottage Jack Dempsey had last year. We had to admit that he looked heavy—too heavy.

"He says he has lost eight pounds," said his interpreter proudly, after repeating this to Firpo. Eight pounds apparently meant a lot to Firpo.

This brought up the question which now furnishes the chief discussion in Tom Luther's big hotel adjoining the camp and training quarters: "How much does Firpo eat?" We put the statement heard so often by the new arrival at the camp that Luis was "eating his head off, "tearing into as many beefsteaks as he could get his fork into," "beef for breakfast, dinner and supper."

"All Lies" About Steaks.

Firpo was listening intently, trying to catch the words—he is studying English—as he sat in one corner of the porch like some giant tribal leader with his clan gathered about him. But his expression was merely serious, even kindly, and not terrifying and hypnotic, as it seems to us, in the ring.

"It ees all lies," came the prompt answer, and the so-called "Dead Pan" wrinkled into a smile.

All the members of the clan joined in announcing vehemently that Luis eats less than they do.

"All Argentines eat much meat, but Feerpo—he eat not so much as leetle Julio (pronounced Hoolio) Fernandez there."

The menu, as verified by the chef, the waiter, and even Tom Luther himself, is declared as: Stewed fruit for breakfast, with a meager half dozen eggs or so, and bread without butter, tea instead of coffee; at noon—his big meal—perhaps a three-quarters pound steak wrapped in an onion omelette and maybe a salad, the only vegetables uncooked; the evening meal, very light, just tea and a scattering of eggs again.

The Wild Bull seems to be more of an egg addict that a meat devourer.

The reason for the mystery is that Firpo has a private dining room for his staff at the hotel. Whenever curious visitors, seeking a sudden solution of the problem, have unceremoniously visited him at meal times they have always found an empty plate in front of the Argentine heavyweight.

Firpo's Training.

The first view of Firpo stripped for his afternoon workout is a good argument for the doubters of the above bulletined menu. All that shaking super-layer of flesh has got to come from somewhere. The doubters say Luis must get a few extra meals served daily in his cottage and slips out at midnight to raid the hotel ice chest.

At any rate the last few days Firpo is getting down to as much "work" as he knows how to do. He doesn't like to train, and goes about it as something unpleasant that has got to be done.

He gets up every morning at six and does five miles on the road around the lake before he allows himself to go to breakfast. But the five miles are mostly walking, for Firpo explains he doesn't believe in running while training.

He is his own manager as well as trainer, though old Daniel E. Washington, Wills' former rubber, claims he "kinda looks things over." And besides his duties of managing and training himself, Firpo, the financial genius, finds time, by telephone, to transact business with his bank and various enterprises.

Luis Rough at Football.

During the morning he likes to play soccer football on the lawn before the hotel. For Luis used to wield a mean foot in the Argentine. The ten members of his staff—eight of them Argentines—have to play with him. But they don't like it so well. They claim Luis is too rough.

The other day, the ball was kicked about 20 feet into the water. Luis spied a fair-sized flagpole by the shore, picked it up without taking an extra breath, and fished the ball back.

At four-thirty in the afternoon—he has a siesta after dinner—begins the afternoon work-out in the ideally located and arranged arena 40 feet from the hotel. Luis is said to like this. They take $1.10 tickets at the gate. The arena is canvassed off. From 25 to 50 persons a day watch him, mostly visitors from Saratoga Springs, nine miles away.

Two rounds apiece of shadow-boxing, rope-skipping, big and little bag-punching, and sparring with partners and the hard part of the day is over.

We asked Big Bill Tate, Luis' best sparring partner, who knows more about fighting than anybody in the camp, why he and Firpo didn't go swimming.

"'Tain't good for a fighter's muscle to go swimmin'—rowin', neither. An besides, they's li'ble be ally-gaters in that lake."

"Ah, go one, Bill, there aren't any alligators this far North."

"Yes, suh, but wouldn't it be funny if the fust ally-gater found up heah was to bite off the laig of Bill Tate?"

Reads Heavy Stuff.

At night Firpo often reads—always heavy stuff, like the "History of the Argentine" or the "Life of St. Martin," the great hero of the Argentine—or play cards. He plays a fair hand of poker, but characteristic 20-cent limit. Firpo prefers bridge, which he plays better.

Sometimes he goes up to the hotel and looks on at dances. He likes to hear the music, especially "high brow" stuff, his favorite being arias from "La Tosca." Firpo says he dances the tango, but so far his steps have been limited to the porch of his cottage with a graphophone and a sparring partner.

At 10 o'clock he goes to bed and gets in his regular eight hours.

We asked him about the coming fight with Harry Wills. Without batting an eye he declared quietly that there was no doubt of his victory. His unshakable confidence was written all over him.

"And then Dempsey?" we inquired.

Firpo's head tilted far over in a shrug of his great shoulders. And for the first time a look of uncertainty appeared in that stolid, mask-like face. There was something in that name Dempsey that struck a strange chord in him—it looked like doubt. He would reply no more than with that shrug.

Final in County Net Meet Today

Roseborough Opposes Bryant in Singles Championship Match.

Herbert Bryant, present tennis champion of St. Louis County, will defend his title against Richard Roseborough in the final round of singles event at the Kirkwood Country Club this afternoon. The contest is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

Last year these two men met in the final round. Bryant won the title after a close match. Bryant is again favored to win from Roseborough, who formerly held the St. Louis interscholastic title.

Bryant reached the deciding round by eliminating C. K. Riesmeyer in straight sets in one of the semifinal contests yesterday afternoon. The score of the match was 6—4, 6—0, 6—0. In the other semifinal Roseborough won from Jack Forester, the Washington University star. This match required fours sets, Roseborough winning, 2—6, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2.

Play in the doubles event reached the semifinal round yesterday. The team of Albert and More furnished an upset by defeating Robert Metcalf and Ed Harris, present champion in a three-set contest. Albert and More took the first and third sets, while Metcalf and Harris won the second easily. The final score of the match was 6—2, 2—6, 6—4.

In another doubles match Riesmeyer and Tolkacz defeated Page and Waddock in straight sets, 6—1, 6—1.

The two doubles semifinals will be played today. Albert and More will oppose Bryan and Zingsheim in one while Roseborough and Miller meet Riesmeyer and Tolkacz in the other semifinal.

NATIONAL NEGRO TENNIS TOURNAMENT OPENS IN BALTIMORE TOMORROW

The eighth annual tennis championship tournament for negro players will be held in Baltimore, beginning tomorrow, under the auspices of the American Tennis Club. There will be men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles. An added attraction, the boys' junior championship, is limited to youths under 18 years of age.

Louis Bolar, winner of St. Louis clay court championship, and Miss C. Reeves, winner of the local women's championships, are both scheduled to play in the national tournament.

Triple A Splits Double Header; Renards Win

Hartman's Single Scores Winning Run in Eighth Inning to Defeat Puritans.

The Renards defeated the Pu tans, 9 to 8, in the feature of the Manufacturers' League terday. The Renards scored winning run in the seventh when they scored one run on a walk, a passed ball and Hartman's single.

The Triple A team gained even break in a double-header with the Liberty-Central team, winning the first game, 12 to 1, while Liberty-Central team took the second game, 4 to 3, in seven innings.

Triple A is leading the league now by a half game and will the Puritans, the second team, next Saturday.

The Fishers of the Manufacturers League, defeated the Rock Island team yesterday, 16 to 1. O'Bri Watkins and Winkerson, got home runs for the Fishers.

The Sunlight team gained a forfeit victory when the Wabash Club failed to appear for their game.

LONG SHOTS HAVE A FIELD DAY AT CLASSIC SARATOGA TRACK

Blue Warbler at 15 to 1 Captures Spinaway Stakes

Sun Flag, Another Surprise at 8 to 1, Wins the Travers Stakes Easily.

ONE FAVORITE IS FIRST

Kellerman, Heavily Backed, Finishes First in the Fifth Race.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 16. — Remarkable upsets characterized the running of the three major stakes which were decided here today. Outsiders, scornfully regarded by most of the 25,000 spectators who jammed into the course, scored in the famous Spinaway and Travers Stakes and the winner of the North American Steeple Chase never approached favoritism.

Sun Flag, Gifford A. Chochran's, son of Sun Briar and Private Flag, practically ambled away from a field of supposedly crack horses after reaching the stretch in the Travers. His rider, Frank Keogh, recently returned from Fance, let him breeze through the last sixteenth and still won by 10 lengths.

Lucky Play, carrying Major August Belmont's crimson colors, plunged away from the others at the start of the Travers and retained his lead for a mile. Then, just as he was swinging into the stretch, he stopped, staggering as though a rifle bullet had pierced him. So tired was Lucky Play that he swerved dangerously as the entire field, with the exception of Thorndale, was passing him.

Aga Khan and Mr. Mutt were the only horses in the field, besides the winner, which held to the pace.

Neither was a match for Sun Flag. Aga Khan beat Mr. Mutt by a head for the place prize.

Kentucky Filly Wins.

The big crowd was silent as Blue Warbler, the Idle Hour Farm's starter, passed the judges at the end of the Spinaway, one of the most important two-year-old filly fixtures of the year. Blue Warbler stretched her neck in front of Maibird and Lightship in the last jump of the six furlong sprint.

Before the clubhouse stood a little group of Kentuckians and they were the only spectators to make a sound. Blue Warbler's was the first important victory of the Eastern season for a Kentuckian.

The three placed fillies, Blue Warbler, Maibird and Lightship were extreme outsiders in the betting. At the top of the stretch, the three of them brushed through the fighting choices, Swinging, Mother Goose, Royalite and Maid at Arms. This race undoubtedly, proved the greatest upset of the year.

The smashing performance of Blue Warbler in Spinaway, in which she earned $7925 for her owner, demonstrated, of course, that she must be considered as a two-year-old filly champion but she cannot at once be called such.

The third stake, slightly overshadowed by the historic Spinaway and Travers, was the North American Steeplechase Handicap. El Kantara, one of the fastest jumpers now racing, had no trouble winning the steeplechase fixture. While his jumping was not greatly superior to that of the other contestants, his tremendous speed on the flat enabled him to reach the judges' stand a dozen lengths before Houdini, the favorite, Autumn Bells, which had attempted to keep pace with El Kantara, tired pitifully after reaching the last obstacle.

RACE HORSE TRAINER SHOOTS HOLDUP MAN WITH ROBBER'S OWN GUN

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 16.—Remembering a trick taught him by British army officers during the World War, Robert J. Blake, Syracuse, N. Y., former assistant trainer of race horses for Bud Fisher, cartoonist, disarmed a bandit who attempted to hold him up here early today, and killed him with his own weapon.

Blake surrendered after the shooting. He said he was walking along the street when the bandit stuck a revolver against his ribs.

"I grabbed the gun with both hands, gave it a twist and gained possession of it," Blake said. "The bandit started to run, and I followed, firing. After I fired five shots the bandit fell dead."

WORLD'S BIKE CHAMPION ARRIVES IN AMERICA

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Pete Moeskops of Holland, four times holder of the world's bicycle championship, which he successfully defended on Aug. 3 at Paris, arrived here today. It was announced that Moeskops would be matched with the winner of the American championship, which has not as yet been decided. The Hollander will compete in races in Boston; Providence, R. I.; Worcester, and New Bedford, Mass.; Newark, N. J., and New York. Moeskops will, in all probability remain in the United States to ride in the six-day races in New York and Chicago later in the year.

Epinard Prices Cut at Chicago

Odds of 100 to 1 Against French Horse Winning Any Race Slashed to 60 to 1.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Future books on Epinard's three races in this country opened here this week and the prices were largely patterned after those laid down in St. Louis and first made public by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The St. Louis prices against Epinard, 3—1, in the first race Sept. 1; 3—1 in the Sept. 27 event and 4—1 on Latonia special Oct. 11 were allowed to stand.

Even money that Epinard would not win any one of three starts was shortened to 4 to 5.

Odds quoted in St. Louis of 100 to 1, the French ace doesn't win all three aces, were cut to 60 to 1 here when several $10 and $20 bets appeared.

Trainer George Hennessey of St. Louis, who is attending the Hawthorne meeting, will know by Wednesday, whether or not he will be granted a license in Canada, which automatically would permit him to obtain papers in this country.

Although not ruled off he has been on the ground three years for a minor infraction of the rules. There is to be a meeting of the Canadian Stewards Wednesday at Windsor, and action is expected on Hennessy's case.

St. Louisans at Hawthorne.

Pat Stanton, St. Louis owner, has arrived here from Raceland. He is trying to make up his mind to ship his stable to Hawthorne.

Lou Cahn, St. Louis trainer, who handles the string of Tom Pendergast of Kansas City, is having hard luck with the animals. For some reason or another they don't seem to train right in this weather. Lou is hoping for a stretch of steaming hot days. He declares he will saddle a flock of winners sure.

The formal entry of the Rancocas stable in the Chicago Special Saturday and in the Labor Day Handicap, and those of Max Hirsch, Audley Stable, and Hal Price Headley for the Special have been received.

The Audley stable started from Saratoga this afternoon. In the same car will come King Solomon's Seal, entered in the Special. The Audley farm will send 14 horses, including Princess Doreen, entered in the Special.

Headley started Chacolet, Hopeless and Pyroot from Fort Erie today.

HUBBELL HURLS 3-HIT SHUTOUT AGAINST CUBS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Bush and Hubbell engaged in an old-fashioned pitching duel this afternoon in which the Phillies beat the Cubs, 2 to 0. Hubbell allowed only three hits, two of which were infield taps by Heathcote. His rival gave but four and fanned seven Harper, the Philadelphia rightfielder, batted in both the runs made by his team. In the sixth he lined a homer into the right field bleachers, and in the eighth he doubled off the right field screen, scoring Hubbell, who had walked and gone to second when Bush threw a bunt the wrong way.

Forced Postponement to Give Leonard Needed Time to Get in Condition for Walker Bout

Jimmy De Forest Believes Lightweight Champion Was a Bit Lucky in Suffering Thumb Injury — New Date of Fight Sept. 22.

By Jimmy De Forest,

Formerly Trainer of Champion Jack Dempsey.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—It was my impression that Benny Leonard would require much more time than he would have had to prepare for a battle with Mickey Walker if the bout were held on Aug. 20, as originally scheduled. From recent events it would seem that Benny also has come to the same conclusion. And I want to say right now that Benny Leonard will need all the extended time (to Sept. 22) to get in condition to give Walker a real fight.

My readers no doubt will recollect that I said in a previous article I would prefer to wait until I saw how "Leonard trained up to this fight before venturing a positive opinion on the outcome of the contest." And that still holds good.

Far be it from me to doubt that Leonard injured his thumb in that sparring contest with Pal Moran. And equally far be it from me to doubt the extent of Benny's injuries. Nevertheless, I am free to admit the fact that Leonard did injure his hands at precisely the time he says he did convinces me that my beliefe that Leonard is one of the cagiest and clearest thinking boxers in the ring today is correct.

Leonard a Real General.

There are many fighters in the ring who do not realize their own shortcomings. Benny Leonard is not one of these. Our lightweight champion is using his brain every second of the time when he has any important battle on hand, or any unimportant battle, for that matter. Benny makes them ALL important. He certainly made that thing with Moran important, inasmuch as he made it force a postponement of the really big battle of his career since he became champion.

The time finally has come when Benny is forced to drop his pretensions of being a "legitimate" lightweight. Benny now is a full-fledged welterweight — and a mighty good one at that. I do not believe he is as good a welterweight today as he was a year ago but he is a blamed good one at that. It remains to be seen if he is the best welterweight in the world right now—or rather whether he will be the best welterweight on the night of Sept. 22.

There is no denying the fact that Mickey Walker is one of the greatest welterweights who ever graced the ring. I hesitate to name a middleweight, even, who I think could cope successfully with him when he is at his best. This isn't saying a great deal, though, because of the rather mediocre lot we have in that class at the present time.

No Easy Mark for Walker.

But that doesn't mean that Walker will find Leonard an easy mark—not by a long shot. Some of you old-timers will remember that little Joe Walcott could mow middleweights, light heavyweights and even heavyweights with ease and aplomb, but you also will recollect that Joe wasn't such a terror among the lightweights or the welters as he was among the bigger men.

It may be the same way with Walker. Our present welterweight king has knocked over many a middleweight. But men like Dave Shade and Georgie Ward, of his own weight, have on occasions given him considerable trouble. I saw this same Georgie Ward give Benny Leonard quite an interesting time of it at Madison Square Garden at one of the big benefits a couple of years back.

However, Leonard probably is the brainiest, slickest fighter and ring general that Walker ever has been called upon to meet, with the possible exception of Jack Britton. And the Leonard of today is much better equipped to give Walker a real hard tussel than was the Jack Britton who lost the title to Mickey in Madison Square Garden. Britton had the old bean and the generalship all right, but he lacked the physical strength, power and endurance that I believe Benny Leonard still possesses. And besides, there never was a very big difference between Britton, the welter-weight champion, and Leonard, the lightweight champion. Whatever difference there was, in my opinion, favored Leonard.

Training Plans Must Be Changed

It will be interesting to note just how these injured thumbs will affect the training of Leonard and Walker. I venture to say that they won't keep Leonard from going right on with his conditioning for the battle. Of course, they will prevent Benny from sparring—for a while—but will Walker be foolish enough to throw himself completely out of training and have to catch his stride all over again, or will he so arrange his training routine as to bring him into the ring at the peak of his condition?

It might be well for Walker to remember that Leonard is a foxy champion, maybe not as young and spry as he used to be, but there are no kinks in his gray matter.

Unless Walker watches his step, it might happen that that injured thumb of Leonard's will prove Mickey's undoing on Sept. 22.

CARPENTIER-M'TIGUE MATCH IN THE MAKING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Negotiations are under way here for a 15-round bout between Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, and Georges Carpentier, French boxer, to be held either Sept. Sept. 2 or 8 in the Queensboro Stadium, Long Island City.

Francois Deschamps, Carpentier's manager, refused to accept a match at a conference yesterday, explaining that the percentage offered Carpentier was not satisfactory.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Buys Two-Year-Old Colt for $60,000

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 16.

FRANK FARRELL admitted at the track this afternoon that he had sold his good 2-year-old Nicholas to Mrs. Wm. K. Vanderbilt. After a week of dickering the deal was put through just before race time.

Farrell wouldn't go into details as to price, etc., but Maxey Hirsch, to whom the colt will be turned over for training purposes, says Mrs. Vanderbilt paid $60,000 for him.

Nicholas is by the imported Stefan The Great. Farrell bought him at last year's sales here for $12,000. The colt has been a consistent winner since his first start at Aqueduct and may go on to the championship. He wins by himself whenever he gets away well. He is well engaged throughout the season and it is possible that Mrs. Vanderbilt will win the purchase price before the meeting ends here.

Nicholas has won the Sanford Memorial and he is entered in the Troy and the Adirondack Handicap to be run here. He is not named for the rich hopeful stakes.

Bike Stars Race For State Title

Two Kansas City Riders Compete Against St. Louisans Today.

The State championship bicycle tournament, consisting of four races, will be held at Fairgrounds Park this afternoon. In addition to a field of the best local riders two Kansas City youngsters will compete. The visitors are Jimmy Mance, senior champion, and Junior Murray, title holder in the junior field.

Roy Ulrich of the Century Club is favored to win the junior event today and Lou Droz, also of the Century, is expected to finish first in the senior events. Little is known here as regarding the ability of the Kansas City men but the knowledge that a Kansas City rider defeated the best St. Louisans 12 years ago has led the local riders to prepare for hard competition.

The winners of today's races will be eligible to compete in the national championship meet at Buffalo next month.

Fuhr Goes to San Antonio.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 16.—Oscar (Lefty) Fuhr, Boston Red Sox pitcher, will join the San Antonio Bears at Fort Worth Sunday, President Benson announced Saturday night. Clarence (Buck) Winters, pitcher for the Bears, will leave for Boston Sunday night to join the Red Sox, Benson stated.

Sanola Defeats The Runt to Win Eighth Victory

Sain Filly Comes From Behind to Capture Great Northern Stakes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Two horses that have shown consistent class at the present racing meet at Hawthorne race track today ran right back to form, with 20,000 persons thronging the stands and promenade at the dolled up track that once mode the "War Eagle" Ed Corrigan famous.

Sanola, winner of seven races at this meeting, rang the bell for the eighth time in the featured Great Northern Handicap at six furlongs in 1:13 2-5, giving a conclusive demonstration of sprinting superiority.

The public backed The Runt, a six-time winner. For a short time after the start it looked good for The Runt way out in front, with Sanola in the pack. At the last sixteenth the flashy Sain filly, owned by Harned Brothers and Jones, and well ridden by Willie Fronk, stepped away on the outside and drew clear to win in the last 70 yards, Marionette third.

Sanola Quoted at 4 to 1.

Sanola was second choice in the betting at 4 to 1, and the odds were a gift, apparently.

St. Louisans who remember Barney Schreiber and the old breeding farm at Woodlands, should be interested in Sanola, which is by the great sire that help make Schriber famous—Sain.

True to his previous stake form, the 3-year-old colt, Gibion, by The Manager, owned by C. W. Reiddinger, won the Plamondon Handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth, in 1:48, with Red Wingfield second and Cannon Shot third. Gibion raced into an easy lead at the start, and was well rated through the back stretch by W. Lilley to draw clear on the far turn and win easily. His odds were 2 to 1.

5 to 1 Shot Opens the Day.

The outsider, Colfin, 3-year-old filly, by The Finn and owned by Harnd Brothers and Jones, was victor in the first in a driving finish with Devil Girl and Great Lady second and third. The winner paid 5 to 1. The time was 1:43 2-5.

The form favorite, Mark Master, owned by the International stable of Chicago, redeemed its disqualification in its previous start by taking the second at five and half furlongs in 1:09 4-5, with Moon Magic second and Louis Rubenstein third. The price was 3 to 1.

Good Thing Is Beaten.

One of the hottest tips of the meeting went amiss in the fifth when Sagamook refused to extend itself and trailed the field through nine furlongs. Mary Ellen O turned up as winner, with Wong Bok second and Hoy third. Sagamook opened high in the betting but closed down at 6 to 5 and nearly everybody at the track was down. Mary Ellen O paid 4 to 1.

Another smart tip went over in the sixth when Huonec came in at 5 to 1 with Virginius second and Yorick third. Huonec and Virginias started seventh and eighth, respectively, and for a mile appeared out of it, but both moved up fast on the turn and catching the leader on the stretch, drew clear.

MACKMEN TAKE BOTH ENDS OF DOUBLE-HEADER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—Eddie Rommel attempted to pitch both games of this afternoon's double-header between the Athletics and Cleveland, and while the Mack Ace was not credited with both victories, the Athletics did defeat the Indians twice by scores of 3—1 and 7—6. A capacity crowd witnessed the double victory by Mack's team. Rommel quit the mound after he had twirled five innings of the second game, with Cleveland leading, 5—4. Sam Gray took Eddie's vacated post and finished the job in good style.

EXPERTS DISAGREE IN PREDICTING RESULT OF FIRPO-WILLS GO

Negro Will Beat Foe to the Punch, Trainer Declares

Firpo's Body Blows Will Win Within Five Rounds, Lightweight Thinks.

RECORD GATE EXPECTED

Rickard Says Advance Sale Is Greater Than for Dempsey-Carpentier Event.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—There is considerable difference of opinion here among the "experts" as to who will prove to be the winner of the Firpo-Wills fight.

"Wills is sure to win," remarked a referee, trainer and handler, who has been identified with the boxing game for nearly 40 years. "He will 'left-hand' Firpo so easily that the Wild Bull will look awkward and foolish. The negro's experience will prove too much for the South American.

"Firpo has only one style. He tears in with no defense and tries to land his terrific right. He is a mark for a boxer who knows how to use a straight, hard left, and Wills is the man who can turn that trick.

"Wills is Firpo's match in height, weight and reach. He is a more scientific boxer and a great hitter. As soon as he has pumped a few solid lefts into Firpo's face, something is bound to happen. Wills, with his straight lefts, ought to offset Firpo's right-hand swings. In fact, I expect to see the negro beat the Wild Bull to the punch all through the mill.

Wills a Trickster.

"Harry is a trickster, too. He has a way of pushing his antagonist off balance with the left hand and following quickly with the right, delivered squarely into the stomach or hooked up to the point of the jaw. If the referee shuts his eyes to Wills' trick of holding and hitting in half clinches, Firpo will be severely punished.

"Knowing that Firpo depends entirely on his right, I feel sure that the negro will have a perfect defense for that dangerous blow, in which case the South American soon will become discouraged. The fight is between a crude slugger and a clever, hard-hitting boxer."

Wills' Gameness Questioned.

"If Firpo lands his right in Wills' stomach or on the head with all of his great strength, he'll win," said a former lightweight ring star. "I saw Wills fight Sam Langford and Bill Tate some time ago, and in each instance he proved to me that he didn't relish punishment. Langford, who then was in good trim, knocked him out, and Tate, in my opinion, made him quit.

"I don't believe that Wills can keep Firpo off. The Wild Bull's hard rushing and slugging tactics, which nearly beat Jack Dempsey, will overwhelm the negro. Firpo's body punches will settle it inside of five rounds."

6 NATIONS REPRESENTED IN NATIONAL DOUBLES, TO BEGIN TOMORROW

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—The draw today for the national lawn tennis doubles championship, play in which begins on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club Monday, developed no conflicts of importance in the early rounds. Six nations were represented among 36 entrants. Six teams were seeded.

In the upper quarter, the former national champions, W. M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin, who were seeded second, will have a comparatively easy advance, having drawn byes in the first round and with no opponents in prospect more formidable than Lewis N. White and Louis Thalheimer of University of Texas.

The second quarter has the former champion, R. N. Williams II., and Watson Washburn, and the Australian Davis Cup team of Gerald L. Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood as seeded teams likely to meet in the fourth round. William T. Tilden II., national singles title holder, and Young Al Weiner, who were not seeded, will probably meet William and Washburn in the third round.

The Olympic champion Vincent Richards and Francis T. Hunter, seeded first, dominate the third quarter with the Australian, Norman E. Brookes, and Richard E. Schlesinger in the bracket that will bring them up to oppose the Olympic winners if they serve in the third round.

In the fourth quarter the Kinsey brothers of San Francisco, third to be seeded, will meet the French Davis Cup pair of Rene La Coste and Jean Borotra, if both get through to the fourth round.

STRIBLING-BERLENBACH BOUT SET FOR AUG. 27

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The long discussed match betwen Young Stribling and Paul Berlenbach has been closed and these two youthful sensations of the ring will clash in a six-round bout at the New York Velodrome on Aug. 27. Stribling's signature was obtained by Tex Rickard a couple of weeks ago, and it now developes that Berlenbach also has been signed.

Then and Now.

DAZZY VANCE is causing the baseball world to stand in amazement at his baseball performance in winning 20 games and losing four for the present season.

There is little doubt that Vance is the greatest pitcher in the National League and that, with a stronger club back of him, he might make an even better record.

On sheer comparison with past records, however, Dazzy is a long way from ranking with supermen of past seasons. For example, take the record of Joe Wood in 1912, when the "Smoke ball" king won 35 games and lost five, the highest winning percentage, for such a large number of victories, in the modern baseball.

Walter Johnson, the following year, made a record of 36 victories and seven defeats.

Wild Bill Donovan finished the 1906 season with 26 victories and only four defeats.

In the National League there are several instances of hurlers surpassing the record of Vance. Dazzy, for example, has won seven or eight games straight. Rube Marquard won 19 victories in succession for the Giants.

Back in Joe McGinnity's heyday, with the Giants, he pitched 51 games for a percentage on the season of .814, in one season.

Ed Reulbach is the only player to pitch two successive seasons in which he averaged over .800 on the season. In 1906, with the Chicago Cubs, Ed hurled 33 games for a winning percentage of .826. The next year, in 27 games, he attained a percentage of .810.

Matthewson, Camnitz, Mays, Chesbro and others all entered the .800 class, pitching between 36 and 50 games per season.

Thus Dazzy to tie even Wild Bill Donova nmust win six more games this season and can afford to lose none.

To tie Joe Wood he must win 15 more games and can afford to be beaten but once. To equal the consecutive run of victories made by Marquard he still lacks 11 or 12.

Conditions Different.

BUT while Dazzy must carry on considerably to arrive in the upper niches of the Hall of Pitching Fame, there are things to be taken into consideration that make his mark appear better.

The most important of these is the change in pitching conditions. Today the ball is different and the restrictions hampering the hurler are more irksome. The lively ball has given a tremendous impetus to batting, as is shown by the greater number of .300 hitters today.

Making allowance for the post-war difficulties of pitchers, it is quite possible that Dazzy might be even more effective with the type of ball used in 1912 and 1913. Likewise, if Dazzy had that championship Boston aggregation of 1912 backing him up, instead of the rather humble Brooklyn support, he might fare still farther in his pursuit of fame.

However far Dazzy's record may now fall short of the top rank of old-timers, there are few clubs in either league that wouldn't mortgage the grand stand to be able to sign him.

And that's fame enough for one man.

Ban Rises to Remark.

BAN JOHNSON'S views on baseball are always worth everybody's attention. When, therefore, in an era of substitutions run wild the American League head startles fans by proposing to limit substitutions, he gets a respectful ear.

Ban has not yet spoken at length on the subject. Presumably he will fire his big guns in open meeting next winter when, it is said, he will advocate limiting pitchers to two per team per game and pinch-hitters to one.

Johnson's ideas will have the co-operation of the great order of official scorers whose lives have been made trying indeed by box scores containing as high as 30 and more players in single games.

Bunk Strategy.

SUCH box scores are travesties on the national game and are due to the alleged strategy employed by certain managers. The result of the development of the substitution policy is seen in the lack of responsibility shown by some players on whom responsibility falls.

These men would feel deeply aggrieved, in many cases, if forced to stay in and stem the tide of adversity when the enemy starts hitting.

As a result we have a constantly diminishing number of nine-inning pitchers such as were numerous in days of old.

Pinch hitters flung into the breach when a pitcher is changed, when a situation requires a heavy hitter with a weak one up or when a particular player is not hitting well, do not often come through.

Short Cuts Don't Pay.

THE Cardinals yesterday an-announced the selection of Stockton, Cal., as the team's training camp for 1925. The Browns will go to Florida.

It's a long way to either place and the rewards ought to be in proportion. The bill will be staggering, even though propaganda and distance lend enchantment to the view.

Though it might pay to make the trip, both clubs will do well to heed the words of that old sage of the game, Byron Bancroft Johnson, that baseball training should begin at home. Of what use to go to California to play baseball, if the player's physical condition won't permit him to practice without getting "charley horse" or other afflictions?

Begin at Home.

JOHNSON has said that baseball teams of today are suffering from improper preparation. By that he meant that players should report at training camps hard and "fit," in perfect physical condition, not merely in good health.

Ban believes players of today should do like Jack O'Connor, Cy Young and others—start road work and real training on January 1. Then, when the team arrives at camp, arms, legs and muscles will be hard and ready to start baseball playing at once.

Ball players owe major league promoters that much. Many accidents to players, caused by "softness," occur annually and in frequent instances they deprive the club owner of the services of a star whose salary he must continue to pay, though he gets nothing in return.

Americans Win Cross Country

Irishman Individual Victor With Yankee Team Carrying Off Honors.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—America today won the team prize in the Tailteann games, 3800-meter cross-country run, open to teams or individuals. Ireland won the individual prize with Ryan coming in first. On the American team Marvin Rick of the New York A. C., finished second; R. Hayne of the Ohio State University, third, and John G. Bell of Brooklyn, seventh. England was second in the team event with sixth, eighth and tenth places.

Miss Euphrasia Donnelly of the Hoosier A. C., Indianapolis, was the only American entrant in the woman's swimming and diving events. She did not win a place in the diving competition, but finished third in the 200-meter freestyle swim. The diving event was won by Miss Rea of England, with Miss Byrne of Ireland, second, and Miss Absalom of Ireland, third. The swimming race was won by Miss Shan of New Zealand, with Miss McKenzie of England, second, and Miss Donnelly, third. The time was 3 minutes 2 seconds.

While the principal American athletes left Dublin yesterday, a number of competitors from the United States remained for the final events, and for the presentation of the Scott trophy Monday evening. The Americans have teams in the 3000 meters and 5000 meters races and the steeplechase tomorrow.

HOFF TO HELP COACH DANVILLE HIGH TEAMS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DANVILLE, Ills., Aug. 16.—William Hoff, for the past two years one of the directors of playgrounds of the city of Chicago, three years with the University of Chicago, and formerly of Terre Haute, Ind., where he was a star high school athlete for four years, has been named by the board of education as assistant coach of the Danville High School Athletic Association.

Hoff, for the past four years a close friend of John Thomas, the University of Chicago star football and baseball player, is to assist Thomas here, Thomas having been named by the board two months ago as the new chief coach for Danville High.

Both stars report here within a week. Hoff was a star at Wiley High School, Terre Haute and also at Rose Polytechnic Institute of the same city in four branches of sport, baseball, football, basketball and track, and some great results are expected here. Danville will have a new athletic field ready within a month.

George Duncan Likes Good Shots More Than Score, Sarazen Says

With His Delicate Swing, He Is a Great Golfer, but He'd Rather Play Ball Properly Than Play It Safe.

By Gene Sarazen,
American Professional Champion.

When in the mood George Duncan is just about the greatest golfer in the game. The wary Scot is capable of making some of the most extraordinary shots I have ever seen played. The reason he doesn't win more often is a very high-strung temperament, the kind a genius possesses. Regardless of conditions, Duncan always tries to play the proper shot. He is an artist who takes pride in his game. Therefore he would rather play a good shot than get a good score, which may sound paradoxical.

Duncan has a wonderfully delicate stroke. He handles all clubs, including his driver and his brassie, in a rather genteel manner, with the fingers only gripping the shaft. Nevertheless, Georgie can get as much distance as anybody when he wishes.

Three-Quarter Swing.

He uses the overlapping grip on all shots, taking the club back with a very upright swing. He is very compact and a sure hitter of the ball. He plays all shots with a slightly open stance and uses a three-quarter swing.

In playing his irons his stroke is more upright than it is with the wood. He hits the ball with a very sharp descending blow and finishes in an upright position very quickly. In other words, he seems to break the stroke on the follow through and to come to an upright position immediately after the ball is struck.

Duncan does very little pivoting. He is in position when addressing the ball to get his body into the stroke and he is at all times content to obtain direction and control rather than distance.

Always Plays the Wind.

His mashie is his best club, I think, although he is a wonder with the spoon. Duncan always "plays the wind," as we say, hooking or slicing according to the direction of the breeze. He is at his best when playing up to the pin against the wind. Then it is that his exquisitely slight cut shot stands him in good stead, whether he is using iron or wood, and the ball drops to the green as lightly as a feather.

Without doubt Duncan is the fastest playing golfer in the world. I have often thought his speed hurts his game, especially his putting. However, his philosophy is that one should have the shot or putt figured out in advance, and should waste no time or motion in playing the shot. In putting, after sighting the line to the cup, he quickly places the blade of the putter, first in front of the ball, then in back of it and then strikes. He uses a steel putter and stands in addressing the ball, with the weight of the body on the left foot.

SIX SPECIAL AMATEUR EVENTS SCHEDULED ON THIS WEEK'S RING CARD

Six special events have been scheduled by Harry Cook and Jimmy Solari of the Business Men's A. C., to feature next Wednesday night's amateur boxing tournament in the outdoor arena at Battery A. The card includes two heavyweight attractions, a flyweight event featuring Mike Sansone, the Western A. A. U. champion, and three interclub contests which will unofficially decide city championship honors in the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight divisions.

Everett Mitchell of Rolla, Mo., meets Roy White of the Ferguson A. C. in one of the heavyweight headliners, while the other will bring together Joe Young of Sawyerville, Ill., and John Demnski of the Business Men's A. C.

Eddie "Red" Reith, a member of Tommy Brammel's St. Louis Rowing Club squad, meets Billy Sincoff of the National A. A., in the featherweight special. Reith, a former bantam champion of the Western A. A. U., has lost but one decision in 13 contests as a candidate for featherweight laurels. His lone reverse was sustained at the hands of George Sanders of Little Rock, Ark., who outpointed him in the titular final of the Western A. A. U. championships at Kansas City several weeks ago.

Bill Johnson, the St. Louis Rowing Club lightweight star, who also reached the championship finals at Kansas City, will oppose Obal Steuvers of Collinsville, Ill., in another promising setto. Young Sansone, the only local boxer now holding a district championship title, faces Sammy Scheuman of the South Broadway A. C. in the flyweight special. Joe Moose of the Sherman Park A. C. and Frank Powers of the Municipal A. A. are booked to clash in the welterweight feature.

Twelve entries have been received to date for the novice or preliminary competition.

Ban Johnson Favors Limit on Number of Pitchers in a Game

NEW YORK.

FROM a statement recently made by Ban Johnson, president of the American League, the conclusion may be drawn that next winter Mr. Johnson will urge the American League club owners to legislate against the unwarranted use of "change pitchers" and "pinch hitters." It is not improbable that he will introduce a rule limiting the number of pitchers for each team in a single game to two and permitting the insertion of but one substitute batsman.

The president of the American League is violently opposed to the home run burlesque, and believes that all drives into short grand stand wings and open bleachers should yield not more than two or three bases. However, the club owners must be heard before anything can be done about the matter.

Gar Wood's Boat Not Extended to Win $5000 Event

Baby Gar IV of Detroit Averages 42.06 Miles for Three 50-Mile Heats.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Baby Gar IV, owned and driven by Gar Wood of Detroit, today won her third straight 50-mile heat in the Buffalo Launch Club Regatta on the Niagara River course to capture the Fisher-Allison Gold Cup, valued at $5000.

As in the first two heats, the Detroit speed boat was not extended to win. It is the first leg that Gar Wood has won the prize trophy which will become the permanent possession of the owner, who wins it three times.

Commodore Wood's boat, Baby Gar III finished first in the last race at Hamilton, Ont., two years ago, but the cup was awarded to the Nick Nack, owned by Humphrey Birge of Buffalo, on a protest. Nick Nack finished first in the Nick Nack finished third in the races here.

The Rainbow, owned by S. B. Eagan of Buffalo, which won a leg on the cup in 1921, took second place.

Webb Jay, of Chicago, has two legs on the trophy and H. B. Greening of Hamilton, Ont., holds one.

An average speed of 42.06 miles an hour was made by Baby Gar IV for the 150 miles. On her fastest five-mile lap she averaged 44.8 miles an hour.

Taking her third staright heat, Wilgold II., owned and driven by J. A. Williams of Buffalo, won the interstate championship trophy for runabouts of not less than 26 feet in length. She covered the 90 miles at an average speed of 38.73 miles an hour.

Arab VII, the hydroplane owned by R. H. Sidway of Buffalo and piloted by Phil Wood, brother of Gar Wood, again scored in the final heat to win the Leary Trophy. She averaged 48.38 for the sixty miles.

FOURTEEN GIRLS ARE ENTERED IN MERAMEC RIVER SWIM TODAY

Fourteen girls are entered in the one-mile handicap swim to be held at the Meramec River this afternoon. The race will start at the Spring View Club at 4 o'clock and finish at Meramec Highlands.

Helen Caldwell, winner of last year's race, is not entered this year. Arvilla Ressler, who won the time prize last year in the record time of 20 minutes 35 seconds, and Grace Stewart, who finished second, will both compete.

Grace Stewart and Miss Ressler will swim from scratch while Lucille Spillman has received a two-minute handicap and Marie Wilkinson and Justine Meat a five-minute allowance each. The limit is 10 minutes, which has been allowed to Lucille Brandenburger.

Officials of the swim are: William F. Yorger, starter; Rodowe H. Abeken, referee; Arthur Eilers, assistant referee; Francis Stephens, handicapper; Al Winters, chairman of judges; J. Otto Hartwig, chairman of checkers; Charles Demko, arrangement.

Hunter Defeats Richards.

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 16.—Francis Y. Hunter of Beckley, W. Va., defeated Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., in an exhibition match at the conclusion of the women's national championship, in two straight sets, 6—4, 13—11.

Josties Victor In Tennis Final For A.A.A. Tit

Final Round of Singles Decided in Straight Sets, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3.

By Davison Obear.

Fred O. Josties won the [illegible] championship of the Triple A by defeating Karl P. Kammann in the final round of the singles yesterday afternoon. The [illegible] was decided in straight sets, Josties winning, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3.

Kammann started well in the opening set and won the first game. It was the only game he was [illegible] to win in that set because Josties kept the lead after taking the second game. Josties took the set owing to his excellent placements along the baseline and steady playing.

Both Try for the Net.

Both players tried to take the net at the start of the second set. Kammann again won the first game. Josties then ran up a lead of 3 to 1 owing to his accurate placements. The former Washington University captain won the next game by brilliant play and tried hard to capture the sixth game to even the score. After a number of rallies Josties won it. He won two games while Kammann took one, the set going to Josties by a 6—3 score.

The third set was hard fought. Kammann started off with more determination but was unable to stand up against the speedy placements which Josties directed against him. Josties ran up a lead of 3 to 1 and 5 to 3 and finally won the deciding game after 12 points had been played. Josties played one of the best games of his career against Kammann yesterday.

The point score of the match follows:

First Set.

Hunt Albert, who has been playing in two tournaments during the past week, won the title in the Class A singles event by defeating Dr. Rae Hollinshead, former Municipal champion, in the final round. The score was 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, [illegible]. Albert won by more steady playing.

Hereford, after a short rest, opposed Paul Pratt in the final round. Pratt ran out the contest in quick time, winning in straight sets, [illegible] 6—4, 6—3.

Dale Morton, the former [illegible] champion of St. Louis, reached the final round in the Class B singles event by defeating Leonard McCarthy, former Kingshighway Club star, in a four-set encounter. The score was 6—2, 3—6, 6—4, 6—[illegible].

Doubles Final Today.

The two semifinal round matches in the Triple A doubles championship were completed yesterday. Play was started Friday, but rain caused a delay.

Kammann and Woody Brown defeated Harold Hess and Harry Frohlichstein. The first two sets were easy for Kammann and Brown, but the third was hard fought. Twelve games were played before Kammann and Brown won it. The final score was [illegible], 7—5.

Fred Josties and Charlie [illegible], favorites for the doubles title, reached the final round by eliminating Karl Hodge and Ed [illegible]rano. This match was also decided in straight sets, the scores being 6—4, 6—0, 6—3.

The final round of the doubles championship will be played this afternoon, starting at 2 o'clock.

SUMMER OF 1924 COOLEST ON RECORD

Average Temperature in June Was 73.4 and in July 75—Highest for Year Is 95.

Oldest inhabitants may recall cooler summers than the present one in St. Louis, but 51-year-old Weather Bureau records here have no match for the cool summer of 1924.

The pleasant coolness of the last few days lends savor to the discussion of a mild summer. The mean temperature of both June and July this year was 2.5 degrees lower than the average for those months in other years. The mean temperature for the first 14 days of this month was 1.7 degrees below the normal average.

August was not quite so cool, on the whole, as the two preceding months, because it started out with a few warm days. However, August countered with the following unusually low temperatures: 61 on the 12th, 65 on the 13th and 57 on the 14th, a new low record for that date. The coolest August weather on record here was on the 24th of the month in 1887, when the mercury went down to 52.1.

On the other hand, this month produced some warm temperatures, as follows: 93 on the 3d, 95 (high mark for the season) on the 4th and 5th, and 93 again on the 8th. The big maximum temperature in July and June was 93, on the 21st and 28th, respectively. July temperature dropped to 55 on the 3d and the reading June 2 was a degree lower.

The average temperature last month was 75 and that of June, 73.4. The prediction is for little temperature change in the next few days.

OKLAHOMA REPUBLICANS SPLIT OVER KLAN ISSUE

Some Threaten to Bolt Unless Nominee for Senate Denounces Hooded Organization.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Aug. 16.—An informal poll of members of the Republican State Central Committee, made before the committee meeting here yesterday showed that about two-thirds are opposed to the Ku Klux Klan and to the klan's indorsement of the candidacy of W. B. Pine, party nominee for United States Senator.

Some members of the committee asserted they would vote for Jack Walton, Democratic nominee for the Senate, unless Pine denounces the klan. This message they delivered to Pine. Addressing the committee briefly, Pine said he had no statement of policy to make on the subject at present.

The Black Dispatch, negro weekly, appeared in support of Pine and in bitter denunciation of Walton. It quoted Pine as saying he is not a member of the klan and never has been. It denounced Walton for pardoning alleged lynchers of a negro, failing to prevent a klan parade while Mayor of Oklahoma City and for making an alleged application for membership in the klan.

Tendency to Take Profits Less in Evidence During Week—Advance in Commodity Prices Feature.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"As the week closes the securities markets are showing a distinct improvement in tone. Activity appears to be increasing slightly and the tendency to take profit is less in evidence. In short, the realizing sales of the preceding week and the fore part of the current week have added to the technical strength of the market. Those who, possibly fearing a prolonged reaction, have taken their profits, found little else to do with their funds except to rebuy securities. Pronounced reaction, even though encouraged by renewed short selling, failed to develop. Confidence in the market, temporarily at least, has been restored. This is not surprising. Money still is abundant and cheap, farm products are selling at new high levels, other commodity markets are firmer.

Advance in Corn.

"Sooner or later prosperity in the great agricultural regions must strike a response among industrial centers. While the two are dependent to a large extent on each other, the backbone of good times in this country undoubtedly is a healthy condition on the farms. The further rise in prices of farm products during the week, therefore, must be regarded as a factor of prime importance. Corn's advance has been more spectacular than that of wheat. However, farmers sell only a comparatively small portion of their corn for cash. Moreover, the rise is due to a short domestic crop, so that a good many farmers will not get any particular benefit. Not so with wheat. Its advance is due to smaller yields in Canada and other parts of the world. Larger acreages may be planted next year, weather conditions may be more favorable elsewhere and prices may go lower, despite a probable recovery in Europe. But that is borrowing trouble.

"Mercantile and industrial developments suggest that nothing out of the ordinary is happening in the height of the dog-day season. However, encouragement may be drawn from the fact that the news points in one direction. Not all lines of trade are improving, but changes are for the better. At any rate, business, if measured by pre-war standards, is good and has been all along. Railroad car loadings have finally begun to turn upward, and rather briskly. From now on the increases should be even more pronounced, with million-car weeks again on the record. With trade below the levels attained last autumn, however, and with greater efforts being made to equalize the traffic, it is doubtful if we shall see such a succession of weeks in which loadings ran well above a million cars as we had in 1923. Steel buying and production are on the upgrade. While the recovery is extremely moderate, the trend is there. Losses in unfilled orders are diminishing and active blast furnaces are increasing. Prices are doing little more than holding steady in steel, but quotations are somewhat firmer in pig iron. Rubber also is firmer. Copper and other non-ferrous metals are reviving and further improvement may fairly be expected from a settlement of the European difficulties.

The Money Situation.

"Despite the modest improvement in business, actual and in prospect, however, few signs have come to hand so far of firmer money in the immediate future. Discounting at the Reserve banks still is declining, lower rates notwithstanding, while gold holdings, which are the basis of much of the ease in money, are increasing. Last month, it is true, less gold was sent to this country, but it is still coming. Credit is abundant, not only for industrial needs, but for speculation in securities and commodities.

"Further strength in the foreign exchanges is significant of confidence in a reparations settlement. Movements in sterling and francs have been less pronounced as the conference draws to a close, but successful termination is momentarily expected. Subsequent events may prove that it would have been better to prolong the conference. It may be that some obstacles merely have been brushed aside, to be surmounted later. Granted a satisfactory settlement and a revival of European trade, the effects on American business will be of a mixed character. In the long run, nevertheless, only good can come to this country from a prosperous Europe."

"The momentum gathered by the stock market in yesterday's trading was carried over into the short session, resulting in generally better prices with business active. Recognized industrial leaders set the pace and pool stocks were actively pushed. Considerable profit taking appeared, but it was absorbed in good style and at the close net gains predominated. Bonds were moderately active and firm but without special feature. On the whole the market appears to be well supported and its advance has stimulated optimism.

Exchange Is Steady.

"Foreign exchanges were steady on a moderate volume of business. The range was much narrower than in recent full day's trading. This is partly due to the usual week-end let up and also to the waiting attitude now adopted by traders against the formal announcement of the result of the London conference on reparations. With German agreement to allied proposals for evacuation of the Ruhr the last big point of difference seems to have been cleared up, though much is yet to be done before we may expect actual flotation of a German loan. Sterling at $4.54⅜ was virtually unchanged, while French francs held at 5.89½, their previous closing level. Other European currency rates were generally slightly higher. A feature of a further advance in Canadian dollars, which now are quoted at a discount of but 1-16.

"The statement of the New York Clearing House as of the close of business Aug. 16, showed the following changes: Net demand deposits increased $7,413,000; time deposits increased $11,127,000; circulation decreased $822,000 and excess reserves increased $6,303,490.

Another excited spurt in corn was the feature of the commodity markets. Prospects of a short corn crop are the cause of what amounts to almost a frenzy of speculation in this cereal, and a gain of over 5 cents a bushel was recorded shortly after the trading began. Profit taking later reduced this but the market continued strong throughout the morning. Wheat advanced in sympathy with corn. Cotton, on the other hand, was rather freely liquidated on estimates of crop gains.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week show an excess in reserve of $27,969,000. This is an increase of $6,303,490.

COOL WEATHER CAUSES CORN ADVANCE AND SHORT WORLD CROP STRENGTHENS WHEAT

New High Levels Reached During Week's Trade—Oats Also Higher but Rye and Barley Weaker.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Wet and cool weather which further delayed the corn crop and materially reduced the chances of it maturing before frost advanced prices to new high levels during the week ending Aug. 16, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture. The wheat market at the close of the week was strengthened by the short crop in the northern hemisphere which, according to latest estimates, will be about 12 per cent less than last year. The sharp advance in corn prices also assisted in giving the stronger tone to the wheat market. Early in the week the wheat market ruled rather dull. Hedging sales were heavy; the movement of new wheat continued of large volume and export demand was rather dull. Toward the last of the week, however, foreign buyers became more active and export sales for the week were estimated at about 3,100,000 bushels, mostly hard winter, including some by shipment via the Gulf. Canadian crop news continued rather unfavorable, with frost reported in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The official estimate of the Canadian wheat crop of 282,000,000 bushels given out during the week was higher than most private estimates, but represented a reduction of almost 200,000,000 bushels from the amount harvested last year. Wet weather in the Northwestern states was also a factor in strengthening the wheat market, as indications of a wet harvest in the spring wheat belt were beginning to cause some apprehension. Receipts of new spring wheat increased at Minneapolis, but quite a few of the arrivals showed the effect of too early cutting. The moisture test of the wheat was high and some of the farmers appeared anxious to dispose of their grain as soon as possible, and in some instances had not allowed the grain to properly dry out before threshing. The average run of new wheat, however, was of satisfactory milling quality and of good weight. New No. 1 dark northern sold mostly at 5c to 10c over the September future price. Offerings of new durum wheat also increased, but premiums were well maintained and No. 1 amber sold around 6c to 8c over the Duluth September price. Receipts of red winter wheat also showed the effects of wet weather in that territory and an increasing percentage of the arrivals contained excessive moisture. The demand for hard winter wheat was principally from local mills, as Northwestern mills were out of the market awaiting a heavier movement of spring wheat. The demand was much below normal for this season because of the poor flour demand, and premiums for cash wheat were somewhat lower at Kansas City and other hard winter wheat markets. Farmers were not selling freely at current offerings, which were around $1.10 per bushel net to them, but wet weather delaying threshing was also an influence in the slower movement. Trade reports indicate that possibly half of the crop of hard winter wheat is still in farmers hands.

The sharp advance in the corn market was caused almost entirely by weather conditions. Receipts continued light and demand was of moderate volume and not urgent from any source. Buyers generally were taking only sufficient grain for their immediate needs and were not inclined to accumulate stocks at the present price level. Further sales of Argentine corn were reported at Pacific Coast markets. A cargo said to contain about 30,000 tons was received at San Francisco early in the week and was reported sold at around $1.23 per bushel sacked f. o. b. cars at that market. This was about 20c per bushel less than corn from Omaha could be delivered to that market at present prices prevailing at Omaha. Another cargo of about 10,000 tons has also been bought by the Western dealers. No. 3 yellow corn was quoted on Friday at Chicago at $1.18⅝ to $1.20; Kansas City, $1.10@1.10½; Omaha, $1.11½; St. Louis, $1.19; Sioux City, $1.08¼@1.09.

The oats market followed that of corn and prices at the close Friday showed a net advance of about 4c per bushel. Receipts of new oats increased during the week, but the movement was much below normal, as wet weather over a large part of the oats belt has delayed harvesting and threshing. Many of the receipts also showed the effect of wet weather and contained excessive moisture, but were otherwise of good quality. The demand was rather dull at the higher price as buyers felt that prices would be lower when the movement became most general. There was a feeling among producers, however, that with the scarcity of corn, oats would probably work higher, and it is doubtful whether the usual heavy after-harvest movement of oats will materialize.

The rye market was quiet and easier and did not share in the strength of other grains. Milling rye sold at about 2½c over the September price at Minneapolis, but export demand was lagging and September rye on Friday at Minneapolis closed at 85⅛c, a net decline of ¼c for the week.

The barley market was about 3c lower than at the close of the previous week upon heavier receipts of new crop grain.

ST LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 16.—Corn futures closed 3 to more cents higher and wheat from about 1¼c to 2⅛c better, the coarse grain finishing at top prices for day. It was a weather market throughout, apprehension over possible frost damage to Canadian wheat and cool weather injury to corn bringing about buying.

In the local cash grain market soft wheat was 2c to 3c higher and hard 1⅛c higher. Demand was good. Cash corn was 1c to 3c higher and demand good. Oats were steady to ½c lower. Demand was good.

Strength of corn futures featured the early period of trade, prices ranging up to 3 cents. Wheat had limited range above previous close. Liverpool wheat closed 2⅛ to 2⅜d higher.

Continued unfavorable weather and adverse crop reports were the influences in the market. The absence of summer weather, beneficial for the growing crop, created a bullish sentiment.

September wheat opened at $1.29¾; December wheat $1.34¾; May wheat $1.39¼; December corn $1.16⅝, and May corn $1.17¼.

St. Louis receipts were 790 sacks of wheat; 150 cars local and 50 through; 25 cars of corn local and 11 through; 108 cars of oats local and 48 through; 27 cars of hay local and 14 through.

NEW HIGH LEVELS FOR THE SEASON IN GRAIN MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—All grain prices made new high levels for the season today with the exception of September wheat. Corn led the van. Weather conditions were a big factor in the market not only today but for the entire week. Provisions were quiet and show little change.

Corn was easily the leader of the speculative grain trade today as well as most of the week. Closing prices were 1½c to 4c higher than last night, and this made the week's gain 7¼c to 15c. The bull movement will be attributed to the belief that it will be impossible to mature most of this year's corn crop. Prof. Cox of the local Weather Bureau said yesterday that Chicago would have no summer. Cash situation is not so strong and this is the reason that September gains were only one-half of those scored in the new-crop months. Country is selling no corn to arrive, but consignments are increasing. Sales of 100,000 bu of corn were made to go to store and 20,000 bu for shipment. Vessel room was chartered for 100,000 bu corn to Buffalo.

Reports of frost in Manitoba as well as the optimistic announcement in regard to the reparations settlement was the cause for much of the buying of wheat today. The strength in corn helped to prevent wheat prices from declining earlier in the week and closing prices today were 4⅜c to 7¼c higher than a week ago, and 1⅝c to 3⅜c higher than last night. Hedging pressure was noneffective because of the expansion in speculative buying. Shipping sales were 10,000 bu and 400,000 bu were sold to go to store. Vessel room was chartered for 200,000 bu wheat to Buffalo. Seaboard reported a light export business, probably not over 100,000 bu. Chicago is now at a premium over Winnipeg again and this is diverting business to the latter market.

Oats 5c to 6¼c higher than a week ago and 1¼c to 1⅝c higher than last night. Wet weather reported causing damage to oats in shock and retarding the movement as well as the strength in corn were the bullish features of the week and day. Shipping sales were 45,000 bu and 50,000 bu were sold to go to store.

Provisions were inactive most of the week as well as the day. The big increase in lard stuff for the first half of the month caused some buying early, but it was not broad enough to absorb profit-taking sales. The week's changes were: Lard, 22½c to 27½c higher; ribs unchanged to 12½c lower, and bellies 2½c to 12½c higher. Lard unchanged to 2½c lower; ribs, 2½c higher; bellies, 2½c to 10c higher.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—In today's stock market much was made of the fact that many of the more important industrials went higher than their previous top for the summer's upward swing, made on the morning of August 4. This was true of Baldwin Locomotive, which reached 125, and American Can, which crossed 130. Very large transactions attended the advance in U. S. Steel common to 110, but later on realizing sales made themselves felt in this stock.

The Bond Market.

Bonds closed the week strong and fairly active but there was no burst of buying enthusiasm such as was witnessed in stocks. Speculative rails were among the leaders. In this group St. Paul issues were conspicuous with the 4s of 1925 making their best price in many weeks. All the other St. Paul junior bonds were higher. There is more trading interest in the St. Paul issues than in the obligations of any other northwestern road and it was natural that St. Paul bonds should reflect improvement in the agricultural section. The optimistic statement of President Byram also helped.

Other rail issues in demand included St. Louis, San Francisco income sixes and adjustment, both of which were strong at the new high points made this week. Seaboard sixes sold again at their high price, on good earnings reports.

American Agricultural 7 1-2s up more than 2 points on the week yesterday, added to their gains today. Chile Copper sixes were strong at the high of the week. Pierce Arrow 8s held around the top price, 3 points above where they were selling a week ago. International Mercantile Marine 6s gained a less amount but were still well bought. Another industrial bond which has scored a remarkable advance this week amounting to between five and six points was Wickwire Spencer steel 7s.

French bonds were heavily bought today at the best prices of the week. Jugo Slav 8s disregarded reports of political disturbances in the Balkans and held at their new high level. In the South American group the Bolivia 8s rallied from yesterday's selling.

Bonds such as libertys and savings bank rails were steady today as they have been all the week.

Net offerings this week have totaled nearly $146,000,000 which is the largest for any week since February. The most important issue was the B. & O. new first mortgage 5s to the amount of $75,000,000, which were not only promptly sold but went to a premium in the open market.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review, says:

"The market for European exchanges was dominated all through the past week by the progress made toward reaching an agreement on German reparations at the London conference. Apparently banking circles were advised that an agreement was certain to be reached, as the market started off with vigorous gains on Monday, and on that day sterling sold at $4.57 for demand, a new high for the year. A strengthening influence around the high levels was also furnished in the continued ease in money here and firmer rates in London, which caused further transmission of funds from this city to England. Toward the end of the week sterling, while holding a firm tone, receded from its high level with a brisk upturn coming in yesterday's early trading. French exchange swung over a wide range, advancing to 5.72 on Monday, and, after a reaction to 5.48, moved up again close to its high price at the beginning of the week. Dutch exchange made a new high record for the year, guilders selling at 39.15, and there was a display of strength also in Swiss exchange and in exchange on Scandinavian points. Belgian naturally followed French, ranging from 5.08 to 5.24. Spanish held steady during the first half of the week, but later moved up with other leaning Continental rates. There were moderate movements in silver exchange, due to the activity in the silver market, resulting from purchases for German account. Czecho-Slovakia was strong, moving up from 2.95 to 2.99 and coming close to its high of the year.

"Foreign exchanges were steady on a moderate volume of business. The range was much narrower than in recent full day's trading. This is partly due to the usual week-end let up and also to the waiting attitude now adopted by traders against the formal announcement of the result of the London conference on reparations. With German agreement to allied proposals for evacuation of the Ruhr the last big point of difference seems to have been cleared up, though much is yet to be done before we may expect actual flotation of a German loan. Sterling at $4.54⅞ was virtually unchanged, while French francs held at 5.69¼ their previous closing level. Other European currency rates were generally slightly higher. A feature of a further advance in Canadian dollars, which now are quoted at a discount of but 1-16th.

OIL SHARES PROMINENT IN WEEK'S CURB TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Strength shown in the dealings on the stock exchange were reflected on the curb exchange today and numerous advances were recorded on exceptionally brisk activity for a short session at this season. New high records were obtained in Commonwealth Power and Foundation Co. preferred.

Increased activity also was noted today in the Petroleum industry. The improvement in those shares, however, was generally moderate and lacked the vigor that developed in other departments. Former leaders such as Prairie Oil and Standard Oil of Indiana were confined to only fractional variations in price.

During the week there were many important features, including an advance in Radio Co. preferred, new stock to a new high record, crossing 44. Many other issues in the industrial list were active and strong, accumulation of the utility issues being again in evidence. Lehigh Power made a gain of 2 points and American Power & Light rose 18 points to 350.

Motor stocks were active. Ford of Canada advanced 7 points to 450 and there were transactions in Stutz Motor at 5 to 6½. Lehigh Valley Coal was in steady demand, making a new high record on advance of 2 points. Ward Baking issues both rose about 2 points.

The Petroleum list was unsettled by the suspension of dividend payments on Standard Oil of Kansas and that stock had a sudden drop of 4¼ points to 32¼ but later recovered about half its loss. Standard Oil of Nebraska in the period of weakness yielded 9½ points to 235¼. South Penn dropped 7 points to 123 and Ohio Oil yielded 4½ points to 55. When two other Standard Oil companies declared the regular dividends Friday, a firmer tone developed and some of the losses were regained. Imperial Oil of Canada and Royal Canadian both held strong when many other stocks were weak. Magnolia sold as low as 127, a loss of 11 points from its last sale prior to this week but moved up again in the later trading.

Rank and file of steer receipts at the National Stockyards past week went to range steers from Oklahoma. While there was quite a sprinkling of cornfed cattle included, still the showing of strictly choice fed natives was scarce and warmed up grades made the big end of the showing. On native fed steers the market was unevenly lower, with big end of steers showing a 25c to 50c reduction. Steers selling under $9 received the brunt of the punishment. A top on full loads of $10.25 was made, while bulk moved from $8.50 to $10. Western steers averaged 25c to 35c lower in an uneven session. Best cake fed cattle suffered with the grassers in this division of the trade. A top of $8.15 was made with Kansas grassers, while bulk of grass cattle moved from $4.50 to $7. Good yearlings were steady to 25c lower. No prime yearlings were shown. A spread of $8.75 to $9.75 caught these grades. Medium heifer and yearlings sold 25c to 30c lower in the main and were draggy sale at the best. Choice beef cows were around a quarter lower, but medium kinds were easily 50c off and about as slow a market as has been recorded here in months. Bulk of the cows sold from $3.50 to $5, with a top of $7. Canners and cutters moving in a spread of $1.75 to $3.25 were steady. Bulls weathered the storm until late in the week when a quarter was taken off most transactions. A range of $3.50 to $4.75 caught all except the top bologna and sausage kinds which were quotable up to $5.25. A strong demand was evidenced for quality stockers and feeders. Weight made little difference and the market was good for the better grades, which sold up to $7.75, while bulk of sales were in a spread of $4.50 to $6. Plain stock cattle were off in sympathy with killing cattle. Veal calves were $1 at the high time. A top of $11.50 was made last week. Canner yearlings sold from $2.25 to $2.50 and were fully steady.

Hog Run Generous.

Fluctuations in both receipts and prices featured the last week's trading in swine, offerings for the six-day period showing a generous total compared with recent weeks. The entire supply aggregated 66,415 head, compared with a run of 57,888 for the previous week and 76,061 for the corresponding period a year ago. The opening of the week witnessed a flurry in receipts, the Tuesday run being the heaviest on record since the second week in July, 1924, the eighth day of that month having a run of 22,018 head. Toward the close of the week however, the supplies began to dwindle, later runs ruling light in volume. Quality was about like the average, receipts including a generous quota of the half fat grassy kinds. Prices for the week closed somewhat lower, closing sales ranging from weak to 5c lower than the previous week's windup. High top for the week was $10.45, with the low day dropping to $9.65. The decline is shown mainly by the best butcher hogs, sales of the 190-pound kinds or heavier ranging from $10.15 to $10.25 mainly, the latter figure representing the closing top. Lighter hogs from 160 to 180 lbs. are steady to weak at $10 to $10.15 largely, prices depending, of course, on the weight and quality of the offerings. Pigs too, show a lower tendency for the week, medium and good weight pigs suffering the changes. Offerings from 130 to 160 lbs. are 25c lower at $9.25 to $10 largely, medium weight kinds showing the same decline at prices ranging from $[illegible] to $9.25 generally. The lighter pigs and pee wees from 110 lbs. and down show practically no change at $8.00 to $8.75 mostly, according to weight and quality displayed. Packer sows closed 10c to 15c lower for the week, sales from $8 to [illegible] largely. No material change is shown in stags at $6.00 to $7.00 for this class. Closing quotations on hogs are as follows: Best butcher, 190 pounds and up at $10.15 to $10.25; lighter kinds, 160 to 180 pounds at $10 to $10.15. Strong weight pigs, 130 to 160 pounds average at $9.25 to $10; medium weights, 110 to 130 pounds at $8.75 to $19.25, and lighter pigs and pee wees at $8 to $8.75. Packer sows, $8 to $8.10, and stags at $6 to $7 generally.

Lamb Prices Higher.

Receipts in the sheep and lamb department ruled generous last week, although the supply was not excessive. Total for the six-day period reached 16,411 head, compared with an offering of 15,776 for the previous week and a run of 10,552 for the corresponding period a year ago. As a general rule receipts showed good quality, a fair proportion of the fat native kinds being included in the arrivals. There was also a number of the off quality grades here for sale, the demand for this class being somewhat limited as is usually the case. Prices for the week show a higher trend, spots in the best lambs showing a 50c gain over the previous week's close. The week's top reached $13.00 to the packers, closing quotations on good to choice lambs at $12.50 to $13.50, medium to good grades selling at $11.50 to $12.50 and the plain to medium sorts of lambs in a spread of $9.00 to $11.50, depending, of course, on the weight and quality displayed by the different offerings. Gains on the off quality lambs ranged from 25c to 50c. Cull lambs closed about steady at $7.00 largely, skips unchanged at $3.00 to $5.00. Prices on all classes of sheep continue in practically the same rut as was prevalent the previous week. The supply of this class was very light with buyers taking the bigger proportion of the light fat ewes in a spread of $5.50 to $6.00 and the medium and heavy grades from $4.00 to $5.00 mostly. Prices on the weightier grades varied, some selling under $4.00, this depending on the weight and quality displayed by the individuals. Choppers and bucks show a stronger trend for the week, sales ranging from $2.00 to $3.00 largely. Canners are quotable at $1.00 to $1.50 mostly, some sales higher occasionally.

Horses and Mules.

A fair run of horses last week sold on a satisfactory basis. The outlet was broader with Cubans in the market for some good riding types and pack horses weighing from 1600 to 1800 pounds. Local trade, however, was confined to good quality work animals and horses suitable for the Southern farm trade. In the mule market the demand centered for good, toppy miners and fat cotton mules. Plain and common plug horses, however, are still selling mean.

SHARP RECESSIONS IN COTTON PRICES

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—A continuation of the selling movement inspired by yesterday's increased crop estimates caused a further decline of nearly a cent a pound in the cotton market today. December contracts broke to 25.30c, representing a decline of 96 points from Friday's closing quotation and 380 points from the high price touched toward the end of last month. December closed at 25.45c, with the general market closing at net declines of 67 to 81 points.

The market was weak and unsettled from the start. Publication of a crop estimate of 13,314,000 bales by one of the prominent cotton firms yesterday apparently brought in a great many selling orders over night. Their execution supplied a moderate demand from the trade and covering by recent sellers, with the result that first prices were 23 to 45 points lower.

Slight bulges following the initial break met increased offerings, most of which were attributed to further liquidation of old long accounts and stop orders were uncovered by the decline. Despite a good demand on the scale down from the 26-cent level for December, contracts were easily secured and the break extended to 25.06c for October and 25.18c for January in the late trading, when active months showed net losses of 90 to 98 points.

The volume of offerings then tapered off and rallies of 15 or 20 points marked dealings at the close. Trade buying reported on a scale-down appeared to be offset by a little more hedge selling from the South and the bulk of the demand responsible for the closing rally was attributed to profit-taking by recent sellers.

There was little, if any, comment on the day's weather news, which, on the whole, was considered favorable for the crop, but part of the buying noted earlier was probably promoted by reports that some of the Massachusetts and Southern mills were increasing their working time.

The more optimistic views of coming crop prospects have been encouraged by reports of rains in the Southwest and the continued absence, comparatively speaking, of boll weevil complaints during the past week. Selling was held in check early in the week by the Southwestern drouth situation and expectations that an early settlement of reparations would be followed by a decided broadening of trade demand. Some doubt also seemed to exist as to whether the rains reported on Wednesday and Thursday had been sufficient to fully relieve droughty conditions in Texas, but these features failed to stimulate general buying and the market made new low ground for the present movement Thursday afternoon on a belief that the crop was making much better progress than usual during August. There was a great deal of comment upon the fact that boll weevil were not mentioned in the weekly report of the Weather Bureau last Wednesday, and the selling of Friday afternoon was accompanied by reports that one of the large spot firms estimated the condition of the crop at 66.6 and the indicated yield at 13,300,000 bales. The report of the Census Bureau showing domestic mill consumption of 346,671 bales for the month of July against 462,654 last year, was about in line with expectations and had little if any effect on the week's market. The declines toward the end of the week were not accompanied by any apparent change of sentiment regarding the prospects for a settlement of reparations, but a tendency to question the market's ability to absorb the weight of the early movement at the prevailing level of prices was evidently coupled with the more bearish talk of crop prospects. Comparatively little hedge selling has been reported here as yet and there have been reports of a steadier basis in the Southwest owing to difficult in securing cotton for August shipment as new cotton is not yet moving freely. Trade interests have been credited with buying in the market here on a scale down but the demand from that source is said to have been in small lots. Sales of print cloths in the Fall River market for the week were estimated at 60,000 pieces.

REPARATION PROBLEM STILL PRIME FACTOR IN MARKETS

Special Wireless to the New York Evening Post.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"The immediate outlook for all markets is largely governed by the outcome of the reparations conference and all forecasts therefore, are subject to that proviso.

"The best quarters apparently are anticipating a speedy formal announcement of the success of the conference, but maintain that many awkward points may have to be arranged later. However, if true this would seem to indicate considerable delay in the flotation of a German loan, because it is clear that the American and other bankers will never consent to a lending operation until all obstacles inimical to the security of bondholders be removed. It is considered that your power of absorbing two million pounds sterling of a German loan has been enormously increased by your recent monetary developments. We understand that your banking and financial houses, which some months ago had large stocks of securities in hand, now are nearly cleared out of sound securities, thus increasing their readiness and ability to absorb a German loan if sufficiently well secured and attractive.

Loan Reception.

"It is extremely doubtful as to the reception of a German loan here even under the best circumstances. Doubtless it could easily be underwriten and even absorbed by financial institutions which are prepared to mix bonds with other securities, but the public here and in France may fight shy.

"Considerable gambling operations are going on here and elsewhere in German and Prussian bonds but more serious people express their hopes in Germany's future by supporting certain interests in German banking and industrial concerns. If all goes well these syndicates may make huge sums, but anything like a sudden smash in the conference or an outbreak of communism in Germany would give a nasty jar to these and other financial interests here, which recently have been backing ultimate successful reconstruction in Germany.

The Gold Problem.

"Apart from the reparations crisis with its big ramifications, the next point of interest is the possible general economic developments resulting from your huge arrivals of gold. The recent fall in your money rates, the rise in prices and the rise in sterling have stimulated afresh, the idea that, as gold continues to flow to you your prices will rise and sterling also will advance. Some prominent bankers even are predicting that by the end of the year or in the next sterling will go to parity, gold will leave you and inflation will begin here.

"These considerations, however, are rather premature and apparently ignore the extent to which the recent rise in sterling was accentuated by temporary influences like your tourist demands, European outlays and the temporary deposit of money here as a result of the difference between your money rates and ours, plus expectations of a further rise in sterling. It may be argued that even if sterling went to dollar parity you will soon begin to withdraw balances here on expectations of ultimate decline."

Mid-August Social Dullness Is Brought to End by Change in Wedding Dates and Engagements

Eula Wilson and McDougal Smith, Whose Marriage Was to Have Been a Notable Fall Event, Wed Friday at Bride's Home—Daughter of Hawaiian Islands Governor to Marry Former St. Louisan in Honolulu Aug. 28.

AN ABRUPT cessation of the customary social dullness of mid-August was occasioned last week by the unexpected change in three wedding dates and an engagement announcement, while arrangements for one of the most important of the October weddings and plans for two debutant balls hint at a fall season of more brilliance than at first was anticipted.

Miss Eula Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham Wilson of 38 Washington terrace, whose marriage to Elsworth A. McDougal Smith, son of Dr. and Mrs. Elsworth F. Smith, was to have been a notable fall event, changed her plans less than a fortnight ago, and the ceremony was performed late yesterday afternoon at the Wilson home. A summery floral effect was produced in the receiving rooms of the house by clusters of pale pink roses and white delphinium combined with cool-looking green smilax. The bridal party stood in front of an improvised altar, banked with pink roses and flanked with silver candelabra, which was built against the mantel in the drawing room, and the Rev. Dr. William Crowe of the Westminster Presbyterian Church read the service. The bride was preceded by her sister, Mrs. Reed McClellan Brown of Germantown, O., formerly Miss Julia Wilson, as matron of honor, and Mrs. Brown's children, Celeste and Reed Brown Jr., carried her train. Alfred Bevis was best man.

The bridal gown was of filmy white lace over bridal satin. Orange blossoms at the waist line were the only adornment, and clusters of them weighted the tulle lined lace train. The tulle veil fell from a coronet of old family rose point lace, softened at either side by orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley. Mrs. Brown was gowned in eehru georgette, with a picture hat of brown maline completing the costume, and carried pink roses. A reception followed.

Because of the absence from town of so many of the socially prominent, the guests, which included only relatives and close friends, were invited by telephone. Dr. Smith returned home from their summer home in Point-aux-Barques, Mich., for the ceremony, and William Venable Wilson, who with his family are also spending the summer in Michigan, attended. Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their family, and Mr. Brown's sister, all of Germantown, comprised the out-of-town guests. They, with the bridal party and Mr. and Mrs. Soulard Cates, Miss Augusta Cook, Miss Xalissa Harris, Miss Ruth Hennings, Thomas C. Hennings Jr., Thomas Wagner Jr., and William Wilson, were seated at the flower-bedecked bridal table.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have departed on a honeymoon trip, and will make their home in Lebanon, Mo., where he has business interests. The bride attended Mary Institute and is a graduate of Miss Shipley's School in Byrn Mawr. Mr. Smith attended both Washington and St. Louis Universities.

A long-distance telephone message last night from the prospective bride to her parents, announced that Miss Dorothy Partridge and Lynn Hamilton Gamble, whose wedding also was scheduled for October would be married within a few days in Chicago, and Miss Partridge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Samuel Partridge of 5188 Cabanne avenue, departed for that city, yesterday. Miss Partridge went there a fortnight ago to visit a young woman from Minneapolis and Mr. Gamble has business interests there. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gamble of 5736 McPherson avenue.

Dispatches Monday from opposite ends of the country, announced respectively the engagement of Miss Frances Farrington, daughter of Wallace Rider Farrington, Governor of the Hawaiian Islands, and Mrs. Farrington, to John R. Whittemore, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Whittemore of "Paradero," Santa Barbara, Cal., and the wedding date of Miss Catherine Dula Edgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn Clay Edgar Jr., and Jerome Meyer, which has been changed from October to Wednesday, Aug. 27. The betrothal of Miss Farrington and Mr. Whittemore is of particular interest, as the Whittemore family formerly resided here, and are related to the prominent St. Louis family of that name. Mrs. Harry Knapp is a sister of Mr. Whittemore. The wedding will take place in Honolulu, Aug. 28, and the couple will make their home in California.

The marriage of Miss Edgar and Mr. Meyer will take place at Bolton's Landing, on Lake George, N. Y., in the Episcopal Church there. The Rev. Ernest M. Stires of New York will be the officiating clergyman, and the bridal party will include Martha Bixby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bixby of Portland place as flower girl, and John Calvin Roberts, best man. The Edgar and Bixby families have been at Lake George all summer.

Of scarcely less interest are the balls at which two of next season's buds will be introduced. Both will be at the St. Louis Club. Miss Barbara Bay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield C. Bay, will make her bow Nov. 14, and Miss Elizabeth Bemis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bemis of 5 Kingsbury place, will be presented Nov. 7.

While visiting in St. Louis for a day last week, Miss Dorothy Simmons announced Oct. 18 as the date of her marriage to Walter J. Hock of Detroit. It will be a late afternoon garden ceremony, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Simmons of the Clayton and Hanley roads, and a reception will follow. The bridal party has not been chosen, but will include friends of the bride who were presented to society at the same time three seasons ago. Miss Simmons has departed for Estes Park where her parents are spending the summer, after spending a week in Detroit in search of a sight for a home, which Mr. Hock will build for her.

St. Louisans Active In Social Affairs at New England Resorts

Dances, Athletic Events and Parties Feature Closing Month of Vacation at Many Places Along Coast—Yacht Club Organized at Bar Harbor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—The most brilliant ball of the season and the first to be given at Oakland Farm for many years, was that of Friday night, when Mr. and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt entertained some 500 members of the colony. The electrical decorations transformed the grounds, house, and horse show ring into a veritable fairyland. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt were assisted in receiving by the latter's mother, Mrs. Frederick Martin Davies of New York, by Vanderbilt's mother, Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, and by Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt. Among the guests from the villa colony was Mrs. Dan W. Jones of St. Louis and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman of Boston.

This has been tennis week and, as usual, the smartest gowns worn during the season made their appearance at the Casino for the tournament. Mrs. Vanderbilt opened her magnificent estate for the visiting players on Thursday and the same evening Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons gave a dance at Harborview for Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Vanderbilt, many of the tennis players being among the guests.

Among those who entered the invitation tournament was Wray Brown of St. Louis, who was defeated by Nathaniel W. Niles, 6—0, 6—4. Mr. Niles is a veteran of the Boston courts and put up a splendid game against the Western player.

Brilliant Dance is Given at Narragansett Pier.

NARRAGANSETT-PIER, R. I., Aug. 16.—The most brilliant dance of the season was that given at the Scarborough Club on Saturday night, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Caryl Roberts of Philadelphia, assisted by a large number of the cottagers.

Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert of St. Louis has as her guest for the remainder of the summer her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson Lambert, and their small son, Donaldson Lambert Jr.

In Jamestown, the girls' boat race on Tuesday afternoon drew a large number of spectators to the Conanicut Yacht Club. In the Marconi rig class the winner, finished three minutes ahead of her opponent, Miss Vernon Lahens, in the Panther. Miss Lahens' engagement to Alfred Henry Jones of St. Louis a week or two ago, was one of the interesting events of the summer. Among others taking part was Emily McKittrick of St. Louis, whose Elf came across the finishing line third.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rockwell, who have been visiting Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert at Sagamore cottage, have returned to their home in New York this week.

Mrs. Leo Moser and her daughter, Miss Lousita Moser of St. Louis, motored from their home to Watch Hill. They will spend the month at the Ocean House, where they have many friends, made during previous visits to the resort.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Holbrook and the Misses Lucile and Marguerite Holbrook of St. Louis are at the Ocean House, Watch Hill, for the month of August.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Yantis of St. Louis have arrived at Watch Hill for their annual visit at the Ocean House.

The prize winners at this week's bridge and mah jongg party at the Ocean House included Miss Lousita Moser of St. Louis.

The principal golfing event of the season at the Misquamicut Golf Club is the men's annual championship tournament which was held this week. The entry list included W. G. Yantis, Dr. Edward S. Travers, and Allen T. West, a pretty fair representation from St. Louis.

Many St. Louisans Visiting New England Resorts.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 16.—The middle week of August finds the New England summer resorts filled with visitors who are given wide choice of interesting affairs social, political, and charitable. On Wednesday Senator Henry Cabot Lodge opened his home at Nahant for a garden party at which the Essex County Republican Women's Club were guests.

On Thursday every one motored over to Gloucester for the mah jong fete for the benefit of the local hospital, held on the hospital grounds.

On Friday an afternoon concert was given at the house of Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge at Manchester, for the benefit of a settlement house in Boston, for which many of the more prominent members of the North Shore colony were patronesses.

Del Monte's at Magnolia on Saturday night was one of the gayest dances of the season. Among those who entertained at dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Perry of St. Louis, who are with Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick at Stonehurst, Magnolia.

The first children's party of the season was held at the Oceanside, Magnolia, on Saturday afternoon. There were games, favors, balloons, paper hats, noise-makers, concluding with a march to the dining-room for ice cream and cake. Among the little people present was Eugene Perry, grandson of Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick of St. Louis.

Mrs. Charles Baker, Miss Edith M. Baker and Miss Emma K. Baker of St. Louis are newcomers to the Oceanside, making their first visit to the North Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Brittain of St. Joseph have arrived at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, to spend August.

At the New Ocean House, Swampscott, golf holds an important place in the day's program, and each week a tournament is arranged by the athletic director. Last week Miss Sylvia Walden of St. Louis was winner of the third prize for women.

Mrs. Mayme F. Walden and Miss Sylvia M. Walden of St. Louis are among the week's arrivals at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Norton of St. Louis are spending the late season at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Mr. R. E. Hastings of St. Joseph is a guest at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, for a short stay.

The Annisquam section of Cape Ann was thrown into sadness by the drowning of Mrs. Thomas F. Galt of St. Louis and a friend, both members of the cottage colony. The two women went out in a canoe to paddle to Wingaersheek Beach to go in bathing. One of the sudden squalls so frequent along the coast overtook them, and it is thought the canoe was swamped almost immediately, although no one saw the accident. Mrs. Galt's body was recovered several days later eight miles from the place where the canoe was last seen. The Galts have had a cottage at Annisquam and with their three young people have been popular members of the summer colony.

The second annual Cape Ann junior tennis championship will be held at the Rockport Country Club next Monday, beginning at 9 in the morning, the matches to be open to residents of and visitors to Cape Ann. A total of 15 cups are to be awarded. Last summer, the first of the championship games, there were 63 entries, and among the winners was Miss Florence Jones of St. Louis, in the girls' singles.

An auction sale of paintings by the members of the North Shore Art Association is to be a feature of the tea given this afternoon at the Eastern Point home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wing Prestiss, the proceeds to go to the treasury of the association. Among those who have contributed works is Mrs. Kathryn Cherry of St. Louis, whose summer home is "Boathouse Studio," at Rocky Neck, as well as other prominent artists of the Cape Ann art colony.

The will of the late George H. Shields of St. Louis has been offered for probate in the Barnstable County Probate Court, Cape Cod, by his sons, George H. Shields Jr. and Leighton Shields of St. Louis.

New Yacht Club Is Organized at Bar Harbor, Me.

MAINE COAST, Aug. 16.—The announcement of the organization of a yacht club at Bar Harbor is one of the most important events of recent years. The movement has been under way for some time, but now the organization has been completed and plans made for the remainder of the season. Edward Browning of Philadelphia was elected commodore, and Joseph Pulitzer of St. Louis rear commodore. Pulitzer is also on the board of directors, who have already made plans for a series of races this month for the one-design class of 17-footers. Among those owning boats of this class are Pulitzer and Mrs. Robert McCormick at Bar Harbor and John D. Rockefeller Jr. and Edsel Ford at Seal Harbor.

The new club has invitations out to owners of larger craft along the Maine coast asking them to participate in an ocean race around Petit Manan light. The trophy for this race has been offered by Joseph Pulitzer, who will enter his new yacht Discoverer in the event.

Another plan is to affiliate all the yacht clubs in this section for both sailing and power boats. Last year the big regatta day brought more than 40 boats from Seal Harbor, Northeast Harbor, Southwest Harbor, Dark Harbor and Sorrento.

Mrs. Charles Pettus and son, Thurston, of St. Louis, are spending the month at the Islesboro Inn, Islesboro.

George S. Tiffany of St. Louis, who is spending the summer at Dark Harbor, gave a dinner for 30 guests at the Islesboro Inn, Islesboro, on Saturday night, before the weekly dance.

For the first time in years the New York Yacht Club has included the Maine ports in its annual cruise, and has made Islesboro North Haven and Bar Harbor, the vessels racing for the various cups along the shore.

R. S. Brookings and H. Guy Herring of St. Louis are among the week's arrivals at the Samoset, Rockland Breakwater.

Frederick Rydstrom, who has been spending the early summer with his family at Trefethen, Portland Harbor, has returned to his home in St. Louis.

One Practical Method of Regaining Youth

Age is a matter of appearances. Some people at forty look sixty: Ill health, worry, and defective vision are the greatest sources of premature age.

There are many remedies offered to the public for rejuvenation. None of them accomplish much, except where the appearance of age is due to defective vision.

For 20 years I have specialized in the correction of visual defects solely by the means of my carefully prescribed Glasses. My Glasses banish eyestrain headaches, permit the strained eye muscles to relax and in consequence, eliminate those lines of premature age in your face that result from chronic squinting and peering.

One single moderate charge (no extras) covers testing, lenses, frames, and fitting.

CAPITAL SOCIETY AWAITS VISIT OF WALES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Washington society is aflutter with excitement over the news that H. R. H. the Prince of Wales will pay a visit to the capital to offer his respects to President and Mrs. Coolidge.

The news that the Prince is coming has brought many hostesses back to town, especially those in the diplomatic set who feel that the briefness of his visit will not be such that it will prevent the British Ambassador and Lady Esme Howard from entertaining at the embassy in his honor even though the event may simply be "afternoon tea."

No visitor in recent years has so won the hearts of social Washington as the "Bonny Prince" from over the seas and the members of the "I danced with the Prince of Wales Club of debutantes of three seasons ago are wondering whether they will be able to repeat the boast again this year. It is stated unofficially that while here the Prince will lay a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington and Admiral Dewey's grave in the same hallowed spot.

Because of their mourning the President and Mrs. Coolidge will entertain at only a small luncheon at the White House. The last time the Price was at the White House was to visit the sick Wilson, who received him propped up in bed and, of course, there could be no special entertainments at the executive mansion for him on that account.

It is a source of great pleasure to the Missouri colony to learn that Gen. John A. Pershing, Missouri's own soldier, who is at the head of the American armies, will renew his wartime acquaintance with the Prince and have an audience with him while he is here. The General, who has come West for his final inspection tour of active service, will return in time to greet the Prince and to direct the activities of defense test day on Sept. 12, after which he will retire from active duty.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, who know the Prince quite well, will return in time to participate in his welcome to the national capital.

Many friends from Missouri now in the capital have given a cordial welcome to a man recently come to the Church of the Epiphany rectorship here who was one of the popular clergymen of St. Louis several years ago.
ybiuel86 -dpwwkshrdlutpapuaupau

This is the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, who was formerly for ten years in fact rector of Saint Peter's Episcopal Church in St. Louis. Dr. and Mrs. Phillips have opened the Epiphany rectory on K street Northwest and have already had a number of informal receptions for old friends there.

Mrs. James M. Thomson, formerly Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the late Speaker, and Mrs. Champ Clark left Clarksburg immediately after the notification exercises for St. Louis, where she will be the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Colonel and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, after which she will go to visit her mother, Mrs. Champ Clark in Bowling Green, Mo.

USE CANTHROX
Shampoo

WASHING SHINGLE-BOBBED HAIR

Those who luxuriate in the time-saving shingle-bob coiffure especially appreciate the simplicity of a canthrox shampoo.

Enjoy a delightful shampoo at very little effort and for a very trifling cost by getting from your druggist a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid—enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and hair until both are entirely covered by the daintily perfumed preparation that thoroughly dissolves and removes every bit of dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.—ADVERTISEMENT.

REFRESHING

is but one of the many aids to beauty at which the attendants in our Beauty Shop are experts. During the warm Summer days shampoos should be more frequent to keep the hair soft and lustrous and the scalp in healthy condition. An occasional facial massage will freshen the skin, strengthen the pores, and remove disfiguring blackheads.

What to Use and Avoid On Faces that Perspire

Skin, to be healthy, must breathe. It also must perspire—must expel, through the pores, its share of the body's waste material. Certain creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing, especially during the heated period. If more women understood this there would be fewer self-ruined complexions. If they would use ordinary mercolized wax instead of cosmetics they would have healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs a bad skin, also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger underskin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. The exquisite new complexion gradually peeps out, one free from any appearance of artificiality.

Obtain an ounce of mercolized wax from your druggist and apply nightly like cold cream, washing it off mornings. There's nothing better for an over-red skin, tan, freckles or pimples.

FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER RECOMMENDS FRENCH DISCOVERY

TO TAKE OFF FAT

Dr. J. J. RUDOLPH and other Physicians advise SAN-GRI-NA for FAT PEOPLE.

Up to now, reducing had been an almost unsolvable problem. It was either a question of losing a few pounds and ruin your health with dangerous drugs or remain fat. To-day a French physician of unquestionable reputation has to his credit a discovery called "SAN-GRI-NA," which quickly does away with [illegible] obstinate cases of obesity and at the same time improves the health and [illegible] and rejuvenates the entire system. "I consider 'SAN-GRI-NA' not only a [illegible]able fat reducer," says Dr. Rudolph, former health commissioner, but I advise it as a general tonic and health-builder for fat people." Physicians have used "SAN-GRI-NA" themselves, and have prescribed it to their immediate family and [illegible] thus proving that it is absolutely harmless and effective. "SAN-GRI-NA" is a small tablet which should be taken three times a day. It does not contain [illegible] dangerous drugs, and has been used by the discoverer in his own practice [illegible] most remarkable success. It is now recommended and sold in America, by [illegible] druggists only, with guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. "SAN-GRI-NA" does not reduce fat people over night. There is no miracle about it. It is a [illegible] gradual loss of flesh which varies from 4 to 6 pounds a week, leaving the [illegible] stronger and healthier with every pound of fat lost. No flabby tissues or [illegible] will follow the use of "SAN-GRI-NA."

NOTE—Since "SAN-GRI-NA" has been introduced in America, it has [illegible] such a sensation that imitations cannot be avoided. If you want [illegible] sure that YOU ASK AND GET "SAN-GRI-NA." "SAN-GRI-NA" is now sold at [illegible] of Speckart Bros.', Draper's, Enderle's, Otto's, Judge & Dolph's or Wolff-[illegible] Drug Stores.

700 Specially Made Models Just Received From New York

The first big $5.50 sale of the new season. For this event we secured about 700 Hats from several leading New York firms. Styles galore for misses and matrons—everything new and smart in the realm of Fall millinery. Needless to say, early attendance is essential as this sale always attracts hundreds of women.

Plenty of Large Head Sizes

Our Patrons Are Urged to Share These Marvelous Values

Scores of becoming styles. The new high-crown Hats for bobbed heads, youthful off-the-face Hats, cloches, turbans and Hats with large brims; of Lyons velvet, Panne velvet, felt and combinations. Trimmings, colors, everything about these Hats are new and representative of a new season—and the values are unusual enough to justify the purchase of at least two Hats.

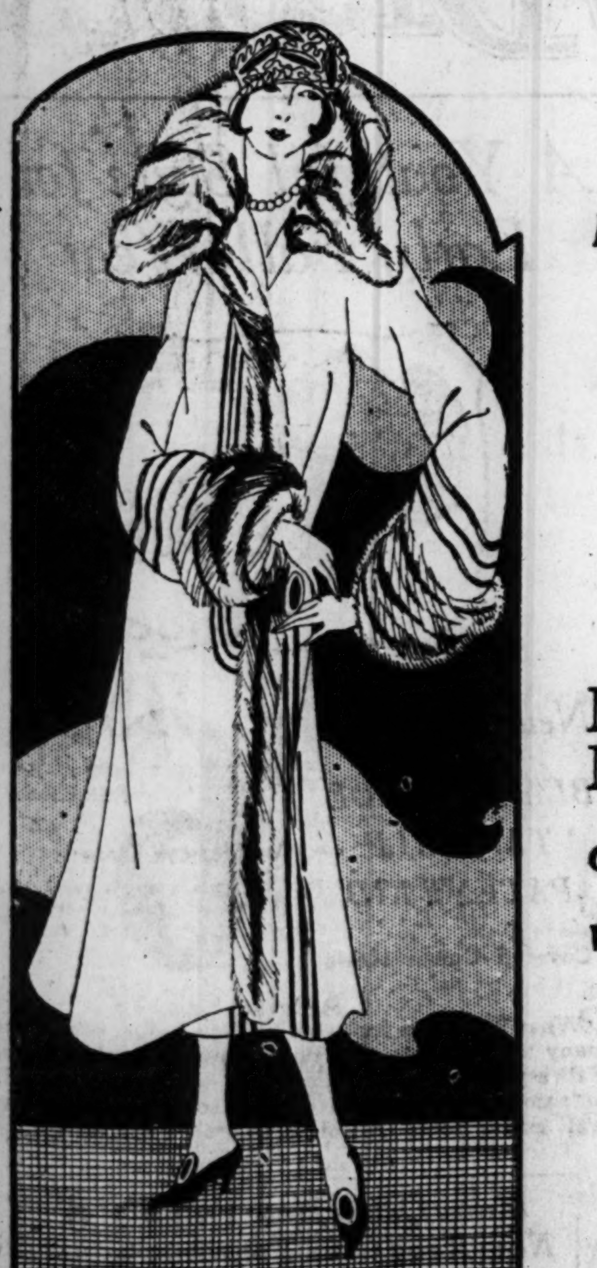
AUGUST ECONOMY SALE of WINTER COATS

Another extraordinary offering of Winter Coats—those wonderfully fur-trimmed models that Fashion has approved for the coming season. Coats purchased at price concessions almost incredible and presented Monday at notable savings.



Regular $75 and $85 Coats for—

And Just 58 Coats Worth Up to $145

Many of the Fur Trimmings Are Worth More Than Our Price for the Entire Coat

Golden Beaver Natural Squirrel Jap Mink Skunk
Viatka Squirrel Muskrat Marmot
Wolf Fox Mink Squirrel Marmink

Stunning Coats that reveal fashion's every new fancy. Huge fur collars and cuffs are the chief trimmings, although stitching, buttons and new sleeve arrangements (particularly the puffed sleeve effect) are cleverly used. Another decided departure is the Tuxedo front model, having a border of fur extending from collar to hem down each side. These Coats are the newest and of a very fine quality, yet the price is quite low, especially for apparel of this character, and so we feel justified in urging our customers to attend this event.

ENGAGEMENTS AND WEDDINGS OF INTEREST

The marriage of Miss Margaret A. Mues, daughter of Mrs. Sophie Mues of 4076 Pope avenue, and George J. Freese, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Freese of 3918 North Nineteenth street, took place Wednesday morning, Aug. 13 at the Holy Trinity Church, the Rev. M. N. Schaller officiating. The Rev. Henry Freese, a cousin of the bridegroom, was celebrant at the solemn high mass following, with the Rev. Joseph Boemerich, deacon, and the Rev. Freese, brother of the bridegroon, sub-deacon. Misses Anna and Agnes Freese were bridesmaids, and George Mues and Henry Freese, brothers of the bride and bridegroom, respectively, groomsmen. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother.

The engagement of Miss Katherine Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Evans of 820 Hamilton avenue, and Charles Cunningham Rieth, was announced yesterday afternoon at a bridge party given by Mrs. Evans for the prospective bride.

Miss Evans was a sophomore last season at Washington University, and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma. Mr. Rieth is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Rieth of 5785 McPherson avenue. He is alumnus of the Washington University Law School and a member of the Missouri Bar Association, and of Kappa Alpha. No date has been set for the wedding.

The guests were Misses Elizabeth Caulfield, Margaret Cunningham, Ruth Israel, Frances Keasley, Leonora Kinnaird, Josephine Newsome, Esther Skinner, Dorothy Stevens, Arline and Marion van Buren, and Dorothy Evans, and Mmes. Willard Cunningham, Milton Koch, Morris Mathis, Hobart Robinson, Mrs. Rieth and Mrs. Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Stern of 5224 Kensington avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Esther Stern, and Joseph H. Seigel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Seigel, of 5648 Etzel avenue.

The engagement of Miss Marie Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe J. Beck of 1415 South Eighth street, to Herbert Lang, formerly of Mount Vernon, Ind., was announced Tuesday evening at a party and shower given by the Beck family. Mr. Lang served overseas in the Eighty-ninth Division during the war.

The following guests were present: Misses Hazel Butler, Mai Freeman, Flora Otto, Julia Bovolak, Viola Ruling, Flora Gross, May Oberbeck, Irene Carroll, Mildred Dickson, Edna Urfer, Rose Schneider, Pearl Williams, Myrtle Vossmeyer, Althea Sappington, Nora Wilson, Louis Roth, Margaret Gregory, Clara Lang and Florence Ruling and Mrs. Rose Jackson and Messrs Frank K. Beck, Forman Jackson, Ed Lang, Alvin Lang, Arthur J. Ruling, Orville Jackson, John S. Jackson, Vernon Beck and G. Grant.

The wedding of Miss Mollie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lappin of 1331 Goodfellow avenue, and Jack Cruvand, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Cruvand of 1425 Leffingwell avenue, will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the Jewish synogogue at 4300 Page boulevard. A dinner will follow at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Cruvand will take his bride to New York on a honeymoon trip, and they will make their home at the Goodfellow avenue address. Miss Bevy Edelman will be maid of honor, and Max Lappin, brother of the bride, is to be best man.

ANTI-SMOKE CAMPAIGN TO BE RESUMED BY RAILROAD MEN

Illustrated Lecture to Be Given Tuesday Night at Railroad Y. M. C. A.

The railroad section of the Smoke Abatement Committee will resume its anti-smoke campaign work at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Railroad Y. M. C. A., Twentieth and Eugenia streets. A lecture, illustrated with a motion picture, will be given by William Pittsford, combustion engineer of the Kewannee Boiler Co. His topic will deal with the trials of the city smoke inspectors.

The sub-committee, composed of J. W. Burrows, H. D. Manley, and P. O. Wood, has conducted 13 instruction sessions at the "Y", which have been attended well by engineers, firemen, and others interested in smoke prevention. It is an objective of the committee to secure the attendance of the stationary engineers and firemen.

JOSEPH LITTAU ASKS DIVORCE

Incompatability of Wife in Brooklyn Alleged By Musician.

Joseph Littau, orchestra leader at the Missouri Theater, filed suit today to divorce Paula Littau, whom he married in 1911, and separated from in 1922.

He charges general indignities, and avers his wife was possessed of an incompatible disposition and nagged and quarreled with him, which "greatly interfered with his efficiency and progress in his work as a skilled musician." She opposed his doing night work, and objected to persons he associated with in his work, the petition sets forth.

There was constant disagreement between them in the matter of the training and education of their two children, Julian A., 13 years old, who was born in Berlin, and Olive Caroline, 7 years old, born in New York. Littau set out that he has been paying $65 a week to Mrs. Littau for herself and children since their separation. She is living in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Named Superintendent of Nurses.

Miss Elinor Parker Murray of New York, has been made superintendent of nurses at Liberty Hospital, 4500 Washington boulevard. She held a similar position for two years at the City Hospital, Trenton, N. J., and previously had been superintendent at the Brooklyn Maternity Hospital. She is a graduate of Columbia University and the University of Pennsylvania.

PARTIES OF WEEK IN ST. LOUIS

Parties for two out-of-town guests have occupied the attention of social circles for the last few days. Miss Felicia Chisolm, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Edward North Chisolm Jr., of 841 Westgate, is entertaining Miss Dorothy Allen of Columbia, S. C., and Miss Evelyn Burton of 5600 Cates avenue, has as her guest Miss Fay Sypert of Tulsa, Ok.

Miss Burton entertained both young women informally, Friday evening, and yesterday gave a bridge party for them, which the following guests attended: Misses Melville Clement, Thelma Cook, La Verne Young, May and Florence McInroy, Gertrude Riley, Frances Smith, Peggy Dee, Ethel McClung, Edna Longmeyer, and Mmes. James Maffit Jr., Clifford Godwin, and George Waldren.

Miss Chisolm will entertain for Misses Sypert and Allen Tuesday afternoon. Miss Sypert will depart for her home the latter part of the week. The hostesses for Miss Allen last week included Misses Charlotte Tellman, who gave a party at Sunset Hill Country Club, and Miss Ruth Kinealy.

Misses Aida and Lee Lipman, of 5612 Julian avenue, will give an informal dance at their home Saturday evening, Aug. 23. Miss Helen Jeanne Newman will be the assisting hostess.

Miss Pearl Wasserkrug, of 5744 Clemens avenue, gave an informal party Wednesday evening, in honor of Miss Gertrude Lippe of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Carp, of 6149 Washington boulevard, will receive their relatives and friends from 4 to 10 o'clock today in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Carp, who were married in Cincinnati, Aug. 14. The bride was Miss Anna Stoll, of Greenville, Miss., and was a student at the College of Music in Cincinnati. After a short stay in St. Louis, the couple will go to Helena, Ark., to reside.

Mrs. E. J. Gau of 5235 Loughborough avenue, gave a shower recently for Mrs. J. C. Thompson, formerly Miss Grace Marie Rammelsburg. Little Mary Ellen Gau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gau, who celebrated her first birthday, represented cupid and presented the gifts to the bride. The guests were Misses Helen Nedderhut, Norma Berg and Florence Jentsch, and Mmes. C. Hermann, H. Schmidt, H. Gau, and S. Danwalter. Mrs. Thompson, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Rammelsburg of Blair avenue, will depart Sept. 1 for Los Angeles where she and her husband will reside.

The St. Louis Lonely Club will meet Friday night, Aug. 22, at Westminster Hall, 3806 Olive street.

Miss Loretta Boellner of Walton road, Overland, Mo., was hostess at a gyspy party Aug. 8. The guests were Misses Cornelia Bolm, Velma Bruening, Ethyl Edscorn, Telsa Edmunds, Lotys Estes, Katherine Francis, E. Gott, Alene Hauger, Beatrice Heys, Helen Johnson, Hazel Milburn, Hattie Molz, Eleanor Ozment, Elizabeth Polster, Helen, Ruth and Elizabeth Sidebotham, Beryl Smith, Dorothy and Mary Young and Mmes. O. A. Boellner, Rosine Bolm, Harry Davis, Charles L. Edscorn, J. C. Johnson and Roy S. Smith, and Messrs O. A. Boellner, Edward H. Bolm, Harry Davis, Ben Edscorn, C. L. Edscorn, Reginald Heys, A. E. Koelling, Melvin Lane, Churchill Lowe, Roy and Earl Molz, Adolph and Walter Mueller, Roy Smith and Thomas Wraight.

A birthday party was given Aug. 13 by Mr. and Mrs. William G. Schmidt, of 5983 Ridge avenue, to celebrate the fifth birthday of their daughter, Jane. The guests were Unetta Mees, Janet Schaefer, Dorothy and Margaret Bessler, Bruce Walsh, Mary and Isabel Head, Helen and Charles Jones, Dorothy and Margaret Maglo.

The St. Louis Women's District Golf Association will play at Riverview Club Wednesday, Aug. 20, on invitation extended by Dr. S. A. Van Hoefen, chairman of the Golf Committee. Jim Pairman, professor at Riverview, has promised some interesting and surprising innovations for Riverview's guests on that day. As is the custom at these district meetings the events will start at 9:30 a. m. and will finish before luncheon.

Halt Oil Work in Rumania.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 16.—The Standard Oil Co. has suspended all its construction work in Rumania and has reduced its staffs here, while awaiting a decision by company officials as to whether operations in Rumania will be entirely discontinued because of the new mining and oil legislation.

BARELY TIME TO GET PLAZA ISSUE ON FALL BALLOT

Supplementary List of Signatures for Referendum Must Be In by September 10.

It is possible that the referendum proposition by which the voters of St. Louis will determine whether the ordinance locating the $4,000,000 bond issue courthouse on the Memorial Plaza site shall become effective, will get on the ballot of the election Nov. 4 without a day to spare.

Two of the periods for various steps of the referendum process required under the charter, may be reduced, but it is possible there may be no opportunity to reduce them. Unless other steps are taken without the least delay, the two periods referred to not being reduced, the proposition will go over to a costly special election or to the municipal election in the spring, when it likely would figure as an issue in the mayoralty campaign.

Seek Quick Decision.

The Plaza Courthouse Committee, upholding the ordinance, and the Courthouse Referendum Committee, seeking the referendum in the hope voters will veto the ordinance, are both anxious to have the question disposed of quickly. Proponents of the plaza site, including some city officials, want to avoid delay in order to hasten construction of the badly-needed new courthouse.

The Courthouse Referendum Committee comprises interests favoring a downtown site for the new edifice and interested in downtown property.

Initial referendum petitions for which the minimum requirement was 6141 valid signatures of voters, were filed by the downtown group, and on Aug. 11 these petitions were certified by the Election Board as sufficient. In fact they had 7179 valid signatures, making it necessary for the committee to obtain 14,314 supplementary valid signatures within 30 days, or by Sept. 10.

Some Chance of Failure.

Judging from the time required to get the signatures to the initial petitions and the inevitable percentage of invalid signatures, the Plaza Courthouse Committee thinks it will take the full time for the Courthouse Referendum Committee to complete its supplementary petitions. The Plaza group even thinks it possible the other body will fail to get enough names, thus ending its efforts.

On the other hand, the Courthouse Referendum Committee thinks it will have plenty of names and may complete the task sooner than Sept. 10. It delayed two days in starting the supplementary canvass, beginning Thursday.

If the full period is consumed and the Election Board takes its full 10 days thereafter to check the petitions, it will be Saturday, Sept. 20, when that stage is reached. Former Circuit Judge Charles W. Rutledge, chairman of the Plaza Courthouse Committee, believes the Election Board can and will reduce its 10-day period for certification.

Council Then Must Be Considered.

The charter required that the next step in the referendum process shall be reconsideration by the Board of Aldermen of the ordinance, if it chooses. The board is in vacation till Sept. 26, and can be called into special session earlier only by proclamation of the Mayor. Mayor Kiel lately has opposed the plaza site and went on a European trip, from which he has returned, without signing the ordinance. President Neun of the Board of Aldermen signed it as acting Mayor. Rutledge believes Mayor Kiel will be willing to call a special session, to hasten settlement of the controversy.

The plaza site proponents think the Aldermen will vote once more for the plaza location, since they passed the ordinance by a vote of 22 to 2. If a special session of the board is called for Sept. 20 they believe the aldermanic vote can be taken on that day.

In Nick of Time.

The charter provides next for a 15-day period, which would end October 5 if the Aldermen uphold the ordinance promptly, in which the proponents of the referendum may withdraw their request. Withdrawal is not expected, but the period must be allowed. It takes 30 days' notice to get a proposition on the ballot. Thirty days from October 5 will be November 4—election day.

Rutledge points out the delay in the building work if the proposition does not go before the people in November, and the cost of a special election for it, which he places at $65,000. A special election could be called by resolution of the Board of Aldermen, or, if the petitions have 36,845 or more valid signatures, a special election would be necessary automatically. Lacking either of these alternatives, the question would go over to the regular municipal election next April. Rutledge declares there is no doubt it would be an issue in the mayoralty race then, and adds: "Mayor Kiel wouldn't want that." The Mayor planning to run for a fourth term.

HEAVIER DEMAND FOR AID BY VETERANS

New Law Gives Fuller Opportunity for Relief — Red Cross Exceeds Budget.

The Reed-Johnson bill recently passed by Congress, which provides for a more liberal interpretation of service disability among tuberculosis and neuro-psychiatric cases, is partly responsible for the large number of St. Louis World War veterans who were cared for by the St. Louis Chapter of the American Red Cross, P. H. Byrns, executive secretary, states in his monthly report to the Community Fund, of which tre chapter is a member. The chapter assisted 1576 disabled veterans during July.

The new law provides that if tuberculosis develops to a 10 per cent degree prior to Jan. 1, 1925, it is considered as of war origin. The same is true of neuro-psychiatric disorders except that the Government may produce evidence in rebuttal. The old law provided that no veteran suffering from either form of disability was regarded as disabled in service unless the disability developed within three years from the date of his discharge, and supporting evidence was required.

The Red Cross now has the responsibility of caring for the increasingly large number of men who are now arriving at the dependent stage under the more liberal Reed-Johnson bill. The chapter must care for them until they are either rehabilitated and turned back into civilian pursuits or secure adequate Government aid to meet their needs.

In his report, Byrns also pointed out that the chapter also is encountering an increasingly large number of partially disabled ex-service men in need of jobs to supplement compensation paid them by the Government. The unemployment situation during the past few months has been such that great difficulty has been experienced in placing these men. As a result, the St. Louis Chapter's budget for relief has gone far beyond normal anticipations.

Among the men helped by the Red Cross during July, 96 families were given financial relief, the report shows. The remainder were assisted in various ways, such as securing Government claims and hospital care.

RADIO USED IN SEARCH FOR ST. LOUIS COUNTY YOUTH

Mother Offers $50 Reward for Information About Tobias Spinks, 19.

The disappearance of Tobias Spinks, 19-year-old son of Mrs. S. B. Spinks, a widow engaged in truck farming near Chesterfield, St. Louis County, was broadcast to the radio audience of Station WCK, Stix, Baer & Fuller, Thursday night. Hundreds of postcards, bearing the youth's picture, have been distributed and the mother, through Sheriff Willman of St. Louis County, has offered a reward of $50 for information as to his whereabouts.

Young Spinks, also known as Todd, or Tobey, disappeared from home Monday, while his mother was away. He took no belongings and left no note of explanation. The mother is grief-stricken, and fears he may have met with an accident or been stricken too ill to communicate with her.

The youth was a former student of mechanical engineering at St. Louis and Washington Universities. He is about 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs about 150 pounds, has dark black hair and eyes and a prominent mole on the right cheek bone. When he left he wore a brown suit, a light cap and tan shoes.

DEATH SENTENCE AROUSES ITALIAN AFGHAN COLONY

Europeans in Asiatic State Say Countryman Who Shot Policeman Did Not Have Fair Trial.

By the Associated Press.

PESHAWAR, British India, Aug. 16.—The Italian colony of Kabul, Afghanistan, is in a state of excitement and a number of Italians have left the country because of an incident involving an Italian engineer who has been sentenced to death, according to advices reaching here.

It is stated that the engineer was summoned before the police because of a brawl in the Kabul Postoffice. He refused to attend and the police went to his house to arrest him. He is said to have refused them entrance and when they attempted to break in he shot and killed one of them.

Later the engineer, with two compatriots, surrendered. He was tried and sentenced to death by two lower courts, but the sentence awaits confirmation by the third highest court. It is reported that negotiations are under way for a settlement by "blood money," in accordance with a tribal custom. The Italian residents say the engineer did not have a fair trial, according to the Italian ideas of justice.

Take a Tip From Adam

To Adam, Paradise was Home. To the wise among his descendants, Home is Paradise.

Next to "Mother," Home is the most beautiful word in the world.

And yet, unless you own the house in which you live, you can never quite know the inexpressible pride and happiness that is summed up in that one word.

Home Ownership means—

Independence.
Pride.
A Wise Investment.
Insurance Against Old Age.
A Motive for Thrift.
Better Standing With Bankers and Business Men.
Greater Peace of Mind and Bodily Comfort.
Better Citizenship.

And—perhaps greatest of all—a permanent haven for your children, where they can grow to manhood and womanhood, with fresh air and growing things around them; safe, traffic-free streets in which to walk; the music of crickets on Summer nights; vacant lots in which to play baseball; old-fashioned country sounds and sights to enjoy—a glorious heritage that crowded city streets can never give.

Give your children this heritage!

Sit down with friend wife and talk it over. Within easy reach of your work are many beautiful suburbs and residential districts. You can buy a home there on satisfactory terms.

The Post-Dispatch Real Estate advertising columns are here to help you. With their guidance and a day or so's looking around you will find just what you want. Don't put it off! Turn over to the "Real Estate" columns now. Read them closely and constantly. Rich will be your reward.

OREGON MAN SOUGHT HERE

George Lamb, described as 6 feet 4 inches tall, with a dimple in his chin and 30 years old, is being sought in St. Louis by policewomen at the request of his mother at Portland, Ore., who fears he has met with harm. She writes she has not heard from him in many months. He formerly was attached to the Thirty-fifth Engineers and served 19 months overseas, she said.

August E. Bond, 32 years old, is being sought by policewomen here at the request of his mother, Mrs. A. E. Bond of Fond du Lac, Wis. He lived at the Baltimore Hotel until six months ago, the letter said.

POLICE BAND TO GIVE CONCERT FOR ICE FUND

Entertainment to Be at Orpheum Theater, Saturday Evening, Aug. 23.

The St. Louis Police Band will give a concert Saturday evening, Aug. 23, at 8:15 o'clock, at the Orpheum Theater for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Free Ice and Babies' Milk Fund. The ticket sale begins today. Regular Orpheum prices will prevail and the entire proceeds of the affair will accrue to the Babies' Fund, since the Orpheum Theater has been given without charge by the Orpheum Theaters, Inc., through its local representative, E. J. Sullivan.

This is the fourth consecutive year that the use of the Orpheum has been donated for an Ice Fund show and it is hoped that the initial appearanse of the Police Band in concert will realize a good-sized addition for the Ice Fund, which is far behind the records of previous years at the present time.

Weldon, Williams & Lick, theatrical ticket printers, of Fort Smith, Ark., have provided a complete set of tickets for the Saturday night production, and the Banner Sign System, 919-21 Pine street, have made and erected a sign in front of the Orpheum announcing the affair, as their part in making this year's show at the Orpheum a success.

What to Do For Frail, Feeble, Old People

"When age begins to thin the blood all the vital functions slow down and impair the health. In such cases," says Dr. Emil Sauer, "I know of nothing better than true organic iron."

"What old people need most, is something to put back the iron in their blood. Without iron nothing you eat does you any good. Your food merely passes through you. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food."

"For old people who feel their former strength slipping away, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron, which contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and like the iron in your blood. It is a true tonic, blood and body builder, and in my own practice, I have had aged people tell me that they felt years younger often in only a few weeks' time."

Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Emil Sauer, may be had at any good drug store. Try taking two tablets three times a day for two weeks, and if you do not feel years younger with new strength, energy and health, your own druggist will gladly refund your money.

CAMPAIGN BEGUN FOR INITIATIVE ROADS PROPOSA

Good Roads Association an Highway Commissio
Meet on Plan for 764
Mile State Road System

COMPLETION IN SIX YEARS POSSIBL

Proposal Would Increas Automobile License Fe and Put 2-Cent a Gallo Tax on Gasoline.

The campaign of the Missou
State-Wide Good Roads Associ
tion for adoption, at the Novemb election, of the initiative propo al for speeding up the State hig way construction program, form ally was opened here Frid during a joint session of the a sociation and the State High way Commission.

Favorable action on the meas ure, known as Proposal No. 5, wil permit completion of the enti
7640-mile State road system in s years, if the estimation of add tional revenue it would provid are accurate, Theodore Gary chairman of the commission, sai

Questioned afterward as to th road program's status if the pro posal fails, Chairman Gary said
"It wiuld be impossible to sa when the system could then b completed. It would take a muc longer time, since the $60,000,00 of road bonds authorized, wit
Federal Aid, are far below the to tal necessary."

Gary explained, in a speech that the commission, when it be gan to function in 1922, found a accumulation of $28,000,000 in th
Highway Department fund, whic by law had to be put under con tract that year or be lost.

Organization Built Up.

A large administrative organiza tion was built up to handle thos contracts. It has been develope to a high state of efficiency, h said, but will have to be material ly reduced if additional revenue i not forthcoming.

Proposal No. 5 would increas
State automobile license fee 50 pe cent, place a 2-cent a gallon tax o gasoline and authorize issuance o the remaining $45,000,000 of roa bonds at the rate of $15,000,000 year for three years.

Present laws permit sale of $10,
000,000 of road bonds in 1924 an 1925, and $5,000,000 a year there after. Gary said the $10,000,00 for the present two-year period wil be sold before the end of this yea and that contracts are now bein approved in anticipation of such sale.

No funds will be available fo contracts in 1925 unless proposa
No. 5 is adopted. The total o
$5,000,000 a year for subsequen years is much less than is bein handled at present and would require only a fraction of the present administrative organization
Gary said.

"Gas" Tax in 36 States."

Roy F. Britton, president of th
Automobile Club of Missouri, sai that while Missouri ranks eleventh among the States in numbers o automobiles, it is forty-fourth from the top as to amount of State license fee charged. He said 36
States have gasoline tax and tw others are submitting proposals for such tax to a vote this fall.

Britton urged that especial attention be called during the campaign to the fact that the initiative proposal is a statutory measure which may be repealed or amended by the Legislature at will.

The Good Roads Association, recently formed at the suggestion of the Highway Commission, has 10 division chairmen, most of whom were present yesterday. They will name county chairmen. E. J. Mc-
Grew of Lexington is State chair-

CAMPAIGN BEGUN FOR INITIATIVE ROADS PROPOSAL

Good Roads Association and Highway Commission Meet on Plan for 7640-Mile State Road System.

COMPLETION IN SIX YEARS POSSIBLE

Proposal Would Increase Automobile License Fees and Put 2-Cent a Gallon Tax on Gasoline.

The campaign of the Missouri State-Wide Good Roads Association for adoption, at the November election, of the initiative proposal for speeding up the State highway construction program, formally was opened here Friday during a joint session of the association and the State Highway Commission.

Favorable action on the measure, known as Proposal No. 5. will permit completion of the entire 7640-mile State road system in six years, if the estimation of additional revenue it would provide are accurate, Theodore Gary, chairman of the commission, said.

Questioned afterward as to the road program's status if the proposal fails, Chairman Gary said: "It wiuld be impossible to say when the system could then be completed. It would take a much longer time, since the $60,000,000 of road bonds authorized, with Federal Aid, are far below the total necessary."

Gary explained, in a speech, that the commission, when it began to function in 1922, found an accumulation of $28,000,000 in the Highway Department fund, which by law had to be put under contract that year or be lost.

Organization Built Up.

A large administrative organization was built up to handle those contracts. It has been developed to a high state of efficiency, he said, but will have to be materially reduced if additional revenue is not forthcoming.

Proposal No. 5 would increase State automobile license fee 50 per cent, place a 2-cent a gallon tax on gasoline and authorize issuance of the remaining $45,000,000 of road bonds at the rate of $15,000,000 a year for three years.

Present laws permit sale of $10,000,000 of road bonds in 1924 and 1925, and $5,000,000 a year thereafter. Gary said the $10,000,000 for the present two-year period will be sold before the end of this year and that contracts are now being approved in anticipation of such sale.

No funds will be available for contracts in 1925 unless proposal No. 5 is adopted. The total of $[illegible],000,000 a year for subsequent years is much less than is being handled at present and would require only a fraction of the present administrative organization, Gary said.

"Gas" Tax in 36 States."

Roy F. Britton, president of the Automobile Club of Missouri, said that while Missouri ranks eleventh among the States in numbers of automobiles, it is forty-fourth from the top as to amount of State license fee charged. He said 36 States have gasoline tax and two others are submitting proposals for such tax to a vote this fall.

Britton urged that especial attention be called during the campaign to the fact that the initiative proposal is a statutory measure which may be repealed or amended by the Legislature at will.

The Good Roads Association, recently formed at the suggestion of the Highway Commission, has 10 division chairmen, most of whom were present yesterday. They will name county chairmen. E. J. Mc-w of Lexington is State chairman and Miss Florence J. Wade is State vice chairman. She will have charge of women's activities.

Contracts Approved.

The Highway Commission held a brief session in the afternoon at which contracts for surfacing or grading of 30 miles of roads in various counties, at an aggregate cost of $1,255,238, were approved. They include paving with concrete of primary roads in Cooper, Clay and Marion Counties, aggregating four miles in length and costing a total of $86,014.

Ten miles of primary roads, sections being located in Cape Girardeau, Crawford, Laclede, Lafayette and Macon Counties are to be graded and bridged at a total cost of $465,287. Three miles of secondary roads in Jefferson, Pettis and St. Louis Counties are to be surfaced at a cost of $238,042, and 13 miles of secondary roads in Adair, Andrew, Audrain, Buchanan, Callaway, Carter, Dent, Grundy, Lewis, Oregon and Taney Counties will be bridged and graded at a total cost of $465,893.

DIVORCE PAPERS BY AIR MAIL

Woman Wires Request That Document Be Speeded to Buffalo.

A telegram was received yesterday at the office of the clerk of the Court of Domestic Relations asking that divorce papers in the case of Louise Witten Ashbrook against Everett Rex Ashbrook, date of March, 1924, be dispatched by airplane mail at once to Mrs. Ashbrook at Hotel Statler, Buffalo, N. Y. Clerk Lou Hocker said he would make an effort to comply with the request. The papers are on file at the old Courthouse, but they do not show the disposition of the case.

CITY ART OBJECTS VALUED AT $2,000,000

150 Accessions of Art Works Reported for Fiscal Year Ending April 30.

Art works valued at $2,000,000 are housed in the City Art Museum in Forest Park. This figure includes city-owned objects valued at $1,500,000 and the $500,000 Washington University collection.

During the fiscal year ending April 30 last, accessions of art works through purchase and gift were 68 and 81, respectively. Cost of the objects purchased amounted to $124,183.07. From part of the balance on hand, $86,836.35, further purchases will be made before the end of the calendar year.

"The number of objetcs acquired through purchase is perhaps the smallest in recent years, but the importance and quality of the individual objects is marked and will raise the standard of excellence in the various departments," says the fifteenth annual report.

"An endeavor has been made to acquire objects which would amplify our present collections; also to secure objects representative of periods of which we have no examples and thus make the museum more interesting to students of the fine arts."

The most important painting acquired is a painting of George Washington by Gilbert Stuart, formerly in the collection of George Douglas, who purchased it from the artist in 1823. It is considered one of the finest examples of the Anthenaeum type. A portrait of "Heyman Dullaert," painter and poet, by Philips de Koninck, and "The Madonna and Child," by Joost Van Cleef, have been added to the collection of old masters.

The collection of paintings by American artists has been augmented by the "Bibliotheque du Dauphin, Versailles," by Charles Bittinger, and "The Expulsion," by Eugene F. Savage.

Paintings given to the museum include "The Flight Into Egypt," by Claude Lorraine, which was presented by William K. Bixby, president of the Art Museum's Board of Control; a lamdscape by George C. Bingham, a pioneer Missouri artist, which was presented by Mrs. Chester Harding Krum, and a landscape by Ceramano, the gift of Madame Berthe of Nice.

A bequest of 300 pieces of European ceramics has been made by the late Rev. Alfred Duane Pell of New York.

In the department of classical art, accessions included a portrait bust of heroic size of an Unknown Man, of the second century, A. D., found in Athens; a Torso of Diana—a Roman copy of a Greek original of the third century, B. C.; a Head of a Woman of the first century, A. D., presumed to be a member of the imperial family, probably Antonia; a fragment of a mural painting from Pompeii; a Tanagra figurine; a cameo of Augustus; a Mycenaean ring, 1400 B. C.; a small and perfect statuette of an Etruscan warrior of the seventh century, B. C.

Egyptian art accessions were: A figure of a Princess in limestone; a ushabti in steatite; head of a King in gilt bronze; head of a Queen modeled on both sides of the piece; a coptic chasuble of the sixth century, A. D.; a bowl of green slate from Abydos; a jar of diorite, and a large alabastron of alabaster.

NEW LAWS URGED BY WELFARE BODY

Outstanding Recommendations Are for Feeble-Minded and Delinquent.

The Missouri Welfare League is distributing broadcast in Missouri a 12-page pamphlet entitled "Legislation Needed for Missouri." It describes in detail each of the planks in the league's "welfare code" and concisely outlines proposed welfare laws and changes desired in existing laws.

The outstanding recommendations of the league are better institutional care for the feeble-minded, better reformatory institutions for young offenders to reduce delinquency, changes in the child labor laws, a State sanitorium for tuberculous negroes, and changes in the workmen's compensation law and in the law prohibiting the marriage of the feeble-minded.

Copies of the pamphlet have been sent to each member of the State Legislature asking their support of the league's proposals.

Intermediate Reformatory.

The league urges enlargement of the State institutions for the feeble-minded, pointing out that Missouri provides accommodations for but 651 such patients while hundreds are at large.

It recommends an intermediate reformatory for young men between 18 and 30 years of age to relieve the situation at Boonville, where men over 20 mingle with boys under 12. A reformatory for women convicts is also urged.

Under "Child Welfare," amendments to the Child Labor law reducing the maximum day's work and increasing educational requirements and strengthening the method of proving age, are recommended.

The negro death rate from tuberculosis is about twice that among the whites, the pamphlet states, while no provision has been made for negroes although a sanitorium for white persons has been in operation for years.

Educational Reform.

Equalization of education opportunities throughout the State, so that rural children may have the same advantages as city children, is also advocated.

The existing law prohibiting the marriage of feeble-minded is described as "useless," and with regard to the Workmen's Compensation Law, the pamphlet states "a just law on this subject is urgently needed."

The pamphlet was prepared by the Committee on Legislative Program, which is headed by Dr. George B. Mangold, director of the Missouri School of Social Economy, as chairman. The league, which has executive headquarters in the Central National Bank Building here, is primarily interested in prison reform work.

KOPLAR BROTHERS SUED FOR $200,000

O. H. Brooks Jr. Charges Fist Fight Was Climax to Real Estate Conspiracy.

Suit for $200,000 damages was filed yesterday by Orphred H. Brooks Jr., a real estate dealer of 5024 Washington boulevard, against Nathan Koplar of 5596 Pershing avenue, and his two brothers, as a sequel to a fisticuff altercation between Brooks and Nathan Koplar at Grand boulevard and Morgan street, Aug. 8.

Though the altercation constituted the basis of the suit, it was directed also against Samuel and Harry Koplar, brothers, together with the Metropolitan Theaters Corporation, and Koplar Brothers, a copartnership, and set forth an alleged conspiracy on the part of the defendants. The conspiracy, it was described consisted in an attempt first to obtain property of the Sarama Investment Co., of which Brooks is an officer, and, failing, in an attempt to depreciate the property, which adjoins property on which the Koplars and others are erecting a large motion picture theater at Grand boulevard and Morgan street.

The petition recites that Nathan Koplar attacked the plaintiff "without provocation or warning," as he was walking along Grand boulevard. Koplar choked him, beat him on the head, knocked off his glasses and roughly shoved him around, the petition recited, as a result of which he was made to suffer ridicule, as well as pain.

As has been published, Brooks bought the Morgan street property in question, which was the old Culver home, four years ago for $5100, and eight months ago the Koplar interests entered negotiations for its purchase. Sam Koplar offered $35,000 for the place, an offer subsequently raised to $50,000. But Brooks, according to Sam Koplar, held off and demanded $75,000, plus $25,000 additional for his income tax, a total of $400,000. The theater promoters could not see this and revised their plans to build without the Brooks' property. Brooks has announced the property is not for sale.

MRS, CLARA M'CLUNEY TO BE BURIED TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Widow of Former President of State National Bank Died in East.

The funeral of Mrs. Clara McCluney, 77 years old, widow of John H. McCluney, former president of the State National Bank, who died yesterday at her summer cottage at Hyannisport, Mass., will be at 3:30 p. m. Tuesday from the residence, 4429 Westminster place. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. McCluney, who was Miss Clara E. Copp, had been in poor health for several years and suffered several strokes, believed to have been of a paralytic nature, in the past 60 days. The last stroke, suffered last Wednesday, proved fatal.

Mrs. McCluney's daughters, Miss Mildred McCluney and Mrs. A. C. Caldwell of St. Louis and Mrs. C. H. Loutrel of South Orange, N. J., had been staying with her at at the summer resort. A son, Samuel C. McCluney, arrived there yesterday. He is in the commercial paper business with two other sons, James and D. C., here. A fourth son, John H. Jr., resides in Kansas City.

WIRE NETTING GUARD AT ROAD DANGER POINTS IS TRIED IN MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 16.

A NEW guard, to make sure that motorists do not run off the road on dangerous curves and causeways, is being tried by the Michigan Highway Department. It consists of two-inch mesh steel wire netting, strung alongside the road on stout posts and painted white. The white rise is as plainly visible day and night as is the customary white guard rail of wood or concrete. Tests have shown that the wire netting will withstand the impact of an automobile hitting it at high speed.

RELOCATING ROADS TO END CROSSING MENACE

Wisconsin Finds This as Effective as Other Methods and Less Costly.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 16.—As a result of a study of the grade crossing situation and estimates of prohibitive costs to railroads and State in eliminating them at many heavy traffic points, Wisconsin highway engineers are concentrating on relocation of roads instead of building of underpasses and viaducts.

Relocation has been accomplished successfully on a number of the cross-State trunk highways. The old military road, laid out in 1824 to connect the Northwest forts and form a means of pioneer communication, followed the great ridge from the Mississippi east to the lake settlements. It is now incorporated in State trunk highway 19, a road formerly noted for its "railroad mileage."

Most of the old grade crossings have been closed. A few were allowed to remain for local traffic and farm driveways. The department figures show that 90 per cent of the danger to highway traffic has been eliminated at 10 per cent of the cost of building grade separations at the crossings.

MOTOR VEHICLE LAW ABSURDITIES TRAFFIC MENACE

Strange Inconsistencies in Regulations of Various Cities and States Root of Safety Problem.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Recent investigations of accident prevention, traffic control and highway safety are bringing to light strange inconsistencies which somehow have escaped the spotlight for years.

One investigator recently startled his audience by asking if they thought it sensible to allow frail women in their sixties to operate 10-ton motor trucks. A ripple of laughter was followed instantly by a significant silence. Suddenly they caught his meaning.

The motor vehicle license issued to operators in the State where the investigator was talking reads: "This certifies that the person named below has complied with the provisions of law concerning the licensing of motor-vehicle operators and is hereby licensed to operate a motor vehicle on the highways of this state" * * *

Lax and Absurd Situation.

Since the license names no specific make of car, or type, the term "a motor vehicle" is construed to mean "any motor vehicle." It is typical of the licensing of motor-vehicle operators in general, and is by no means confined to the particular locality.

Just picture for a moment what this means: Here is the law granting Mary Doe the right to drive a 10-ton truck should she feel inclined to do so. Here is John Doe privileged to drive any automobile, regardless of whether it is safe or unsafe.

The inconsistencies are too numerous to permit of detailed discussion of any one at this stage of the investigation. Everyone just now is interested primarily in discovering how lax and absurd the

Special Trunk Line Highways and Trucks Running on Schedule Like Trains Predicted

Handling of Them by Dispatchers Probable — One Railroad Planning to Install Store-to-Train Service by Truck for Less Than Carload Lots.

Airbrake Operated Trains and Tractors and Trailers on Roads Are Foreseen — Railroads Rapidly Turning to Trucks to Speed Up Short Haul Business.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug 16.—Maj. Elihu Church, transportation engineer of the New York Port Authority, predicts in the August issue of Shipper and Carrier the building of new types of highways for motor cars. These, the Major says, will be trunk-line highways extending over the country as do trunk-line railroads. There will be separate roads for trucks and for passenger cars, he says, and "trains" of tractors and trailers on the highways, and says the trailers will be controlled by air brakes as railroad cars are, and that the Interstate Commerce Commission will fix details of rates and service.

He asserts that "a grade crossing on an intensively used highway is more dangerous than any railroad grade crossing," and that highways will be especially lighted at night, equipped with telephones and will have repair trucks ready to help any one in trouble. Trucks will be dispatched over the highways just as a train dispatcher handles his trains.

May Need Special Roads.

Maj. Church declares motor transportation requires better highways and service than most communities can afford to furnish free of charge, and suggests that communities might charge tolls for the use of special roads built exclusively for motor truck use, particularly when it is impossible or extremely difficult to raise funds in other ways.

Maj. Church says that no matter how good a truck is, its value to us owner depends on the condition of the roads, the street congestion and traffic supervision, and shows how low speed, accidents, congestion and high costs can be remedied.

The motor truck will continue to take business away from the railroads for distances up to 75 miles, because it gives door-to-door service and saves costs of boxing, handling and delay. It is stated that this will benefit the railroads as it will reduce their terminal congestion and release their cars for long-haul work.

Trucks Replace Trains.

Maj. Church states that the motor truck will act as a feeder to the steam carriers and bring in great quantities of new business. It will enable farmers to sell much produce that now rots on their hands. The work of the railroads will be restricted to moving full carloads over long distances, he says.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is now operating 20 motor truck units, doubling its truck service within a few months. The 20 units involve use of 40 motor trucks, replacing local freight trains which previously were operated to carry less than carload lot freight. Total mileage on the Pennsylvania System on which daily motor truck service is in effect is 1412, as compared with 602 miles early last spring.

New Jersey is now completely motorized so far as the hauling of such freight by trucks to replace freight trains on the Pennsylvania System is concerned. New truck units are being planned and put into operation in other divisions as rapidly as surveys can be completed.

Plans Store to Train Trucks.

It is the plan of the Pennsylvania Railroad to use motor trucks later for terminal interchange of less than carload lot freight in large cities, and eventually to expand its movement by motor truck between stations and terminals into a store-door delivery and collection service.

Among the truck units recently installed in New Jersey on the Pennsylvania System are: Trenton to Lambertville, 16 miles; Trenton to Linden, New York Division, 49 miles; Uniontown to Ruffsdale, 38 miles; Toms River to Sea Girt, 23 miles; Sea Girt to South Amboy, 33 miles; Sea Girt to Jamesburg, 28 miles; Walnut Street, Philadelphia to Trenton via Pemberton, Trenton Division, 78 miles. Railroad Plans Turning Branch Line Into Private Truck Road

IF thorough investigation, now going on, makes its plans seem sound, one of the great railroad systems will transform a branch line into a privately built and operated highway, upon which to run a special fleet of exceedingly heavy trucks and buses, says Harlow Hyde in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Engineers are at work on estimated costs, special trucks are being projected, and the entire highway system worked out to its last detail.

This is one of the branch lines that are money makers. Still the cost of reconstructing the grade and track and bridges is so heavy that the company is figuring which will be the cheaper and the more productive of profits in the future.

This company was one of the many which, for several years, did all it could to have the use of trucking for hire over highways paralelling its tracks restricted. In the end it, too, came to look upon the highways as an ideal sort of transportation for short haul less-than-carload shipments. Its progress through the three stages of opposition to highway hauling, use of and tentative plans to build and operate its own private highway, proves the sound, economical basis of highway transport by trucks.

The bridges are in and will doubtless be strong enough for even the gigantic trucks which are planned. Thus two main highway costs are already written off.

There will be a filling of stone on top of the grade and then a very thick, hard surface for the highway and the prevate road will be complete.

The railroads rarely have grades of more than 4 or 5 per cent.

Thus the first problem of the engineer, the making of the grade, the fills and the cut through the hills, is already taken care of.

No road in America, except that short stretch of the Lincoln Highway in Indiana which is called "Ideal Section," will compare with the rail's private vehicle road in thickness of the hard surface. The short "Ideal Section" is one and a third miles long, is 40 feet wide, and the surface is 10 inches thick, with re-enforcing steel imbedded. The approximate cost per mile of this 40-foot pavement is $67,-000. The maximum weight of the trucks per axle is 21,333 pounds, with an inch of tire for every 800 pounds of load (including the vehicle).

Of course, the rail line will not need so wide a highway. Half of this will probably suffice.

It is considered probable that the rail highway will be lighted as is the "Ideal Section" to insure safety and quick service day and night.

AUTO TROUBLES OFTEN DUE TO BAD HABITS IN DRIVING

Success With Cars Is Largely Matter of Avoiding Doing Things to Injure Mechanism.

"No two cars are alike," as an explanation of the wide variation in car trobules, is rapidly giving way to the theory that no two cars are driven and owned alike. It is a puzzle to many why cars of the same make and model give such varying results, but that is because the personal element is overlooked.

Habits keep more cars in the repair shop than accidents. Just the way one sits at the wheel will cause troubles peculiar to his particular car. No other car will give the same sort of trouble for the same amount of mileage.

Since there are good habits as well as bad, the variation between results achieved by car owners is all the greater. One driver may be doing everything in the world to put his clutch out of commission while another will be prolonging the life of his clutch far beyond the average. It isn't long before someone declares there is a great difference in the clutches as they were originally made.

Such suspicions are natural enough, but unfortunate because they help cover up the real facts. Just so long as car owners imagine that the differences is in cars just so long will bad habits in driving go unchecked and good habits go undiscovered.

Expensive Habits.

One driver had an odd habit of trying to unscrew the top of the gear shift lever knob. He would toy with it by the hour when it was not absolutely necessary to keep both hands on the wheel. When sitting in the car waiting for anyone he would keep his hand on the knob continually.

Mr. James E. Newell,
Pres., Newell Motor Car Co.,
Saint Louis.

Dear Mr. Newell;

I feel that I want you to know what delightful satisfaction I have had in the possession and driving of my Jewett Coupe. After driving it for over a year it gives me as fine a performance as it did the first day I drove it. I can recommend it most highly for men or women but particularly the latter;- because it is so easy to handle in traffic - quick response - and easy shifting of gears - picks up quickly after stopping - passing anything on the road. My car is used every day in the year and its action is just as fine when the weather is 18 degrees below zero as 100 degrees in the shade.

I have found by keeping careful account that the actual cost of car maintenance has been very very small per month. My car has been used both for business and for pleasure, touring over rough, steep hills and after each trip I am more and more satisfied.

Any time you have a customer who "hesitates", refer him or her to me and I will gladly recite my experiences with the Jewett.

I feel that you have rendered real service in selling me this car.

With best wishes for your continued success, I am

Very truly yours,

Alma Gibson Robb

WHEN Miss Alma Gibson Robb, St. Louis business woman, says in her letter about the Jewett, "I recommend it most highly for men or women but icularly the latter—because is is so easy to han- in traffic—quick response—and easy shifting of —picks up quickly after stopping—passing any- g on the road," she tells why the Jewett has be- so popular in such a short time.

ewett owners everywhere feel as Miss Robb does t her car. Jewett owners know that Jewett is a h to handle, that it outperforms and outhandles selling at much higher prices.

omen Favor Jewett

omen love to drive the ett because of this easy dling, because of the uty of Jewett lines, and use Jewett has power.

en, too, like a car that handles easily, but particu- y they like a car which gives superlative per- ance and at the same time has durability. Jew- gives both. That's why it is a favorite of red- ed he-men.

ore than 100,000 Jewetts with over 1,000,000,000 s of travel on their speedometers are proving Jew- uperiority every day.

THEIR owners are finding how enjoyable it is to drive the Jewett. Parking is a snap, with but 16½ feet needed at the curb. The Jewett turns in the average street. The slightest touch of the lightest foot finds Jewett quick to respond.

Gear shifting isn't needed often and when it is, there is rarely ever a miss or a sound. Jewett rides smoothly at any speed, leads as a hill-climber, has unusual comfort, and the Jewett engine gives more horse-power per hundred pounds of weight than other cars.

Liberal Trade-in Allowances

A small amount of cash or your present car taken as down payment on your new Jewett Six. We give you 12 whole months to pay the balance, while you are enjoying this wonderful automobile.

St. Louisans Like Jewett

St. Louis is happy with its Jewetts. Jewett owners are pleased. All because Jewett does the things other cars at higher prices cannot do.

Before you buy a car, try the Jewett. If you don't, you'll never know the automobile that will give you more satisfaction, more enjoyment, per dollar invested than any other. When may we take you for a ride, long or short, as you prefer, that will prove Jewett merit?

Typifies Attitude of Thousands of Jewett Owners

Miss Alma Gibson Robb's experience with the Jewett, which she tells about in her letter is typical of the experience of thousands of Jewett owners.

If there was ever a car that satisfied those who drove it, it is, and has been the Jewett, ever since the very first Jewett was sold.

Jewett performs far better than any other car in its class, and even outperforms automobiles sellin for twice the money.

St. Louis-Hannibal Tour Found Entirely Practicable

Packard Eight Party Finds Good Going 260-Mile Round Trip to City Made Famous by Mark Twain—Lovely Country Traversed.

This beautiful avenue of trees on the old Hannibal-New London pike was only one of a hundred lovely vistas enjoyed by a party which toured from St. Louis to Hannibal and back in a Packard "straight eight" car last Saturday.

So many reports have discouraged use of the highway from St. Louis to Hannibal that a party which made the 260-mile trip in a Packard "straight eight" last Saturday to the city made famous by Mark Twain, was agreeably surprised at the good going encountered virtually all the way. One can easily make the trip one way in five or six hours, which means that he can leave St. Louis at noon Saturday and reach Hannibal in plenty of time for dinner and an evening stroll around the picturesque old river port, have time Sunday for a run up to beautiful Riverview Park with its statue of Mark Twain and sweeping views up and down the Mississippi River, ramble through the countryside and get back home Sunday evening.

While there are about eight miles of dirt road on the option through Louisiana, and about 30 miles of dirt on the option through Bowling Green, the Packard eight party decided that both routes were travelable, except after very heavy rain or long-continued rains. As it rained Friday night, they were doubtful about trying the trip, but met no difficulty whatsover.

20-Mile-an-Hour Road.

No attempt was made to make any speed records. The idea was to see if the roads to Hannibal were good enough to warrant recommending the trip for touring, and if they would permit fair touring speeds. The Packard eight rolled away from the Berry Motor Car Co. at 8 a. m. Instead of going up Locust and Washington to Kingshighway to Easton avenue and St. Charles road, the party avoided the early morning traffic by slipping out Page boulevard into the county and cutting over to St. Charles road. From St. Charles they followed State Highway No. 2 on concrete to a point three miles west of O'Fallon, where they had to detour. This detour, before reaching Wentzville, branches into Highway No. 9 through Troy to Eolia. There is some dirt on the detour, but nothing to trouble a car.

By mistake, the Packard patry went through to Wentzville and swung north over a gravel road that led into No. 9 over good gravel all the way to Eolia. The road occasionally is somewhat narrow and sometimes is rough, but is generally good and permits an average of 20 miles or so an hour, stretches being good for speed up to 45 miles an hour. The countryside becomes progressively more attractive, with lovely hillsides and reoadside scenes.

The Option Via Louisiana.

At Eolia, it was decided to try the Louisiana option. This turned out to be fine gravel road all the way to Louisiana. A total of 47 cents was exacted in tolls on this road, 22 cents at a point 12 miles from Louisiana and 25 cents at the outskirts of the city.

Louisiana is attractively located at the base of the bluffs along the Mississippi, and is worth a leisurely walk of inspection.

For ten miles or so beyond Louisiana the road is fine gravel, at one place affording a wonderful view through a great gap in the bluffs over the river and across the lowlying Illinois countryside to the distant line of low hills. Presently the gravel road narrows and sweeps in curves around a hillside, with beautiful views over the river valley. In places the road is only wide enough for one car, but there are turning out places.

Then come several miles of dirt road, rough, rutted and narrow. There is one hole that might make trouble with continued rain, but the road is not bad and should be passable in ordinary rainy weather. The dirt turns to gravel into Frankfort. Then there is gravel road, ranging from fair to very good, to New London, with one especially pretty bit across a bridge and along the base of a bluff that overhangs a stream. The only danger point on this stretch is where there are three grade crossings within a short distance.

The Bowling Green Option.

From New London to Hannibal the old pike is excellent gravel. This is one of the most attractive drives in Northern Missouri, with its long tree-lined avenues, pretty country and old covered wooden bridge near the outskirts of Hannibal.

Although the party stopped here and there for a view and drove leisurely over a number of stretches, the 130-mile trip was made at an average speed of 26 miles an hour.

After luncheon at Hannibal, a trip was made out to Riverview Park, high on the bluffs above Hannibal, where the statue of Mark Twain gazes steadily out over the valley and its vistas of fields and water and bluffs receding into the blue distance.

The return trip was made over the same route through New London to Frankfort, where the option through Bowling Green was taken. The road is dirt all the way from New London to Eolia, but is wide, well dragged and carefully maintained. Speeds up to 40 miles an hour are practicable over it. Despite the rain of the night before, it offered no difficulties, having dried out except in a few low spots where the mud was not bothersome.

From Eolia the Packard party returned to St. Louis over the same route, except that they followed No. 9 from Troy to the detour west of O'Fallow, as they should have on the up-river trip. Although they stopped 15 minutes in Eeolia and often drove leisurely, the return trip from Hannibal was made at an average of 28 miles an hour.

How Car Performed.

From a car performance viewpoint the trip was one of the most enjoyable one could wish to take. The Packard, despite its power and staunchness, weighs only 4200 pounds and is so well balanced and sprung, that the road that can shake up its passengers must be mighty rough. It steers at a touch, straightening itself out of curves automatically. Saturday, rolling up Locust boulevard, it was slowed to two miles an hour at Thirteenth street and crawled in high without a quiver or suggestion of bucking at two miles an hour up the incline to Fourteenth street, then accelerated like a flash, running at 20 miles an hour on pavement, it was brought to a stop within its own length by its four-wheel brakes, without sliding the wheels or skidding. It crawled in high at four to five miles an hour up the brick street grade in St. Charles, slowed down until it virtually stopped, then picked up again in high and continued at four miles an hour until the street leveled out again. In city driving it did everything asked of it, leaping away in traffic as if alive and handling as easily as the lightest of cars.

On the road, driven by Donald D. MacLean, of the Berry Motor Car Co., put up as fine a touring performance as the writer has ever seen. At the bottom of one long slope on a gravel road it was forced to drop to a walking pace because a team was slow in turning out. But it picked up in high without a quiver and went over the top at 40 miles an hour. Time and again it showed extraordinary slow speed pulling power. On dirt and gravel roads alike it ran as steadily as a train on a track, holding the road on curves, without sidesway and running safely at any speed required.

Incidentally, this particular Packard eight runs at 60 and 65 miles an hour as smoothly as sweetly as it does at 30, and shows 45 miles an hour in second gear. This fast second gear is a tremendous asset in getting away, and especially for mountain touring where the altitude is high enough to cut down an engine's power.

SOUND VALUE

Sound products evolve from sound principles.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car is the product of an institution whose principles have always been conceded to be pre-eminently sound.

Sound manufacturing methods that place infinitely more importance on quality than quantity.

Sound financial standing, which permits uninterrupted development and adherence to the policy of constant improvement—

A sound method of selecting dealers, from which an organization has grown that enjoys the complete confidence of the public—

A sound sales and service policy, through which buyers are assured full value for their investment—

These basic principles being sound, it follows as an obvious consequence that Dodge Brothers Motor Car represents sound value.

AUTO TROUBLES OFTEN DUE TO BAD HABITS IN DRIVING

twisting and turning it. One day it crumbled in his hand just as he was nervously shifting at a particularly busy crossing. It surprised him so that he jammed the gears.

Of course he blamed it on the car and the manufacturer who made the car. He never for a moment suspected that his habit of straining the knob, which was made of a composition, had anything to do with the bill he paid for a new set of gears.

When the leather cushions tore at the seams one owner passed around the story that his car was all right except for the poor upholstery. It was later observed that whenever he took the wheel he had a habit of straightening out as if trying to see whether the back of the seat would be strong enough to keep him from falling over backward. In addition, he always pressed back against the seat and the back of the seat when applying the brakes or pushing out the clutch. It was a habit the upholstery didn't happen to be built for.

Wasting Gasoline.

Difference in gas mileage often is due largely to habits. Quite a number of drivers have a habit of beating time with their feet on the accelerators when waiting for traffic to move. So far as the gas mileage is concerned they might as well set the idling speed so as to allow the engine to run 50 to 100 more revolutions per minute.

One man who happened to be an excessive talker used to hobnob with his friends while the motor idled five, 10 and 15 minutes at a stretch. Naturally his car did not seem to be as acceptable as that owned by another driver who always switched off the engine before coming to a dead stop in parking.

A habit of forgetting things when starting out for the day wastes gas, pulls down the battery and wears out the car's control. One motorist always started his engine twice to the average driver's once because he always thought of something he had forgotten just after he had started the engine running. That meant switching it off and starting all over again when he was really ready to go.

The habit of forgetting to release the emergency brake will create a condition wherein the owner will soon find his car doing many things other cars of the same make and model do not do.

Abusing the Clutch.

Clutches have been among the worst sufferers because of bad driving habits. A poised foot on a delicately adjusted clutch offers just enough pressure through weight of foot and nervous tension of driver's leg to keep the clutch plates slipping a trifle. That creates friction, and friction means trouble.

Letting in the clutch suddenly carries the trouble beyond the clutch into regions of the chassis where repairs are even more costly. Many drivers have no idea how suddenly they let in the clutch. With a good grasp on the steering wheel they receive but a small portion of the shock of starting. The habit is broken by riding as a passenger [illegible] driver who does the [illegible]

Many drivers have a [illegible] trying to shift gears [illegible] throwing the clutch [illegible] Several hundred times a day [illegible] treat the city to a scraping [illegible] gears that just miss stripping [illegible] when the spring overhauling [illegible] ried rolls around they are the [illegible] to have to seek the repair [illegible]

Fewer cars would have the [illegible] pair shop habit if their [illegible] and drivers would check [illegible] their driving habits and see [illegible] they stand. CROSSES WHERE FATAL ACCIDENTS OCCURRED ON HIGHWAYS IN DELAWARE

In an effort to rouse motorists to the dangers of recklessness and lack of care, large crosses are being painted by the State police on roadbeds in Delaware to mark places where fatal accidents have occurred because of speeding or other forms of reckless driving. Other crosses will warn of dangerous places ahead.

People are still talking about Oakland Sealed Order Demonstration Week!

Hundreds of thousands all over America became better automobile buyers by seeing Oakland's "week of proof"—or some part of it.

They have concrete facts mentally filed for future reference. They know what to ask a car to show them before they buy.

They know what Oakland will do, because they saw Oakland do it. They got up close to the True Blue Oakland and saw features of design and performance that they now realize all other motor cars must eventually have.

Check over these features—they're listed here—and see if you don't agree. Driving necessities—not sales innovations!

Most of the qualities which stamp the Oakland as a remarkable job of six-cylinder engineering have been part of the Oakland for more than a year.

The long years of Oakland's six-cylinder experience—coupled with a fixed determination to build the world's most desirable light six gave this True Blue car the backbone to meet its year of trial and prove its character.

If you did not have an opportunity last week to see why and how Oakland is a year in advance of its field, drop in to-day, or to-morrow, or any time. Ask to see eye-proof.

Then drive it yourself. Road-test this True Blue Car. Then you will know that Oakland is building one of to-day's very finest motor cars—and selling it at a very low price!

NEW OLDS SIX MODELS ARE HERE

Redesigned Radiator and Hood Most Striking Changes—Engine Refined.

The new refined Oldsmobile six models have just arrived and are being shown by the St. Louis distributer, the De Luxe Automobile Co. Fundamentally, the car remains the same as when introduced nearly a year ago as the lowest price six-cylinder car in the world. For the coming year it will add to this proven automobile refinements in line and mechanism.

The most striking changes are in the design of the radiator shell and hood. The radiator shell is nickeled and follows the most approved and advanced designs in European and American car construction. It has a graceful double curve at the top with a slightly curved peak downward in the center which acts as a base for the long known Oldsmobile oval emblem. Extending downward, the radiator shell follows slightly concave lines, broadening outward at the base, which continues the easy curves that are features of the design. The shell is somewhat higher than the previous style, which makes possible an almost level stream line hood extending back to the rear of the cowl. The hood follows the double curve of the top of the radiator shell, adding distinctiveness.

The refinement of the front lines is further added to by the use of new bell-shaped head and cowl lights, which are standard on all models.

Durable Duco satin finish is used on all models. The standard models are finished in Oldsmobile blue, with ivory striping on body and wheels. The sport models continue to use the weathered bronze-green shade that has proven so popular. These are striped with black and gold. Throughout the line, even including the upper sections of the closed models, Duco is used, thus insuring a really permanent finish.

The full line of eight body types is continued. These are the touring, sport touring, roadster, sport roadster, two-passenger business coupe, four-passenger coupe, sedan and de luxe sedan. All closed bodies are Fisher built.

The new radiator lines have been featured in a rearrangement of the operating instruments.

Recent work of the engineering department is reflected in the mechanical refinements in the power plant. Improvements that make the oiling system as near perfection as is mechanically possible have been included. Extra care is being used to balance perfectly both engine and clutch. Solid rubber bumpers are placed over front and rear axles to assist in taking up bad road shocks.

The same complete equipment, with several refinements, is included on the sport and de luxe models. These are equipped with nickeled double bar bumpers in front and nickeled fender guards in the rear.

SIMPLE METHOD TO MAKE DRIVING SAFE IS PROPOSED

drive and were blameless in the accidents which preceded the examinations.

Underlying Accident Cause.

The first step of the program is education, and that education must be threefold. First the education of public officials who have to do with licensing motor vehicle operators, so they will understand how to reduce accidents blamable on the motor vehicle driver. Second, education of the law-making bodies, so that laws empowering and compelling officials to take the necessary and proper steps to obtain this end can be passed. Third, education of the motor vehicle operator himself.

One fundamental reason underlies the various apparent causes of the greater part of the accidents for which the motor vehicle operator can be held responsible. It also underlies practically all the apparent causes of accidents, even those for which the motor vehicle operator is not solely to blame.

This one, all controlling, fundamental cause is psychological. It is the absence of alertness. It is the failure of mind and muscle properly to co-ordinate. It is the failure of the subconscious or automatic mind to do automatically all the things which will make for safety, so that the driver of a car will arise to the emergency and do all that is humanly possible to prevent an accident without stopping to think about it. It should be like the reaction of the eyelids to an impending blow.

How Army Test Could Be Used.

In cases of an emergency where fractions of a second count, the driver who yields to panic or has to stop to think is lost, and an accident occurs—frequently a fatal one.

It has been estimated by various authorities that 3 to 5 per cent of the drivers of motor vehicles cause all the accidents. There is a method of examining this percentage and weeding out the unfit which has proven remarkably efficient.

During the war the army established certain testing grounds on which it tested all applicants who wished to drive army cars and trucks. In a record comprising nearly 100,000 cases it was shown that a large percentage of the applicants, from one-quatrer to one-third, failed to pass the test the first time they tried it. It also was found—and this is the crux of the whole problem—that less than 5 per cent of those who failed on the first examination never were able to pass it thereafter regardless of the number of attempts they made.

This examination seems to combine to a very high degree the two requisites. It first showed the applicants' knowledge of his vehicle and his ability to operate it mechanically, and, second and far more important, it showed whether his mind and muscles so co-ordinated that he could be relied on to do the right thing at the right time in an emergency and thus prevent an accident.

SPECIAL TRUNK LINE HIGHWAYS FOR TRUCKS AND AUTOS PREDICTED

ance, 53 miles, and Trenton to Phillipsburg, 51 miles.

By successfully using motor trucks for the transfer of less-than-car-load freight between the western terminals of its lines, the Long Island railroad has, not only demonstrated the practicability of this much-discussed step, but also has indicated the benefits to shippers and the public when nation-wide motorization of railroad freight terminals becomes a fact.

A five-ton truck operated by the Motor Haulage Company of Brooklyn, under a contract with the railroad, is now making one round trip a day between the Long Island City, Bushwick avenue and Flatbush avenue, freight terminals of the system. As five days were formerly taken for the transfer of goods by rail between these points, four days are thus saved to shippers and consumers through the present use of trucks.

Following the example of the Pennsylvania railroad the Long Island at the same time started carrying all local less-than-car-load freight on its North Shore division by motor truck. One five-ton truck was first used, but another was found necessary after the first three days of operation. The two trucks are now making daily round trips over the Whitestone and Port Washington branches of this division.

One "zone station" has been established on each branch and to these the through freight trains carry full car loads. From the "zone stations" (at Flushing on the Whitestone branch, Bayside on the Port Washington branch) the trucks carry all package freight to stations located between them and the branch terminals. All slow-moving "peddler" freight trains are thus eliminated, greatly expediting the movement of the through freight.

The use of trucks in both the terminal and North Shore areas is being tried as an experiment for 90 days and if the final results come up to present expectations the railroad will consider the extension of freight haulage by truck to other branches.

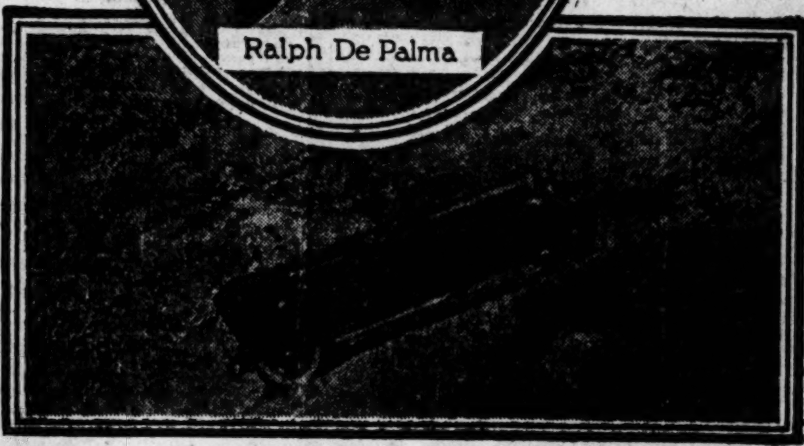
Chrysler Six Sets New Mt. Wilson Record

Ralph De Palma



The Mt. Wilson Climb

The peak of Mt. Wilson, near Los Angeles, California, is 5886 feet above sea level. The elevation at the Toll Gate at the mountain's base is 1250, making a net climb of 4636 feet from the Toll Gate to the famous Government Mt. Wilson observatory at the top.

The distance by road is 9½ miles, and there are 144 sharp curves and dangerous turns. The approximate average grade is 10%. Maximum grade is 16%.

Best previous stock car record—27 minutes, 51.66 seconds.

Best previous non-stock car record—26 minutes, 56 seconds.

Chrysler Six strictly stock car record—25 minutes, 48.85 seconds.

Prize—Los Angeles Express Trophy.

Observers and timers—4 Los Angeles newspaper men.

Driver—Ralph De Palma.

Date—Wednesday, July 16, 1924.

Road conditions—Bad, due to dry season and heavy travel.

Chrysler Six Beats Record By More Than Two Minutes

The Chrysler Six, strictly stock car, record on the famous Mt. Wilson climb is an amazing feat of power and speed on a steep and dangerous road.

Yet all who saw Ralph De Palma beat all former Mt. Wilson records by 2 minutes, 2.81 seconds in a stock Chrysler Touring car say the phenomenal Chrysler abilities were not taxed.

Think of it! In 25¾ minutes a stock Chrysler Six climbed approximately 6 times the height of New York's famous Woolworth Tower, over 9½ miles of narrow, twisting road—and did it with ease!

Three features made the Chrysler achievement easy. One was the tremendous surge of power that literally swept the Chrysler up those heart-breaking grades.

A second was the gripping hold of the four-wheel hydraulic brakes when the Chrysler took the curves.

The third was the perfectly balanced design, the low center of gravity resulting from the supremacy of Chrysler engineering.

No swaying, sliding or skidding on the turns; just in and out and gone like a flash. The tires seemed to cling to the road like a flanged wheel to a steel rail.

De Palma says it wasn't hard to break the Mt. Wilson record—with a Chrysler.

Sixty-eight horse-power in a compact—low swung—easily handled car. Riding ease and stability to match such power. Brakes to curb it to safety. Cooling to stand the test of nearly ten miles of full-throttle pulling.

Ask us to show you the marvelous things the Chrysler Six will do. A Chrysler Six demonstration will change all of your former ideas of supreme performance.

Sales by manufacturing divisions of General Motors to their dealers this year were: January, 61,398; February, 78,668; March, 75,484; April, 58,600; May, 45,965; June, 62,984; July, 40,797; total, 393,896.

This includes Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile passenger and commercial cars and G-M-C truck sales by the American and Canadian divisions of General Motors and exports overseas.

Dealers View New Models.

Most of the 104 associate dealers in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois of the De Luxe Automobile Co. were in St. Louis Friday to view the new Olds six models and to discuss business conditions at a meeting and banquet held at the Melbourne Hotel. Addresses were made by Philip H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Company; George T. Willett, general manager of the company; R. Hudson of the General Motors Acceptance Corp., and others. The changed lines of radiator and hood on the new Olds models, and the record the car has made for stamina and low upkeep, were commented on enthusiastically throughout the meeting and banquet.

Motor Club Arbitration Court.

An arbitration court is planned in the Chicago Motor Club Building. "The court," says Charles M. Hayes, president of the club, "will be a service to motorists fully as practical and spectacular as the mechanical first aid service which originated with the Chicago Motor Club. Arbitrators who are fair and impartial will sit in this court, and the decisions rendered by them will be binding upon the parties submitting to the arbitration, according to the laws of Illinois.

GASOLINE INVIGORATOR PERFECTED FOR AUTOS BY ST. LOUIS COMPANY

THE St. Louis Rubber Cement Co., 3948 West Pine street, manufacturer of various lines of national prominence, announces that after a long series of tests and experimentation, it has perfected a new product, Force-O, which will soon be introduced to the motoring public. It is claimed for Force-O that when added to the gasoline in the motor car it increases gasoline mileage, stops carbon knocks, reduces carbon accumulation, makes starting easier, gives quicker pick-up and more power on hills. It is guaranteed not to contain anything injurious to any motor. The sale of Force-O for the entire country will be handled by the Banner Accessory Manufacturing Co. of this city.

Ford to Build Virginia Plant.

The Ford Motor Co. has awarded contracts for immediate construction of a new standard assembling plant at Norfolk, Va., the thirty-fifth Ford assembly unit in the United States, and adding 90,000 cars yearly to the company's capacity.

Britain Makes 64,000 Cars in Year.

Great Britain has 112 automobile manufacturers. Only 15 of the factories have a production exceeding 1000 cars a year each. Britain produced 64,000 passenger cars last year. There are 393,280 private passenger cars in commission, or one car for every 110 inhabitants.

To Open Factory Branches.

The Willys-Overland Co., having opened a factory branch in Detroit following the resignation of its distributor there, plans to establish branches in Des Moines, Ia.; Pittsburg, Pa.; Louisville, Ky.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Altoona, Pa., and Cleveland, O., cities where previously it has been represented by distributors. The change is to become effective Aug. 31.

Electric Car Has No Chassis.

A one-man electric automobile made in Germany weighs only 360 pounds, of which the battery weighs 160 pounds and the motor 40 pounds. The car has no chassis, the body being built solidly enough to support the rear and front axles. The battery is sufficient for an operating radius of 36 to 42 miles at an average speed of 14 miles an hour.

150-Mile Dirt Track Race.

A race of 150 miles over a dirt track will be held at the New York State Fair, at Syracuse, on Sept. 13. A total of $15,000 will be divided in prizes among the winners.

5,600,000 Autos Scrapped.

Of the 20,000,000 motor vehicles produced to the end of 1923, only 5,600,000, or 28 per cent, had been scrapped.

Canada's Auto Production.

Ten firms were in the Canadian automobile industry in 1923, compared with 15 in 1922. The 1923 production of motor vehicles in Canada exceeded all records and reached a total of 147,582, compared with 101,007 in 1922 and 94,144 in 1920.

To Promote Virginia Highway.

Application has been made for a charter for the Virginia History Highway Association, Inc., whose object is to develop the Virginia Historic Highway, a loop road starting at Washington and extending for a distance of 650 miles via Winchester, Va., down the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, to Harrisonburg and Staunton, Roanoke, Lynchburg, Appomattox, Farmville and Petersburg. At Petersburg there are two loops, one via Franklin and Suffolk and Norfolk, the other via Richmond and Yorktown, where the two loops meet again and go via Fredericksburg and Mount Vernon back to Washington.

At present 10 per cent of the 650 miles are unimproved. Within a short time the association hopes to have this last 10 per cent in shape for tourists.

Foresees Car Price Increases.

Additional upward revisions of motor car prices, slightly lowered production schedules and rigid maintenance of quality standards, are outstanding tendencies of the industry for the last half of 1924, in the opinion of Lynn McNaughton, vice-president and general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. "Many of these recent improvements within the industry have been costly," he says, "but, on account of the large production, manufacturers were for the time, able to absorb the increased cost. If price increases occur in the coming months, they will only reflect a more conservative tone of general business which is becoming generally recognized."

10,000,000th Ford Rolls On.

Burdened with upholding Ford tradition of reliable transportation at the lowest possible cost, Ford car No. 10,000,000, one of approximately 7200 standard cars produced in a single day, performed in characteristic Ford fashion on its coast-to-coast run. The distance of a little less than 4000 miles was covered with only one minor adjustment and with no mechanical difficulty. Although many hundreds of miles of road through the Western States and across the Rocky Mountains are of dirt and gravel formation, the car averaged approximately 110 miles a day for the entire six weeks, and was on schedule to the minute in every town visited. The transcontinental trip of the ten-millionth car has formally ended, but interest remains so keen that the car has been routed up the Pacific Coast to Portland and Seattle, whence it will be shipped by boat back to San Francisco and then driven overland to Los Angeles and probably back across the country to Detroit over a Southern route.

U. S. Cars Lead in New Zealand.

A tabulation showing the number of automobiles of different makes that visited Muriwai, New Zealand, at a recent race meeting, compiled by a newspaper of Auckland, reveals how American cars dominate the field in that country. More than 72 makes were represented at the meeting, a total of 802 cars. The leading makes were as follows, the first British car appearing twelfth on the list: Ford, 183; Buick, 82; Dodge, 61; Chandler, 59; Oakland, 42; Chevrolet, 39; Hudson, 33; Essex, 22; Jewett, 21; Studebaker, 21; Hupmobile, 16; Daimler, 15.

Chain-Driven Auto Is Speedy.

A new British sport model car has chain drive to rear wheels but does better than 60 miles an hour in high and 45 miles an hour in second gear.

Appointed Sales Director.

Carl J. Reifler, who for four years has been with his father, I. Reifler, in the Independent Tire Co. of St. Louis, has been appointed director of sales in Illinois for the Henderson Rubber Co. of Columbus, O.

Back From Canadian Trip.

S. T. Honig of Webster Groves and his two sons have returned from a 4000-mile trip to Canada and through the East, which they began June 15. They drove a Moon car and went via Buffalo to Montreal, Canada, returning through the Adirondacks, White Mountains, Berkshires and most of the larger Eastern cities and summer resorts. "Our car went like a bird over the hills," Honig says. "No car trouble, no tire trouble. We got back with the same air in our balloon tires we started with." Honig says the balloon tires added greatly to the comfort of the trip.

DUCO METHOD DURABLE DEPENDABLE DIFFERENT

Used for high-class, guaranteed finishing of automobiles in one-half the time formerly required under old methods.

Going to Keep Your Car Another Season?

IF YOU ARE—come in today and let us show you how we can refinish it in Duco to look like new. Duco—the unusual new finish for automobiles is practically impervious to weather and driving conditions. Mud, grit, rain, snow, sap and sleet cannot mar the deep luster of Duco. It will not check, crack or chip. Throughout the Summer, Fall and Winter (and for seasons to come) you will be proud to be seen in your car—if you have it refinished NOW in Duco.

IF YOU ARE NOT going to keep your present car another season, come in today and let us show you how a Duco finish will increase the trade-in or re-sale value of your car.

But don't delay. Later, there will be a long "waiting list" and, if you let us have your car now, we can refinish it in Duco (any color you desire) in a very short time.

Come in—let us explain this method to you.

John Smith and His Car

by FREDERICK RUSSELL

ARING FOR THE TRIP.

tinued from last Sunday.)

HE weather had not been favorable for motoring for several days, but while waiting the sun to come out, Smith was ng to make his first trip. delay gave him time to think hat he might have to know his car in order to enjoy a ful trip. It was because he never been more than 20 miles his own garage that he did think it necessary to make preparation for the comtively short trip he was conplating, but, as usual, wanted to the right thing.

promptly assured him that things can happen on a trip than 200 miles, many things would never seriously inience the driver, provided he had in his tool kit everything that he might need.

"I'm well supplied with tools, if that's what you mean," Smith boasted.

"They are necessary," I agreed, "but have you some wire with you, for instance?"

"Wire?" Smith laughed at this. He wound up by showing me a steel tow-line which a local accessory dealer had sold him.

"Yes, I've got a wire," he went on. "What else do I need, a hairpin?"

"That's going a bit far," I replied, "though I have heard where hairpins have been useful in cleaning out stoppage in the gas line. I would even suggest adding a nail file to the kit. However, among other things you had better take along a can of cement and patches to repair inner tubes, a gallon can of lubricating oil, a can of cup grease and a collapsible bucket."

Smith saw the sense in some of these, but thought I was fooling about the wire and the file.

"Just to prove how necessary it is to have a lot of knick-knacks with you," I said, "take one of my own experiences as an example. I had stopped along the road one cold, wet day to buy gas. For safety's sake I shut off the engine while the tank was being filled. But when I went to start the engine I found that it had cooled to a point where it was necessary to choke the carburetor. The choker button on the dash had been getting loose, and, of course, the last pull on it put it temporarily out of commission. To start the engine, therefore, it was necessary to have the assistance of the gasoline dealer to hold the air choke lever back while I pressed my foot on the starter button. As long as there were two people to start the engine I could warm it up fairly well, but I knew that there would be times on my trip when assistance would not be so convenient.

"At this point I thought of the spool of fine wire which I always carry in the car. I cut off a piece of convenient length, tied one end to the end of the air choker lever on the carburetor and ran the other end up through to the instrument board. By pulling on this I was able to close the choke at will.

"Another day one of the ball and socket joints of the spark control assembly broke. This left me without any way of controlling the spark. By setting the distributer head in the fully advanced position (which was easily found by the speed of the motor) the engine ran normally when the car was on level ground, but when climbing hills it would knock, because the spark should have been retarded. So once again I had use for wire. An arrangement similar to that used for the carburetor enabled me to pull the distributer head around to retarded position, while another wire pulling in the opposite direction returned the distributer head to advanced position. Thus the car climbed all hills comfortably."

Smith was still skeptical about the file.

"One cannot always predict," I explained, "just what use these odds and ends will be to the driver; but if he has trouble and happens to have a few odd things along he will find use for them soon enough. I have used a file to turn screws which could not be reached with the ordinary screwdriver. I once found a broken penknife blade very essential in repairing a broken wire connection in the tail light. Tin foil has been used for fuses. And a roll of tire tape has numerous uses. Even a few rags come in handy; as, for example, when I recently discovered that my fan belt was slipping. Instead of spending a lot of time with the fan adjustment I slipped the belt off, turned it inside out, cleaned off the pulleys with a rag and put it on again. The new clean surfaces took up the slack."

I added that just as the little things about a car require the most attention, so are the home-made remedies important for emergency use. They must not be overlooked.

"When you pack up your kit," I said, "try to leave the troubles out. Nothing ever goes wrong when you're prepared."

But that remained to be seen!

Next week: A REAL VACATION.

ST. LOUIS-HANNIBAL TOUR PRACTICABLE, SCOUT PARTY FINDS

whole situation is. When this is clearly fixed in the public mind, it is felt there will be important changes for the better.

Dangerous Crossing Hurrying.

Many experts are alarmed over the present inconsistency in traffic regulation at congested points. It is pointed out that while regulations are being designed with the idea of saving human life motorists are being urged to hurry at crossings. Yet hurrying is recognized as inimical to the basic rules of safety.

The speed at which a human being can travel is definitely limited, which means that in all traffic regulations allowance should be made for the fact that a pedestrian can get away so quickly and no quicker. To figure on his getting out of the way any quicker than he is able to is the same as forcing him to cross in front of a moving street car. Yet, despite the fact that this point in traffic regulation is recognized, automobiles are running at higher and higher speeds at crossings, being encouraged to do so in the interest of speeding up vehicular traffic.

As one expert points out, what is the use of talking safety when each city appears to be interested primarily in keeping the streets from being congested?

Everyone seems to be working on the assumption that there is something particularly dangerous about vehicular congestion, whereas the facts show that most lives are lost where vehicles are at liberty to run along about as they please. There seems to be something inconsistent about the whole business.

As to Insurance.

Take it from another angle. The casualty insurers recently revised their rules and regulations so as to eliminate the necessity of restricting public liability and property damage to a specific driver, with indorsement if others were permitted to drive the car.

Obviously, this prevented a lot of motorists from allowing Tom, Dick or Harry to run their machines.

It is only necessary to note that insurance rates were reduced to see that this precautionarycoverage helped to cut down the number of accidents. It is argued by many that the insurers should have kept the lid down after they had started something worth while.

There is something rather startling in the fact that the law allows anyone who says he can drive one particular car to take the wheel of any car, and that the insurers will indemnify for any losses which such a driver may entail when he has borrowed, with permission, some car upon which insurance has been written.

Another Inconsistency.

The alarming increase in automobile accidents and fatalities throughout the country is not so alarming when one recalls that persons who never have demonstrated their ability to drive cars can operate their machines or machines owned by others in states where drivers have been examined and where people at the wheel expect a certain degree of ability to be displayed by those at the wheel of other cars.

Here is an inconsistency that is receiving serious attention:

The man who hails from a state where examinations are not the rule, or from a region where the holding of an operator's license is not required by law, is privileged to drive for a limited period in a state where licenses and examinations are required of local drivers. If he has permission of the owner, he is privileged to drive a car that does not belong to him. But, in spite of this leniency, he is not allowed to drive a locally-licensed vehicle unless he first takes an examination and obtains a license.

x It is not even necessary to purchase straight side rims for cars equipped with clinchers, for Cooper makes Clincher Balloons to fit 30x3½ clincher rims on Fords, Chevrolets and other light cars.

Once you equip your car with Cooper Balloons you will notice positive improvement. The strain and fatigue is taken out of driving. Holes and bumps in the road are passed over smoothly. Your car attains riding comfort never before thought of and becomes a real enjoyment.

Besides this, Cooper Balloons make motoring safer by giving added braking control—they reduce the upkeep cost of your car by absorbing shocks and vibrations.

These are betterments every car owner wants, and can have economically—because Cooper has developed the Cooper Full Balloon to fit in place of high-pressure tires—on the same rims, eliminating the annoyance and expense of wheel changeover.

Call on the nearest Cooper dealer and let him show you the particular size for your car. Ask him to ride you in a car equipped with Cooper Full Balloons for present wheels—experience for yourself their super qualities.

NOW IS THE TIME TO LET US REFINISH YOUR CAR IN DUCO

Don't delay till later in the season when there will be a long "waiting list" and hundreds of other car owners in town will be rushing to have their cars refinished in Duco for the fall and winter.

Let us have your car now and, in a very short time, it will be returned to you, looking like new in its satiny coat of Duco.

Duco, the fine new finish for automobiles, is practically impervious to weather conditions. Rain, snow, sleet, mud, dust and grit cannot harm its smooth, hard surface and deep, quiet lustre. And remember—when you are ready to buy a new car, a Duco finish will increase the trade-in or re-sale value of your old one. Come in today!

Quality Proof That Backs up the Demonstration

The dash and brilliancy of Hupmobile performance—its smoothness and the absence of vibration—its powerful and rapid acceleration—would bring praise to a car of far higher price.

In driving, too, you find true fine car ability. The two-plate clutch, for instance, is not out-performed by any clutch in higher priced cars. It is wonderfully easy to operate, and affords silent gear changes at any speed and under any circumstances.

Best of all, there is nothing superficial about Hupmobile performance. You can see Hupmobile quality with your own eyes.

The Parts Display in our showrooms reveals the very heart and soul of Hupmobile's celebrated durability and low costs. Be sure to see and study it—for it is an education in the things that make a car a real asset or an ever threatening liability.

Counter Shaft Gear: Drop-forged, chrome nickel steel, double heat-treated. Not only is the construction unusually heavy, but the gear is mounted on two special roller bearings, instead of on plain bushings.

GRAND PRIX WINNER IS 125-MILE-AN-HOUR CAR

The Alfa-Romeo racing cars, one of which Giuseppe Campari drove into first place in the European Grand Prix on Aug. 3, covering 503 miles at the rate of 70.94 miles an hour, have been proving themselves real speeders. One of them has done 125 miles an hour over a mile from flying start.

The Alfa-Romeos are powered with a straight eight engine of two liter cubic capacity, the bore being about 2.42 inches and the stroke 3.35 inches. There are two overhead camshafts and combustion chambers are hemispherical. Ignition is by magneto. The carburetor has a compressor, or supercharger that is said to increase power above 3000 r. p. m. 30 per cent. The car weighs about 1300 pounds, has four speeds and four-wheel brakes.

At its maximum speed of 5500 r. p. m., the engine develops 130 to 140 brake horsepower.

Stops! within 8 feet ~ going 15 miles an hour!

THIS is what properly adjusted Rusco-lined two-wheel brakes will do. The police stop-test standard is 20 feet, going at 15 miles an hour. Rusco-lined brakes do it in 8 feet. This has again been recently proved by a leading car manufacturer who standardizes on Rusco Lining.

Why Rusco commands the car

THE brake lining insures the brake. The quality of Asbestos that makes the lining insures the lining's braking surface. Canadian Crysotile Asbestos only goes into Rusco. It is "all-wool" and no shoddy. Only the giant looms, patented, built and used exclusively by the Russell Co., are powerful enough to weave this mineral-metal fabric. This weave makes long wear doubly sure.

Standard for Packard

IS THERE a company more careful in its selection of equipment than the Packard Company? Rusco out-tests all the standards set for a super-quality lining. Yet Rusco Crysotile Asbestos lining costs no more than the shoddy kind. Careful buying helps to make sure your safety. Insist that the repair man or dealer give you Rusco.

IN GIVING you Rusco—the finest quality brake lining it is possible for the repair man to obtain—he accepts a less profit than if he sold you any other brand.

If he recommended and sold you a cheaper grade it would cost you the same, but he would make three times as much profit.

You can depend upon such a man. It takes time and money to reline your brakes. It isn't a job you want done every day. When your brakes do need relining, be sure to get the benefit of Rusco superiority and the conscientious service of a repair man who is willing to take less profit in order to give you a better job.

ANOTHER GOOD ROAD OPEN ACROSS ILLINOIS

St. Louis-Mt. Carmel Road, Paved Except for 7 Miles—Good Going to Evansville.

The pavement from St Louis to Fairfield, Ill., has just been extended clear across the State to Mt. Carmel on the Illinois side of the Wabash River, except for seven miles. The 400-mile round trip from St. Louis to Evansville, Ind., against which motorists have been warned because of dirt roads and mud in the Wabash River bottoms, is now a pleasant weekend trip over concrete and gravel roads, except for a mile of cindered road and about six miles of sandy dirt road which is travelable in any weather.

The change in condition of this route, which has come about within the last few days, will mean a substantial saving of time and distance to motorists from Missouri and Kansas and Southern Illinois bound for Nashville, Tenn., as well as those bound for Florida via Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn., or Gadsden, Ala.

Two St. Louis girls, Misses Esther Hay and Nellie Rogers of 316 Laurel street, made the trip handily last weekend in a Ford touring car. They left at 4 p. m. Friday and stopped that night with friends at Mt. Vernon, Ill. Leaving Mt. Vernon at 9:30 a. m. Saturday, they reached Evansville at 2 p. m. Returning, they left Evansville at 3:15 p. m. Sunday, had dinner in Fairfield and reached Mt. Vernon at 9:40 p. m. They left Mt. Vernon half an hour later, and at midnight were in Belleville. It rained steadily thereafter, so, because of slippery streets, they did not reach their home until 2 a. m. They reported a very pretty trip all the way between Mt. Vernon and Evansville.

Leaving St. Louis, they drove 100 miles to Fairfield over pavement all the way, except a mile of cindered road west of Okawville which was rough but passable at all times. From Fairfield they had to detour to a point on concrete five miles west of Albion, Ill. From Albion they drove southeast to Grayville, Ill., over good gravel. They ferried over the Wabash River, and drove to Evansville over a very winding road through Poseyville and Cytherea. This road was covered with loose gravel, which made driving difficult, and was not sign-posted, so they lost their way several times.

They returned by what will be the regular route from Evansville to St. Louis—via Princeton, Ind., and Mt. Carmel, Ill.

They drove to Princeton over a concrete road which had been opened to traffic that morning. Then they had a good gravel road to the Mt. Carmel ferry, where they had to wait 45 minutes for the ferryboat because of the number of cars ahead of them. From Mt. Carmel to Albion they had concrete road. When they reached Albion, they found that, instead of having to use the detour to Fairfield, the road has been opened to traffic except for about 60 yards within the city limits. The road between the two now is concrete except for six miles of sandy dirt road. A 200-yard detour through a cemetery, and then it was pavement all theway to St. Louis, except for the mile stretch of cinders beyond Okawville.

E. C. MEISSNER NEW HEAD OF CLEVELAND MOTOR SALES CO.

E. C. Meissner.

E. C. Meissner, formerly of St. Louis but of recent years prominent in Terre Haute, Ind., has become president of the Cleveland Motor-Sales Co. of St. Louis, 2650 Locust boulevard, distributor of the Cleveland Six car.

For 10 years Meissner was with the late A. C. Einstein, manager of the Union Electric, and later was president of the Eagle Generator Co., manufacturing acetylene lighting plants when Henry Rottersmann and Emil Rottersmann, now vice-president and sales manager, respectively, of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co., were in his employ. Later Meissner and Henry Rottersmann engaged in the auto tire business in Terre Haute. When Rottersmann returned to St. Louis, Meissner remained in the tire business in Terre Haute, where he became known as "Good Roads Meissner." He became president of the Terre Haute Automobile Club, of which he still is a director, and president of the City Board of Public Safety, from which office he has just resigned, effective next month. Meissner will retain his Terre Haute tire business, but plans to reside in St. Louis and take an active part in the affairs of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co.

Henry and Emil Rottersmann have been trying for years to get Meissner into the automobile business with them, but it was only recently, when they showed him one of the new Cleveland Sixes and then got him to drive one home from the factory, that they persuaded him.

20 Dealers Hold Used Car Sale.

A co-operative used car sale has just been held by 20 Washington, D. C. auto dealers at the American League baseball park. Pepetition of the sale is expected.

Facts and Figures.

Alabama, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi are reported to have made appropriations and let contracts on the assumption that the Federal Government would appropriate $100,000,000 annually for the next three years. This is evidently to be the beginning of the proof that, as the vaudevilleans say, "All roads lead south."

Three Brake Briefs.

If the brakes do not seem to hold with the first depression of the brake pedal do not keep pushing on it. Release pedal and try again more vigorously. It frequently makes a difference which can only be explained by analysis of the particular brake assembly and the conditions.

When testing the brakes to see if the wheels lock it isn't necessary to slide the tires to a complete stop. Just lock the wheels for an instant and then examine the paving. Both tires should make the same length of mark on the paving, indicating that the adjustments are equalized.

All types of brakes are affected by the bouncing of the rear wheels and flexing of the springs except those operated on the hydraulic and compressed air principles.

Gum-dipping is the special Firestone process that made the Balloon Tire practical by adding extra strength and endurance to thin side wall construction. It insulates each strand of each cord with pure rubber—destructive internal friction is eliminated—resistance to wear is increased — and longer tire life results.

Firestone, having perfected the Gum-Dipping process and used it for years, was in the position to pioneer the Balloon Tire. Gum-dipping is the foundation of modern tire performance. Race drivers insist on Gum-Dipped cords—which have won all the important track and speedway events in recent

"AMERICA SHOULD PRODUCE ITS OWN RUBBER" Harvey S. Firestone

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

MORE BROADCASTERS FOR LATIN AMERICA

Change in System of Merchandising Will Benefit Five Principal Countries.

The adoption of an entirely new and extensive program for the promotion of radio broadcasting in Latin America by American interests following the abrogation of an agreement under which the American companies had jointly participated in South American radio business for the past three years with interests of England, France and Germany, was announced recentuy by Gen. J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who said the new plans gave the United States its first unrestricted opportunity to utilize fully is resources in developing radio in South America. Five of the principal countries of the continent, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Venezuela and Brazil will benefit by the new plan, according to Gen. Harbord.

The program not only includes a change in the system of distributing merchandise, which enables the American company to direct its radio activities with far greater efficiency than the previously existing arrangements had permitted, but it involves in addition the introduction of a practical method for the support of broadcasting which will be first applied as a trial to the powerful broadcast station at Buenos Aires.

Gen. Harbord explained that negotiations with other radio companies in South America had been in progress for several months, the outcome of which was the dissolution of the original local organization known as Radio Sud America. He pointed out that one radio company in England, France and Germany together with the Radio Corporation of America had originally formed this organization as the sole distributing agency for the sale of radio apparatus of English, French, German and American manufacture but this arrangement did not prove sufficiently flexible to enable the participating members to conduct their individual business on a basis best suited to the technical and commercial development of the art and industry in South America.

"The cancellation of this former agreement marks the beginning of a new era in our South American radio activities," Gen. Harbord said. "We are now in a position to carry the banner of the United States' leadership in radio below the Equator. We have been somewhat retarded in the South American field due to the restrictions imposed by the four-sided compromise which has been in force since the end of the war."

"One of the outstanding advantages of the plan which was made effective following our release from Radio Sud America, is a system giving direct contact with the South America radio market from New York, thus eliminating the expense incidental to carrying on operations through intermediate distributing centers. With newly organized outlets forming a part of the distribution circuits, terminating a Buenos Aires, Montivideo, Sao Paulo, Rio Janeiro, Valparaiso and other leading cities, every new development in broadcasting apparatus will be made available to South Americans practically simultaneously with their introduction in the United States.

"There is every reason to believe that Latin America will continue to show an increasing interest in radio broadcasting. Particularly is this true now that a way has been devised to give her the advantages of apparatus embodying all the latest improvements contributed by engineers and scientists in the United States. Such cities as Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Montivideo, Sao Paulo and Valparaiso and other centers of art and education scattered throughout the republics of Latin America are some of the great reservoirs which broadcasters may tap for a variety of program matter to be broadcast to millions of homes where the light of radio has not yet entered.

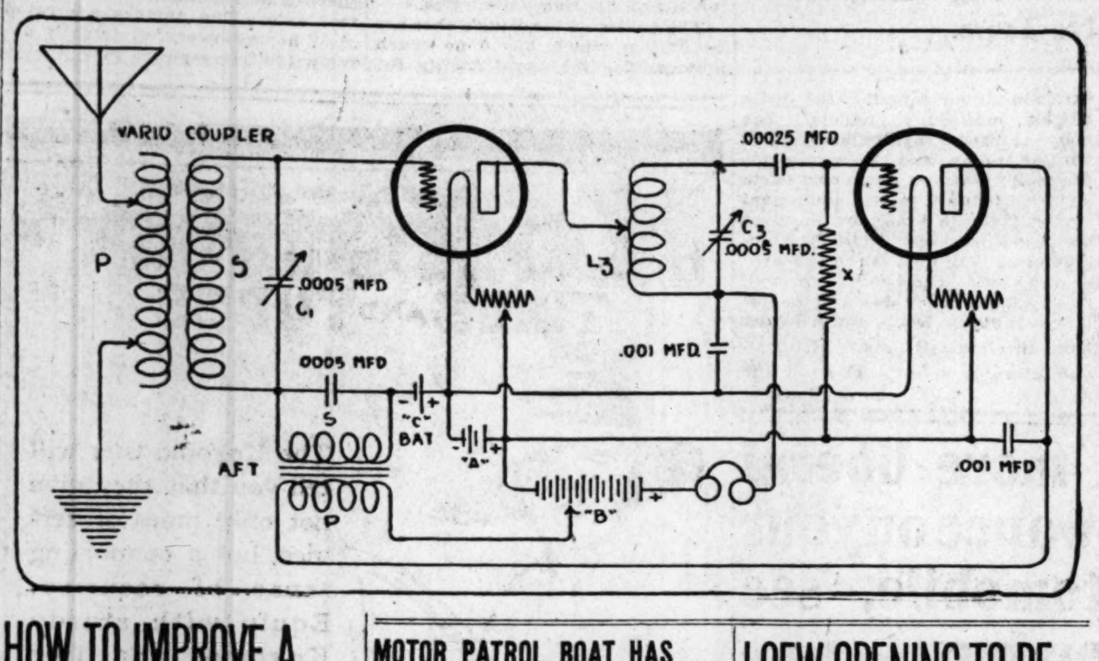
"Unlike North America, distances between cities are greater and a large percentage of the population resides in the vast farming regions. Radio broadcasting must break down these barriers of space which isolate town and village from the cities. Wire facilities, too, are not within as easy reach of the people of South America as they are in this country. Radio broadcasting will do much to supplement existing means of communication such as the telephone and the telegraph.

"It is a well-known fact that Latins now look to America to help in developing radio broadcasting in their respective countries. This knowledge is based upon the events of the past years, which have conclusively proved to the world that America now leads in radio communication in all its branches.

Keep Insulation Clean.

When winding a coil by hand, it is advisable to keep the insulation perfectly clean. The hands should be wiped dry frequently, otherwise perspiration accumulating on the insulation will lower the efficiency of the coil.

Reflex Circuit With Tuned Radio Frequency



HOW TO IMPROVE A REFLEX RECEIVER

Addition of Tuned r. f. Amplification Will Increase Range and Volume.

Numerous requests have been received for a circuit which combines the reflex principle with radio frequency amplification. The hook-up shown today differs slightly from others in that the grid-leak is not in the conventional position. A "C" battery is also added, for biasing the grid of the radio frequency amplifier.

Parts necessary for this circuit are:

1 vario-coupler.
2 .0005 mfd. variable condensers.
1 coupling coil.
2 sockets.
2 tubes, preferably of the "A" type.
2 rheostats.
1 audio frequency transformer.
1 grid leak.
1 4½-volt "C" battery.
2 .0005 mfd. fixed condensers.
2 .001 mfd. fixed condensers.
1 filament "A" battery.
1 plate or "B" battery. 67½-volts.

In wiring the set it is important that the stationary plates of the condenser C1 be connected to the grid of the amplifiers, while the stationary plates of C3 must be connected to the grid condenser of the detector tube.

The coupling coil L3 consists of 60 turns of No. '22 d. c. c. wire wound on a 3½-inch tube and tapped every 10 turns. The switch arm connecting with these taps is connected to the plate of the amplifier tube. The plate battery is tapped at 22½-volts for the detector. The grid-leak is shown at X. If a 200 type tube is used, try connecting the leak to the negative side of the filament.

The set is tuned by means of the variable condensers C1 and C3, with slight adjustments from time to time of the vario-coupler.

ELEVEN STANDARD WAVE TRANSMITTERS ANNOUNCED

One New Station Added to List Compiled by Bureau of Standards Engineers.

The Bureau of Standards radio experts have designated WBZ, at Springfield, Mass., as the eleventh standard wave station. The stations so listed have been found through tests to transmit at sufficiently constant frequencies to be useful to other broadcasters and fans in checking up their wave meters; none of them vary more than two kilocycles from the assigned frequencies or wave lengths.

The Westinghouse station, WBZ, at Springfield, is exceptional in that no variance from its assigned frequency of 890 kilocycles has been noted in mine tests between May 1 and July 16.

The other standard wave stations are:

	Kcs.
NSS—Annapolis	17.50
WGG—Tuckerton, N. J.	18.85
WII—New Brunswick, N. J.	22.04
WSO—Marion, Mass.	25.80
WWJ—Detroit, Mich.	580.00
WCAP—Washington, D. C.	640.00
WRC—Washington, D. C.	640.00
WSB—Atlanta, Ga.	700.00
WGY—Schenectady, N. Y.	790.00
KDKA—E. Pittsburg, Pa.	920.00

While the bureau experts cannot guarantee that the above stations will keep on their assigned wave lengths or frequencies constantly, they all use speed regulators on their high-powered, low-frequency alternators as a means of keeping their transmitters up to the standards established. Bureau of Standards Circular Letter No. 92 describes methods of standardizing wave meters with reference to these stations.

Broadcasting in Ceylon.

The Secretary of State of Ceylon has approved the introduction of wireless broadcasting under state control, though not necessarily operated by the state, Assistant Trade Commissioner Renshaw at Calcutta reports to the Department of Commerce. The Ceylon Government has decided to issue an unlimited number of licenses for receiving sets. Broadcasting will be undertaken by the wireless station at Colombo.

MOTOR PATROL BOAT HAS LATEST RADIO EQUIPMENT

Department of Commerce Craft Used to Apprehend Law Violators.

The Department of Commerce motor patrol boat "Kilkenny" has just had her radio equipment overhauled, and is now ready to carry on long-distance radio communications if necessary. This craft is used by a division of the Bureau of Navigation charged with the inspection of motor boats in Chesapeake Bay. It sees to it that motor boats comply with regulations and polices the Chesapeake and its tributaries. Offending motor boats equipped with radio listen when "KKI" goes on the air.

Sometimes Secretary Hoover uses this craft, and then its radio set is almost always in constant use, for the Secretary believes in keeping in touch with headquarters and also likes to listen in.

Supervisor R. Y. Cadmus of the Third Radio District overhauled the set, aided by Inspector Sterling, and, incidentally, practically made the transmitting and receiving sets over. During the tests he carried on communication by radio telegraph over a thousand miles, getting in touch with stations as far West as Kansas and Minnesota. He also talked with about 50 amateur stations, mostly in the third district, but some distant 200 miles, via radio phone. The Kilkenny's set is a 100-watt CW set, which can be used for telegraph or telephone work. It operates usually on 300 meters, but can transmit on 200 and 600 meters. She was put in service about 15 years ago, when unlawful operations by oystermen operating motor boats was reported in the Chesapeake. One of her first duties was running down a small craft, whose skipper was charged with shanghaing. This job was accomplished, although without the aid of radio. Today this fleet craft is the terror of unlicensed craft, most of which are soon run down. Those equipped with radio are said to "heave-to" at once, when they hear her call, KKI.

THIRTEEN BROADCASTERS "SIGN OFF" DURING JULY

Two New Stations Received Licenses During Past Week.

Two new broadcasting stations were licensed by the Department of Commerce during the past week. while 13 stations were reported to have closed down during July. During July 22 new stations were licensed, compared to 13 closing down.

GERMAN RADIO EXHIBITION

Not Likely That Foreign Made Apparatus Will Be Shown.

A large radio exhibition is planned in Berlin in connection with the international automobile show to be held from Sept. 16 to Oct. 3, according to a report to the Department of Commerce. At first it was planned to invite foreign radio manufacturers to participate, but it is said that the slump in the domestic radio trade has been so severe that local manufacturers are not willing to assist in giving publicity to any foreign made equipment.

LOEW OPENING TO BE BROADCAST BY KSD

Audible Program Will Consist of Musical Selections and Addresses.

The opening of Loew's State Theater, Washington avenue and Eighth street, next Thursday evening, will hold as much interest for broadcast listeners as it will for movie fans. Arrangements have been completed to broadcast the entire opening performance from Station KSD, and the program will probably last from 8 o'clock until midnight.

"N. T. G." the official announcer of station WHN, New York City, will act as master of ceremonies on the stage of the theater, introducing the stage, screen stars and other notables for the audience assembled in the theater as well as the invisable audience as well.

Among the speakers scheduled for the opening event are Mayor Kiel; Senator James J. Walker of New York State, who will speak on 'Motion Pictures on Legislation;' Marcus Loew, owner of the Loew chain of theaters; Eleanor Glynn, author; Mae Murray, movie star; Alice Ridnor who was star in Shubert's "Spices of 1923," and Yvonne Shelton, former star of Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic on the Amsterdam Roof, New York City.

Harry Richman, song writer and musical comedy star and who is well known to radio fans through Station W H N, will be included among the theatrical celebrities.

The New York train will bear practically only stage notables and will include Jane and Katherine Lee, well-known juvenile screen and vaudeville entertainers; Johnny Hines, screen star of "Torchy" comedy fame; J. Barney Sherry, screen character actor; the Three Brox Sisters from Irving Berlin's Music Box Revue; Kathleen Karr, the Gerhard and Jennings Sisters from Earl Carroll's "Vanities;" Sascha Beaumont and her dancing partner from "Vogues;" Tyler Brooks from Arthur Hammerstein's "Wildflower;" Elaine Palmer from Ed Wynn's forthcoming new production, and others of eqaul importance in the musical comedy world.

Ted Weem's Victor Recording Band, to be one of the features at Loew's State for several weeks, will also broadcast his program the opening night, as will Don Albert and his augmented orchestra in the pit. Norma Lee, soprano, from the Capitol Theater, New York City, will be featured in the atmospheric prologue entitled "The Madonna of the Rose," and harmonizing with the main theme of the feature picture, "Revelation." The prologue and musical setting for this prologue was staged and selected by Louis K. Sidney, general supervisor of prologues of the Loew circuit.

While the stage stars will hold the greatest amount of interest to radio fans, there will be a number of screen stars from the Metro-Goldwyn studios at Culver City, who will make short addresses.

For the Notebook.

A short aerial allows sharp tuning.

All radio frequency circuits have a tendency to howl and whistle if not carefully assembled.

Cheap material and poorly designed parts are the chief causes of loss of signals in a receiving set.

Because of atmospheric disturbances, a hot summer afternoon is usually the most difficult time for radio reception.

When no signals come in, either the antenna is grounded, "A" or "B" batteries dead, wrong connections, broken wire, bad soldering, or condenser is shorted.

NAVIGATION NEEDS MORE WAVE BANDS

Air and Sea Craft Demand Greater Consideration in Future Allotments.

Those who sail the seven seas, where there is no communication except via radio, and many others who depend solely upon this means of intercommunication feel that, what are technically termed "mobile stations" have not received adequate consideration in the distribution of the radio channels. A strong representation for the mobile services, comprising chiefly ships and aircraft, will be made at Secretary Hoover's radio conference next month, it is believed.

A resume of the wave allocations made at the last radio conference shows that approximately 110,000,000 people are concerned with radio service from and to 3100 ships, 300 aircraft and 900 commercial land stations, all of which stations are allotted only 37 separate channels through the ether. On the other hand, 20,000 amateurs have 33 such channels, and 600 broadcasting stations, of interest to about 100,000,000 people, are allowed to operate on 53 separate wave lengths, although several other forms of communication are available for these people.

Especially in the Navy and Shipping Board, marine operators and experts believe mobile stations deserve a better proportion of operating wave lengths, in view of their sole dependence on radio and the importance of it in insuring the safety of life and property at sea.

Commenting on the situation a naval officer recently stated:

"There is one elemental fact in respect to radio which should govern all discussion of the subject and to which all other considerations should be subordinate. It is that radio is primarily an agency for communication with ships and aircraft, and within this field there is no substitute for it. In nearly, if not quite, all its other applications the same ends may be achieved by other means. The importance of radio for communication with ships and aircraft is so great in connection with the safety of life and military considerations, that no other applications of the art should be allowed to diminish its usefulness.

In the enthusiasm which has developed over radiophone broadcasting and amateur work, many Government agencies, private interests and the public generally have lost sight almost entirely of the foregoing facts. They have lost sight also of the fact that the efficiency of a transmitter depends somewhat on the size and position of its antenna, and that mobile stations are limited in the amount of wire they can carry and the positions in which they can carry it, whereas, while the optimum frequencies for mobile service are undoubtedly convenient ones for stations on land, such as radiophone broadcast ones, such stations can be readily adjusted to other frequencies without causing a loss of efficiency.

Allowing a separation of 15 k-c between channels, the following table recapitulates the recommendations of the second national radio conference:

Service.	People Concerned	Radio Stations	Number Channels
Total Ships 27,000	..	3100
Mobile Aircraft 1200	110,000,000	300	37
Land Stations 900		900
Special Experimental 560	......	560	18
Amateur 20,000	20,000	20,000	33
Broadcasting	10,000,000	600	53
Unassigned wave lengths	......	...	6
Reserved wave lengths	......	...	4,020

For Perfect Contact.

To connect a wire to a lug, loop the wire once only around the neck of the lug, heat the joint with the copper, and touch it with the solder. Only a drop is necessary. Take the copper quickly away and keep the wire motionless until the solder cools. If the solder is disturbed while the joint is cooling, it will crystalize, giving a dull surface and a weak joint. If a wire is wrapped several times around a small lug, it will infallibly break the lug when trying to remove the wire.

Questions and Answers

All queries must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

Q. (1) Is an aerial 50 feet high at one end and 60 feet high at the is the same height at both ends? (2) What is the proper length for a single ribbon aerial ⅝ inch wide and 69 feet high? (3) which is the best, an inside o ran outside lightning arrester? (4) Is the vacuum arrester better than any other type? (5) I have a three-tube receiver with which I wish to use a storage battery. Will any changes be necessary to make the change from dry cells? C. N.

A. (1) Yes. The difference of a few feet at either end is negligible. (2) For reception from the long-wave stations as well as the short-wave broadcasting stations, an aerial between 60 and 80 feet will be found satisfactory at the height you mentioned. (3) This is entirely a matter of personal choice as one is an efficient as the other. The writer prefers the outdoor type. (4) We are not prepared to say which type of lightning arrester is the "best." There are several varieties on the market bearing the underwriter laboratories' stamp of approval which will be found to serve in a satisfactory manner, the purpose for which they are made. (5) No changes will be necessary if your tubes are designed for operation at the same voltage delivered by the storage you intend using. If your present tubes are made for operation with dry cell batteries it will be necessary to insert a resistance in series with them andthe 6-volt storage battery. We cannot give specific data because you did not mention the type of tubes you are using and the size of the storage battery you contemplate using.

Q. I wonder why I do not hear KSD as well when using a three-circuit receiver as with a single-circuit set? Both sets have picked up Cuba, California and Massachusetts broadcasters? H. W. C. (Henderson, Ky.)

A. It is quite possible that the receiver will not tune up to 546 meters, or else it may be due to inexperience in tuning, on the part of the operator the set. Three-circuit sets are somewhat more difficult to tune than those of the single-circuit variety, however this difficulty can be overcome by practice in tuning.

Q. What is the hook-up recommended by the makers of the Diode tube?—J. L. VF.

A. The Diode tube is recommended for use in any circuit where a crystal detector could be used.

Q. What are the best kind of headphones to get for a crystal set?—J. M.

A. We do not recommend any particular brand, but it is advisable to get the best you can afford. "Saving" money by purchasing receivers of an inferior quality instead of getting the best is false economy. The best proof of this statement is to compare both kinds, changing from one to the other when listening to a distant station.

Q. In operating a 6 or 8 tube receiver and loud speaker, is it better to get separate storage "B" batteries for the set and speaker, or may they be operated from the same batteries? A. R.

A. They may be operated from the same batteries.

Q. Please give directions for graining a bakelite panel. R.T.

A. Probably the simplest and easiest way to accomplish this, would be to fasten the panel to the work bench by means of small nails around the edge, care being taken to protect the panel from the sharp edges of the nails. Procure a small block of wood about 2 in. by 3 in. with a smooth surface. Around this block, fasten a piece of 00 sandpaper with the rough side out. Then rub the panel lengthwise, never crosswise. Frequent applications of machine oil will be beneficial. From time to time remove all dust formed by wiping panel with a piece of waste. Note where the gloss remains and correct by additional rubbing. The work is tiresome, but with patience a nicely grained panel will be the result.

LEVIATHAN IS FIRST BROADCASTING SHIP

Feat Made Possible Through Use of "Coupling Tube Unit."

The United States Steamship Leviathan is the first floating broadcasting station. It is not officially licensed to broadcast, but is operating on an experimental license with the call WSN and the U. S. Shipping Board has applied to the Department of Commerce for permission to broadcast while at sea.

During a recent trip to Europe, the Leviathan transmitted several concerts supplied by the ship's band and artists aboard. These concerts were picked up by several ships, which reported them with thanks. A station of the British Broadcasting Co. also intercepted the concerts and rebroadcast them from the company's stations in England, resulting in many letters of appreciation from British fans.

Commenting on the experiment, an official of the Shipping Board said that while the broadcasting was not established permanently, the trials had proven that broadcasting of radio concerts at sea was practical and appreciated by thousands of persons out of range of most land broadcasters, and other means of amusement. Little interference is anticipated from the Leviathan, as it is pointed out that in New York a number of broadcasters transmit daily while several commercial stations are in operation and many ships constantly "using the air"—all operating efficiently and satisfactorily. This is taken as an indication that the sea broadcasting on a suitable wave length would be a step in advance, which would not affect adversely the exchange of radio telegraph communications nor decrease the present efficiency of the constant watch maintained on the ship for distress signals.

The approval of the Department of Commerce is being sought and it is believed that an international understanding will eventually have to be secured in order to eliminate needless interference both afloat and ashore, before ocean radio concerts can be permanently established.

The Leviathan is well adapted to broadcast radio concerts without undue interference with its regular commercial traffic and SOS calls. This is due to modern radia equipment, especially a device wanted by a naval radio expert which permits multiple reception on a single aerial. The large fighting craft of the United States are now equipped, or being equipped, with this apparatus, known in the navy as the "coupling tube unit," but recently named the "unitenna" in its commercial application ashore.

Recent tests on the Leviathan by naval and Shipping Board radio experts proved that with the coupling tube unit, messages could be received on 600 meters while the ship's 6KW-tube transmitter was radiating 25 amperes on 2100 meters. The transmitting tube was located only 5 feet from the receiving set in the tests, the antennae were parallel and only 30 feet apart. This indicates practical operation in duplex, which will aid in speeding traffic, as it permits reception and transmission at the same time.

The selectivity of the receivers operating with the coupling unit was also demonstrated. WOO came in strong on 506 meters, while the ship was in New York harbor only a half mile from WEAF which was transmitting on 492 meters. With this device the ship's receiving set picked up Eastern coast broadcasting stations of the United States, while the Leviathan was lying at Cherbourg, France. Improvements by locating the receiving sets at a greater distance from the ship's transmitters, and improvements in receivers and amplifiers are planned.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

Prespective purchasers of "1925 model" radio receiving sets will be particularly interested in the new De Forest D-12 Reflex Radiophone Receiver. It is a four-tube long-distance indoor loop receiver with self-contained batteries and loud speaker, featuring compactness, simplicity, efficiency and portability. The manufacturers claim it to be one of the easiest of all long-distance receivers, to operate. Also that it is highly selective. Six stages of amplification with only four tubes result in tube and battery economy, while at a slight additional cost a self-contained storage filament battery may be had in place of dry cells. It is obtained in two cabinet styles. One is an embossed gray leather-covered cabinet finished in a two-tone effect, and the other is a two-tone mahogany.

The Marshall-stat is a new universal rheostat for all tubes. It can be easily and quickly mounted by drilling only one hole in the panel. Marshall specially treated resistance discs are used in its construction. They are claimed to be unbreakable and provide fine vernier adjustment.

Acme Apparatus Co.'s new low-loss variable condensers will be welcomed by the fans interested in realizing the utmost efficiency possible from their receivers. It is provided with a celluloid cover which excludes all dust and foreign matter which might impair the efficiency of the condenser. A friction vernier gives an 8 to 1 reduction and enables very fine adjustment and control.

NAVY TESTING HIGH SPEED RADIO SENDING APPARATUS

Planned Eventually to Clear All Transcontinental Matter in an Hour Each Day.

One night recently while the Naval Radio Central at Washington was testing out reception from San Diego, Cal., with the Creed automatic recorder at the rate of 40 words per minute one of the radio men in watch also copied the West Coast station with a perfect score. Some one immediately asked what was the use of the automatic recorder? But this test was only a preliminary one; the communication office is planning to increase the speed to 100 words per minute or over, when installations, including relays, are tuned up properly and actual high-speed transmission is practical.

MARMON PRESIDENT VISITOR IN ST. LOUIS

Williams Says Country-Wide Trip Convinces Him Business Outlook Is Good.

G. M. Williams, president of the Nordyke-Marmon Co. of Indianapolis, was in St. Louis Friday visiting the More Automobile Co., local Marmon distributor, in the course of a country-wide swing among Marmon distributors and dealers that took him from the East to the Pacific Coast and the Southwest.

"Discussion of business conditions with our own dealers, bankers and prominent men on this long trip indicates that we can look forward, because of the very sound economic prospect ahead, to very desirable business. There is a generarally optimistic feeling. Even in Seattle, where they have been pessimistic for four years, they are feeling very much better and believe good business lies ahead. In Texas the cotton crop is beyong all expectations, so, naturally, Texas is feeling good. There is plenty of money in the banks in the larger cities. There is reason to feel good about the automobile business."

Of Interest to Dealers.

Commenting on the general automobile factory outlook, Williams said he interpreted conditions as indicating a 1925 production on a par with that of 1924 rather than that of 1923.

He touched on a matter being agitated in many quarters among automobile dealers when he remarked: "The manufacturers, as a whole, are rapidly coming to realise that closer relations with the public and with their dealers are necessary. Every manufacturer, of course, must keep abreast of the times and must improve his product. But changes and improvements in automobiles should be logical and gradual instead of in sudden jumps. A car can be kept ahead of its day, with the public getting the benefit of the most careful research, yet without penalizing public and dealers by sudden changes in type. You might say that the public is sick of undigested experiments and that the factories are realizing it more this summer than ever before.

Factories Realizing Facts.

"In a way, the factories have been too intent on selling a job or a lot of jobs to a man. Now they are appreciating the fact that after they have sold him they have got to help him conserve and get the most out of his investment.

"The automobile is a transportation necessity just as is the steam locomotive. The industry can no more afford to let a faulty car be turned out than Baldwin can afford to turn out a faulty locomotive. It has come to the point where the factory that will not build a real value-giving car cannot expect to survive.

"In the past the industry has known all this. But today factories and dealers are realizing it and acting on it. Both the industry and the buying public will benefit more and more from this realization of these basic facts."

'SEALED ORDER' WEEK CONCLUDED

Oakland Car's Merits Demonstrated to Public in Unusual Manner.

The "sealed order week" just concluded by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., distributer of the Oakland six in the St. Louis district, and Oakland dealers all over the country, was not only one of the most unusual demonstrations in the history of the automobile industry, but it also probably acquainted more persons with the car than ever before.

The various Oakland dealers had no knowledge of what the sealed orders would contain, but were requested to open one seal each day of the week and follow the instructions contained therein for that day. Those who saw the orders carried out saw a series of interesting tests.

Probably the most dramatic were the mechanical four-wheel brake tests the first day and the Duco finish tests the third day. Stopping quickly on dry pavement and on wet pavements without skidding, and stopping while turning a corner constituted the high spots in the four-wheel brake test.

The Duco finish was, if anything, even more spectacular, lime cement, boiling water, hot tar, burning paper, ammonia and other destructive compounds being placed on the body to prove the imperviousness of this new finish to the most destructive elements.

Operation and control features were stressed in demonstrations the second day, and safety features the fourth day.

The fifth day stressed the many advanced features which the Oakland dealers say proves the Oakland car is "a year in advance of its field," such as four-wheel brakes; centralized controls to permit convenient driving day and night without removing the hands from the steering wheel, save to shift gears; Duco finish; Fisher-built bodies; disc steel wheels of Oakland; permanent top; special glass inclosures and automatic spark control to eliminate one more annoyance.

"Drive It Yourself" day was the finale of the week. Those who took advantage of "Drive It Yourself" day, without obligation, appreciated more fully how the car throttled down to three miles an hour; how it accelerated to as high a speed as anyone could wish to drive; how quickly it could be brought to a stop with its mechanical four-wheel brakes; how it would take the hills on high.

King George Orders New Cars on 156-in. Wheelbase

Magnificient Limousines and Shooting Cars Are More Than 18 Feet Long—Engines Sleeve Valve Type.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Five new automobiles have just been completed for King George—two of them limousines on a 156-inch wheel base Daimler chassis, two others shooting cars on the same chassis, and the fifth a limousine on a smaller Daimler chassis. The two large limousines replace Daimler cars that King George has used since 1910.

The four large cars have an overall length of 18 feet and 7 inches, a 5-foot track and a width of 6 feet and 4 inches.

The body framework is of ash with aluminum paneling, the doors having mahogany panels. The body paint is royal claret, lined with vermilion, and the royal arms are emblazoned on doors and back. Exterior mountings and equipment are of polished brass, while silver and ivory are used inside. The upholstering is in blue morocco leather and cloth. The cars carry small royal standards by day and purple lamps at night. Doors and windows have mechanically operated glass, and there is a large glass at the back. The driver's compartment is separated by sliding windows from the interior.

The shooting cars, or "brakes," have long seats along each side and are finished in natural wood effect. The body space is covered with an awning or canopy and there are side curtains to let down in case of rain. The cars are fitted with gun racks and spaces for carrying lunch and hunting accessories.

The bodies of the King's cars are by a firm which has done coach building for the royal family for more than a century.

The four large cars are powered with six-cylinder sleeve valve engines, with bore of 4¾ inches and stroke of 5.2 inches, dual ignition and automatic multiple jet carburetors. Engine and all accessories are finished in nickle. There is a vibration damper on the forward end of the crankshaft. The clutch is single plate and there is a four-speed gear box and worm drive to real axle. The engines are rated at 57 horse-power, but actually develop 100 horse-power more.

pen-Air "Carmen" Begins Next Sunday Night in Forest Park

x Performances of Bizet's Lyric Tragedy to Be Given by Cast of Metropolitan, Chicago and San Carlo Singers.

HE vogue of "Carmen," Georges Bizet's operatic masterpiece, which will be presented in six performances at the Municipal ter, beginning next Sunday night, is now at its height. The open- production in this city was preceded by a similar one in New . Work comes from Russia that the famous Moscow Art Thea- has recently staged the opera in a manner breaking with all for- traditions; and Miss Geraldine Farrar, at the head of her own pany, will give an initial production of the work, arranged ac- ling to new ideas of her own, on Sept. 26 at Portsmouth, N. H.

During this week all the principals and executives of the St. s production will gather in the city. Armando Agnini, stage di- r of the Metropolitan Opera House, will arrive this afternoon to a ensemble rehearsals at the amphitheater in Forest Park. Agnini been general director of the summer opera performances at Ra- Park, Chicago. He will be aided by Oscar Sanne, assistant stage ager at the Metropolitan, who arrived yesterday.

nest Knoch, who has been ing the chorus since Aug. 1, joined yesterday by Isaac Van , assistant conductor at the go Opera, who will alternate Knoch as musical director of production. Giuseppe Bonfiglio, ier danseur at the Metropoli- has been here for a month, ing a ballet of 50.

From Havana, Mexico City.

ROM Asheville, N. C., where there has been a brief season of summer grand opera, will James Wolf, baritone, of the opolitan, who will take the of Zuniga, and Miss Elda Vet- St. Louis soprano, who will the role of Micaela. From the nati Zoo-Opera, which closed night, will come Mario Valle, esco Curci and Natale Cervi, popular here as members of San Carlo Opera Company. will alternate with Max Pan- , Russian baritone, in the role amillo.

uel Salazar, tenor, will arrive day from Havana, where he been singing this summer. Miss Luisa Tscobar, dramatic so- , who will alternate with esca Peralta in the part of , is portraying the gypsy tonight in a gala performance opera in Mexico City, and leave directly afterward for St.

her members of the cast—a one for most of the prin- parts—include Ludovico Oli- , tenor, of the Chicago Opera Ulysses Lappas, tenor, also of Chicago organization, who will ate with Salazar as Don Jose; and Gladys Swarthout and Elizabeth Kerr, who sang Mercedes and Frasquita in Mary Garden's production at the Chicago opera, and will have the same roles here. Florence Rudolph, solo dancer at the Metropolitan, is due Thursday.

Entirely New Libretto.

ACCORDING to reports from Moscow, a sensation was created there by the production of "Carmen" according to the notions of Vladimir Nemirovich-Dantchenko, co-founder, with Stanislavsky, of the Moscow Art Theater. Preparations began a year ago, and included the writing of an absolutely new libretto. That of Meilhac and Halevy was discarded in favor of one based more closely upon the original tale by Prosper Merimee. A Russian critic writes:

"The central idea, sharply outlined, is the eternal primitive struggle between male and female. And so the struggle among Jose, Carmen and the toreador is unfolded before the audience. In order that this struggle may lose none of its brilliance and its reality, in order that it may grip the entire auditorium, the regisseur boldly swept from the stage the inevitably incongruous chorus. Instead, he placed it upon high pedestals. And from this vantage point the chorus, brought closer to the choruses of the ancient Greek tragedies of Sophocles, Euripides and Aeschylus, becomes a living bond between the spectators and the concentrated tragedy of the three protagonists on the stage below.

Chorus Is Motionless.

THE chorus remains almost motionless throughout the opera. Yet it forcefully reacts upon the action unfolding below. The moment you glance up at this chorus it compels you bodily by its pantomime, mimicry and gestures to concentrate your whole attention again upon the main characters. This was an emphatic and complete victory over the ubiquitous chaotic chorus, and besides it afforded the chorus an opportunity to sing concert fashion, achieving the subtlest nuances of choral work, which was formerly rendered impossible by mad rushing up and down the stage. A new and unobstructed manner of producing any opera at all is thus opened up.

"The opera is considerably cut, and almost all the recitatives introduced for the Viennese Opera production by the composer Hiro are discarded. Of the original score, only Bizet's overture and the parade of the guards are omitted. The rest is played by an orchestra of forty-five musicians, seated, Bayreuth-fashion, in a pit beneath the stage, whence the music drifts ideally, softly, delicately, intimately.

"It would be infinitely interesting to comment upon each one of a mass of details, but this would entail an entire treatise. In concluding a fleeting commentary I can only say that nothing of the kind has ever been seen in either London, Paris, Berlin or Vienna. It would be a most interesting experiment to present such a Carmen abroad. Its appearance would have the effect of an exploding bomb. With justified impatience we shall await the promised production of Moussorgsky's Boris

What They Are DOING IN Movie Studios

Douglas Fairbanks' New York office announces that "The Thief of Bagdad" will begin a limited engagement in St. Louis at the American on Aug. 31. This new Fairbanks picture, founded on the Arabian Nights, has been seen in but four important cities—at the Liberty Theater, New York, where it opened on March 18, celebrating its 250th presentation on July 21; for 10 weeks at the Colonial Theater, Boston; 10 weeks at the Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, and it is now running at Grauman's Egyptian Theater, Hollywood, Cal.

Following the completion of "Forbidden Paradise," Pola Negri will star in a new production, "A Woman Scorned."

Charles Ray, who returns to his old public in the title role of "Dynamite Smith," a Thomas H. Ince production, to be released by Pathe early in the fall, has a representative collection of snuff boxes, pipes and cigarette cases, tobacco containers, jars and the like, from primitive Indian workmanship and the elaborate enamel inlay, gold

Pauline Lord Star of Opening Bill at Orpheum

THE Orpheum will reopen next Sunday with a bill featuring Pauline Lord, who starred in this country and in England in Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer prize play, "Anna Christie." She will present at the Orpheum a dramatic playlet, "For Five Thousand Dollars," by Hilliard Booth. This is her first adventure in vaudeville. She has played in Gorky's "Night Lodging," "The Deluge" and "Samson and Delilah," with Ben-Ami.

The American will open its season on Aug. 31 with Douglas Fairbanks' picturization, "The Thief of Bagdad." Another film, to be presented at the American, is Cecil De Mille's production "The Ten Commandments."

The Rialto will reopen on Aug. 31 with the customary vaudeville and movie program. The bill at the Grand Opera House, beginning today, includes "A Dance Voyage," featuring Helen Pachaud; Jimmy Russell and Peggy Burke, in "Johnny's New Car;" Harry van Fossen, minstrel; Baxley and Porter, in "Neighbors," a comedy; and Bobby Adams, a St. Louis girl, in "Personality Plus."

The Gayety's undertaking for the week is "Miss Tabasco," with Lena Daley and Eddie Schubert.

The musical comedy stock company at the Liberty Music Hall this week will offer the farce with music, "The Bobbed Haired Bandits," in which Donna Monroze, Rica and Roy Hughes and Delaine Chalmers, dancer, will have prominent roles. The picture end of the program will be "A Romance of the Wastelands," in which Art Mix is the star. In addition there will be a number of vaudeville acts on the bill and members of the Liberty Maids company will introduce their own specialties during the action of "The Bobbed Haired Bandits."

Valentino's Return, Loew State Opening The Week's Features

Offerings Include "Monsieur Beaucaire," "Single Wives," "The Mail Man," "Missing Daughters," "Another Scandal" and "Revelation."

RUDOLPH VALENTINO returns to the screen in Booth Tarkington's "Monsieur Beaucaire" at the Missouri Theater this week. Aside from the personal popularity of Valentino, Booth Tarkington's immortal story, with its romantic, colorful and spectacular background of the Court of King Louis XV of France, has remarkable pictorial possibilities. Valentino portrays the brave-hearted, impetuous Duke who defies the King of France and goes to England disguised as a commoner.

The cast supporting Valentino is one of the most pretentious that has ever appeared in motion pictures. It includes Bebe Daniels, Lowell Sherman, Lois Wilson, Doris Kenyon, Paulette Duval and other screen and stage artists, as well as a small army of extras used to recreate France and England of the Seventeenth Century. Joseph Littau and his orchestra have prepared a special musical score. There is an atmospheric prelude staged by the art studio of the Missouri Theater.

Harry Langdon in a Mack Sennett comedy, "His New Mamma," and Lilly Kovacs, the "Girl Paderewski," are also on the program.

"Single Wives," another First National society drama, comes to the Grand Central, Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric Theaters this week. It features Corinne Griffith, Milton Sills, Lou Tellegen, Henry B. Walthall, Phyllis Haver, John Patrick, Phillip Smalley and Kathlyn Williams. An added attraction at the Grand Central will be the appearance of Beatrice Teller, Chicago violinist.

The picture concerns itself with young married couples and with wives who are left to their own devices when the husbands become engrossed with business. The story opens upon the first wedding anniversary of a certain married couple. The wife's mother, in honor of the occasion, decided to restage in every detail the wedding ceremony that occurred a year before. The bride is thrilled and enthusiastic, but the husband spends the entire evening in a corner discussing business and finally decides that he must go away. The couple had been planning a second honeymoon and the wife's disappointment precipitates a serious quarrel. He goes away and another man enters in the person of Lou Tellegen.

Meanwhile the girl's mother, played by Miss Williams, who has been a "single wife" for years, is fighting against a growing affection for another man who has been a former suitor. Walthall is the man and Phillip Smalley the mother's husband.

Emory Johnson's new picture, "The Mailman," heroizing the letter carrier, is featured at the Capitol Theater, together with the first film in the series of new Jack Dempsey pictures, featuring the world's champion. Johnson is the director, who took three public service characters and built film productions around them. "In the Name of the Law" dealt with the policemen, "The Third Alarm" with the firemen, and now "The Mailman" presents the letter carrier in a drama that is both melodramatic and amusing.

Ralph Lewis and Johnny Walker, who appeared in the two previous offerings, also are featured in "The Mailman." To the casual observer there may not be much romance or excitement in delivering letters, but the picture proves that almost anything might happen through faulty delivery of mail.

"Winning His Way" is the title of the Dempsey film, presenting the famous fighter in a complete two-reel drama that culminates in a ring exhibition. Both attractions will be shown at the Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric the last half of the week.

Eileen Percy, who in private life is the wife of Ulrich Busch, grandnephew of the late Adolphus Busch, appears both in person and on the screen at the Delmonte this week. She tells of her experiences on the stage and in the movie studios. The title of the picture in which she will be seen is "Missing Daughters," described as a society melodrama and in the cast also is Eva Novak, herself a St. Louisan. A jazz band is also on the Delmonte program, together with a comedy and the news films.

"Missing Daughters" deals with the problem of the several thousand girls who disappear from their homes every year and are never heard of afterwards and is said to have a strong heart appeal It deals more or less frankly with the question of the temptations which confront the modern girl and is said to be entertaining and replete with thrills and action.

In the cast with Miss Percy and Miss Novak are Pauline Starke, Claire Adams, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Robert Edeson, Sheldon Lewis, Walt Whitman, Walter Long and Chester Bennett.

The Kings leading attraction is Lois Wilson in "Another Scandal," the picturization of Cosmo Hamilton's latest novel. Miss Wilson plays Beatrix Franklin, the wife who means the opposite of what she says and becomes angry at her husband for not knowing it. Holmes Herbert plays the unfortunate husband who doesn't understand women. Ralph Bunker is seen as the "poor devil of a poet in goggles," who worships Beatrix. Alluring Flora Le Breton portrays May Beamish, a vixenous little gold digger who has no compunction

Cincinnati's Zoo Opera a Bengal Bayreuth

By ALISON SMITH,
Assistant Music Critic of the New York World.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 16.

THE Herr Doktor is a very important person in Cincinnati. In fact, he has the general aspect that would make him an important person almost anywhere—portly, benevolent and without a gleam of humor in his mild Germanic eyes. He is capable of long, involved philosophical jokes, but no one could ever accuse him of spontaneous levity—especially about music, which is his god. So when he speaks with reverence of the "Zoo-opera," you strangle your first hilarious squawk of surprise and murmur the proper response when in doubt musically, which, according to some resourceful soul, is, "After all, Beethoven is Beethoven."

As a matter of fact, there is no reason why an opera house should not flourish in a zoo. It is just as logical and much more soothing a spot than the site of our own Metropolitan in the midst of the jungle of shrieking motors and street cars and billboards which is Broadway.

No one but a literal-minded lunatic could understand the term as meaning that the cast of the opera was recruited from the personnel of the Zoo. And yet—Zoo-opera! The words so oddly linked together bring to one's startled mind irresistible pictures of a sleek, white panther singing Isolde, of a kindly, shaggy bison roaring Kurvenal, of a cobra as Salome and a flamingo as Carmen and a group of pious penguins for the monks of "Parsifal." And over them all the urgent, agile wavings of a long-haired chimpanzee conductor.

Big, Open-air Stadium.

This, of course, is sheer delirium and must on no account be voiced in Cincinnati. Cincinnati's summer opera is famous. Everyone who recognizes any music beyond the echoes of the Metropolitan has heard of the excellent group of singers gathered together every year with their orchestra for the benefit of musical crowds in that most musical city. Everyone, however, does not know that its founders were deliberate in placing the opera house in the center of a vast and variegated zoo which in its way is as famous as the musical center it harbors.

Its other name is Eden—you ask for the Zoo-Eden street car, as any billboard will tell you. And this, too, is as it should be. Once within the gates of Eden, you understand why the combination is not incongruous to the native music lover. For this is no ordinary zoo, with its attendant horrors of bars and peanut shells and rocking, miserable animals. It is a meandering, spacious garden so overgrown with green that the silent, shadowy shapes prowling within it might have been transported to their own jungles. In the center stands the opera house, a huge, open-air stadium encircled by the lion houses and the park of the birds. And here a nightly procession of opera-goers crowd their way past the drowsy animals and seat themselves with that rapt and unmistakable expression seen usually only in the parterre boxes on Wagner night.

Stella De Mette as Ortrud.

THIS night it was "Lohengrin." The trim young conductor enters, thire is the familiar, exciting tap of the baton and the orchestra drifts into the long-drawn-out, ethereal chords of the prelude. He is an eager conductor, this Arthur Lyford, and he has a responsive and sensitive orchestra to work with. And the parting of the curtains reveals a company ranging from excellent to adequate. This was one of the nights when a single role eclipses all other and this time at was Ortrud. She was sung by Stella de Mette, a young prima donna well known to New York, who made her personality felt even in the brooding silence of the first act. Later the vindictive power of her dark voice gave an interpretation of Ortrud's frustrated villainy that sent the house into cheers.

With such music the haphazard scenery is of no consequence. Wagnerian scenery is usually a bit sketchy, and this was the usual colllection of wrinkled cloth horizons. There were moments when you felt that the particularly moth-eaten canvas swan might have ben replaced by one of the stately white creatures swimming placidly in the pool before the stadium. But this is a detail. Scenery can be anything you make it, and the "Antwerp plain near the River Scheldt" is too real to be injured by the limitations of any stage.

Silent, Understanding Audinece.

THE audience was extraordinary. With due respect to the diamond horseshoe, this silent, understanding audience, hatless, coatless, in summer organdies and alpacas, is far more sympathetic. The house is packed to its open gates and the crowd spreads over to the Casino outside, where for the price of a ginger ale (alas, for the old Cincinnati Pilsener!) you may sit and drink and still hear the music. These people know what they came for and understand its enjoyment. It is an audience steeped in the traditions of Bayreuth, an audience that could even be trusted not to applaud after the frist act of "Parsifal."

There is another audience in the cages outside from which no testimony has as yet been gathered. What the beasts and birds and reptiles think of these nightly performances will be unrecorded until some later St. Anthony arrives as interpreter. At least, they pay the music the grateful tribute of silence. Occasionally, above a pianissimo passage in the music, you hear faint jungle rustlings and twitterings, but these are hushed as softly and the field is left again to Wagner.

There is, however, a story of an outburst from the one prize hippopotamus, who looks so much like our own Mrs. Murphy of Central Park that I can think of her by no other name. It was at a performance of "Tannhaeuser," and as the triumphant echoes of the "Pilgrims' Chorus" soared over the park, Mrs. Murphy awakened. Moreover, she lifted up her voice in a long, roaring protest against the entire Wagnerian school. The louder the chorus sang, the more Mrs. Murphy bellowed. What means were taken to stop this endurance test is not recorded, but we rather fancy that Mrs. Murphy won. And, with due deference to Wagner, we rather hope she did. Mrs. Murphy is no music student, but she knew what she liked, and she didn't like "Tannhaeuser."

New York Season Opens With "Flapper" Comedy

By HEYWOOD BROUN
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—

ONCE upon a time every New York theatrical manager included in each Autumn announcement the names of two or three light comedies from London and a farce or so from Paris. But theatrical boundaries are shifting. Broadway now turns to Hungary. No other European nation is so generously represented in the list of offerings for the new year.

Austria is also included, and between them these middle-European countries have pretty nearly cornered the market. London and Paris are nowhere. The reason is obvious. Molnar's "The Swan" and Ernest Cadja's "Fata Morgana" were among the most conspicuous successes of last season. More than this, the rate of exchange makes it possible for the American theatrical manager to secure foreign rights from Hungarian or Austrian authors for exceedingly small payments.

The Younger Generation.

ALTHOUGH I am interested in the development of American drama, I cannot rouse in myself any resentment against the flood of importations which are promised. They may be good or bad, but they will not be bad in the precise manner of many native plays. Seemingly neither Vienna nor Budapest is wracked by the problem of the younger generation.

The question of what must be done with the flapper inspired almost half the native comedies of last season, and there is every indication that she will engage an even greater amount of the attention of the playwright this year. Edgar Selwyn and Edmund Goulding have already started in with "Dancing Mothers."

Generally speaking, these flapper plays grow wearisome because in almost every case exactly the same cure is suggested to rid the younger generation of what ails it. The notion seems to be that all the boy or girl needs is a bad example from some elder person—preferably, by a parent.

Roistering and High Jinks.

IF RICHARD JR. drinks more than he should nothing is needed, but that Richard Sr. should come roaring and reeling about the house, and the lad will at once sense the evils of inebriety. Suppose Jennie dances more than is good for her—nothing is simpler than that her mother should put her to shame and rout by tangoing just a trifle more furiously.

Now I don't believe this will always work. Nor is the system safe. Do these playwrights mean to suggest that the younger generation can be reformed only at the price of corrupting an older one? If there must be roistering and high jinks I'm all for having them restricted to those who still have a chance to outgrow them. Or to be more truthful than that, I think the world will be rather badly off when all roistering and high jinks have been banished.

Plays Don't Reform Us.

STILL I doubt very much whether any of the impending dramas are likely to alter the world very much. I have no faith in the playhouse as a mender of manners. I rather imagine that the universal content of jealousy is ont one ounce less than on the night when "Othello" was first produced. Ambition remains even though millions have wept for the fate of Macbeth. Revenge did not end with Shylock. Lear was not the last old man to suffer from ingratitude.

Indeed, it is the flapper herself who leads the applause for the various plays in which the customs of the young are viewed with horror. She watches with alarm and interest the sad fate of the heroine who stays out late and flirts and drinks. And yet when the young miss comes out from any one of these highly moral plays and steps into her motor, it never pops into her mind to take the lesson to heart. You are not likely to hear her say, "Home James."

Helen Hayes in "Dancing Mothers"

AT the Booth Monday night, when "Dancing Mothers" had its first presentation, it looked for a couple of acts as if the expensive audience had donned the glitter of jewelry and starch and dashed out into the warm August evening on a false alarm.

The opening hour of agitation against the younger generation ran dangerously close to pattern. The daughter of the household drank cocktails, the father stayed in New York when he said he was going to Philadelphia, and the mother set out to cure them by emerging from retirement to take a fling on her own.

When the third act opened the daughter was discovered "passed-out" (we quote dialogue) on the gay bachelor's apartment sofa. Presently mother arrived. Matters took a decided twist for the better and the flutter of fans in the orchestra abruptly ceased. For the authors had temporarily abandoned wandering youth to demonstrate that 40 years are no invincible guarantee against the vigorous attractions that arise beyond the home.

Audience Is Good-Natured.

THERE was one ragged hole in that third act when the audience is requested to believe that a daughter will not know her mother's voice nor recognize her when her back is turned. If one can grant this without a struggle, the situation is sufficiently absorbing.

Helen Hayes has done younger generation heroines before. For those of her large following she was as engaging, as nervously attractive as is her custom. She was required to be mildly tight through two entire acts and met the emergency with a slightly dishevelled hardness that seemed accurately in character.

Mary Young played the highly important part of the mother with an uneven tendency that was only partially compensated by her occasional brilliance. Another night or two should see her quite take the honors of the venture. John Halliday was his normal attractive self and Elsie Lawson as the cheap lady had several excellent moments.

A good many better plays than "Dancing Mothers" and a good many worse will appear and disappear before another August comes. Yet such considerations did not primarily concern the opening audience, abundantly good natured despite the temperature. It was for them sufficient that another season had begun.

Tombes Makes Hit in "Marjorie."

AS an early autumn musical show, "Marjorie," which opened Monday night at the Shubert, plays true to form. It starts the season with a lively chorus, a decorative star in the person of Elizabeth Hines, and the usual collection of reminiscent melodies.

For several minutes after the rise of the first curtain it indicates every intention of turning into just another one of those love-and-lyric things. And then suddenly something happens. The introduction of a genuine personality is a real dramatic moment. It has the general effect of an earthquake, but it is only the entrance of Andrew Tombes.

This laconic individual has the manner of a professor of botany turned loose in a madhouse and trying to be a good sport and make his comrades feel at home. The combination of unbending dignity and an agile gift at song and dance is irresistible. He made even the oboe player laugh to the grave detriment of the higher notes in the song hit. The spotlight is on Miss Hines, who did very well with a conventional, magazine-cover role.

The chorus was pretty and spontaneous, and Richard Skeet Gallagher managed to bring actual intelligence to the thankless role of a leading juvenile. But the final bow belongs to Mr. Tombes who, with a toy typewriter, and a bald spot, gave a satirical slant to the entire production which convulsed the audience from his first entrance to the last.

It is a little early for prophesy, but we have no hesitation in predicting that this dry and slightly sardonic performance will stand as one of the high lights in the musical comedy year.

Ronald Colman, the English actor who was Lillian Gish's leading man in "The White Sister" and is now playing the male lead in Constance Talmadge's current production, is the latest suggestion for the principal role in Papini's "The Life of Christ," which is to be filmed by First National under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Film stars now under consideration for the part are: Milton Sills, James Kirkwood, Conway, Tearle, and Ronald Colman.

and silver creations of the Louis periods, down to the present day. This is the more unusual, because he cares little for tobacco, and smokes but seldom.

Zane Grey's "The Border Legion" has just gone into production on a location in the northern mountains selected by the author. In the cast are Antonio Moreno, Helene Chadwick, Charles Ogle, Rockliffe Fellows, James Corey, Edward Gribbon, Luke Gosgrave and Gibson Gowland.

Although Norman Trevor has played in many motion pictures, "Wages of Virtue," the picture in which he is now working with Gloria Swanson, marks his first appearance at the Paramount studio. One of his best-known screen roles was that of the young minister in "Romance," Edward Sheldon's play, which Doris Keane played on both the stage and screen and which she recently revived at a Los Angeles theater.

One of the largest yachts in the world will soon make its debut in movies. Quite the central figure of Cecil B. de Mille's newest Paramount picture, "Feet of Clay," is the 287-foot Casiana of E. L. Doheny, oil magnate. This palatial pleasure craft gained fame for its speed on a forced run to Mexico during the trouble in the oil fields there some years ago.

Thomas Meighan is back from the Pacific Coast, where he completed the filming of "The Alaskan," his latest Paramount picture. He went immediately to his new home in Great Neck, L. I., for a short rest before starting work at the Paramount Long Island studio in "Tongues of Flame," Peter Clark Macfarlane's last story.

Colleen Moore is preparing for her characterizations in "So Big," which will be her initial starring picture for First National. The picturization will follow the story closely running through the entire life of a woman from a very young girl to old age. Miss Moore will play four distinct periods in the life of every woman and every day sees her before the camera testing her different make-up for each role. The story is by Edna Ferber.

Godunoff within the portals of this same theater."

MISS FARRAR, who for 16 years shared honors with Caruso at the Metropolitan, announces that her production of "Carmen" will be a modernized version of the Bizet masterpiece, and that it may be described as "an operatic fantasy." The score, she states, "has been treated in a distinctly modern fashion, and has been completely severed from all operatic tradition."

Ned Weyburn, hitherto identified in Ziegfeld's "Follies," will stage the work, after designs drawn by Miss Farrar from paintings by Zuloaga. There will be a company of 10 principals, besides chorus and orchestra, and it is Miss Farrar's plan to tour the principal cities of the country.

about vamping a husband belongin gto somebody else.

Attended by a number of stage and screen stars from New York and the Metro-Goldwyn studios at Hollywood, Loew's State Theater, Washington and Eighth streets, will be formally opened next Thursday evening. For that one performance only all seats will be reserved. The opening date has been delayed to permit Marcus Loew an opportunity to attend. The stage and screen celebrities will remain in the city for several days, making personal appearances at the theater several times daily. Studio camera men will accompany them to film all activities during their stay here.

The picturization of Mabel Wagnall's "The Rosebush of a Thousand Years," retitled "Revelation" for the screen, has been chosen as the feature of the initial program. It is a Metro-Goldwyn production with a cast including Viola Dana, Lew Cody, Monte Blue, Marjorie Daw, Edward Connelly and Frank Currier. The theater has a seating capacity of approximately 3500.

August 16, 1924.

To the Public:

"Robin Hood" was the greatest picture of 1922. "The Covered Wagon" won the same coveted distinction in 1923. And now, in 1924, FRANK LLOYD'S production, "THE SEA HAWK," is sweeping over the country with every indication that it will be popularly declared the epic masterpiece of the year.

Such romance! Such action! A story conceived and written by the prince of novelists, Sabatini, who wrote "Scaramouche."

"THE SEA HAWK" is now running at $2.00 at the Astor Theatre, New York. Originally we announced that it would be shown here at advanced prices, but since that time we have succeeded in securing permission from First National to present it at REGULAR PRICES.

"THE SEA HAWK" opens Saturday at the Grand Central, Lyric Skydome, West End Lyric and Capitol Theatres. We offer it with the heartiest indorsement we have ever given a picture.

THRILL DRAMAS BARRED FROM MOST GERMAN SPAS

Heart and Nerve Patients Warned Not to See "Castle Wetterstein."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Melodramas and other plays or films designed to thrill or arouse the human emotion have been barred from most of the German spas and other health resorts owing to their bad effect on nervous folk and those suffering from heart disease.

A doctors' censoring board has been formed, which will make an effort to have theatrical managers and filmhouse proprietors present performances which will not cause excitement to ill persons attending them.

In Franzensbad recently Frank Wedekind's play, "Castle Wetterstein," was presented. The physicians of the cure resorts protested that it was too exciting and that it would likely prove harmful to those patients who went to see it. The management of the theater, however, refused to abide by the wishes of the doctors that the play not be given. Subsequently, the resort administration issued circulars cautioning heart and nerve patients against attending the performance and eventually the play was withdrawn.

Grand Canyon of Arizona

Two great plateaux of Northern Arizona slope toward each other to a common summit. Along this summit is not a mountain range, but three hundred miles of the deepest cavity in the earth's surface.

From the Bright Angel Hotel, one descends by trail seven miles to the swift Colorado River and a warmer climate. Here, at the bottom of the Granite Gorge, one is straight down below the earth's surface—ten long city blocks.

While one's eyes get dizzy watching the bubbles quickly disappear down stream, spring flood waters race by, sixty miles an hour, and boulders as large as coal trucks are tumbled over and over like a child rolls a nursery block.

Harry Prufrock

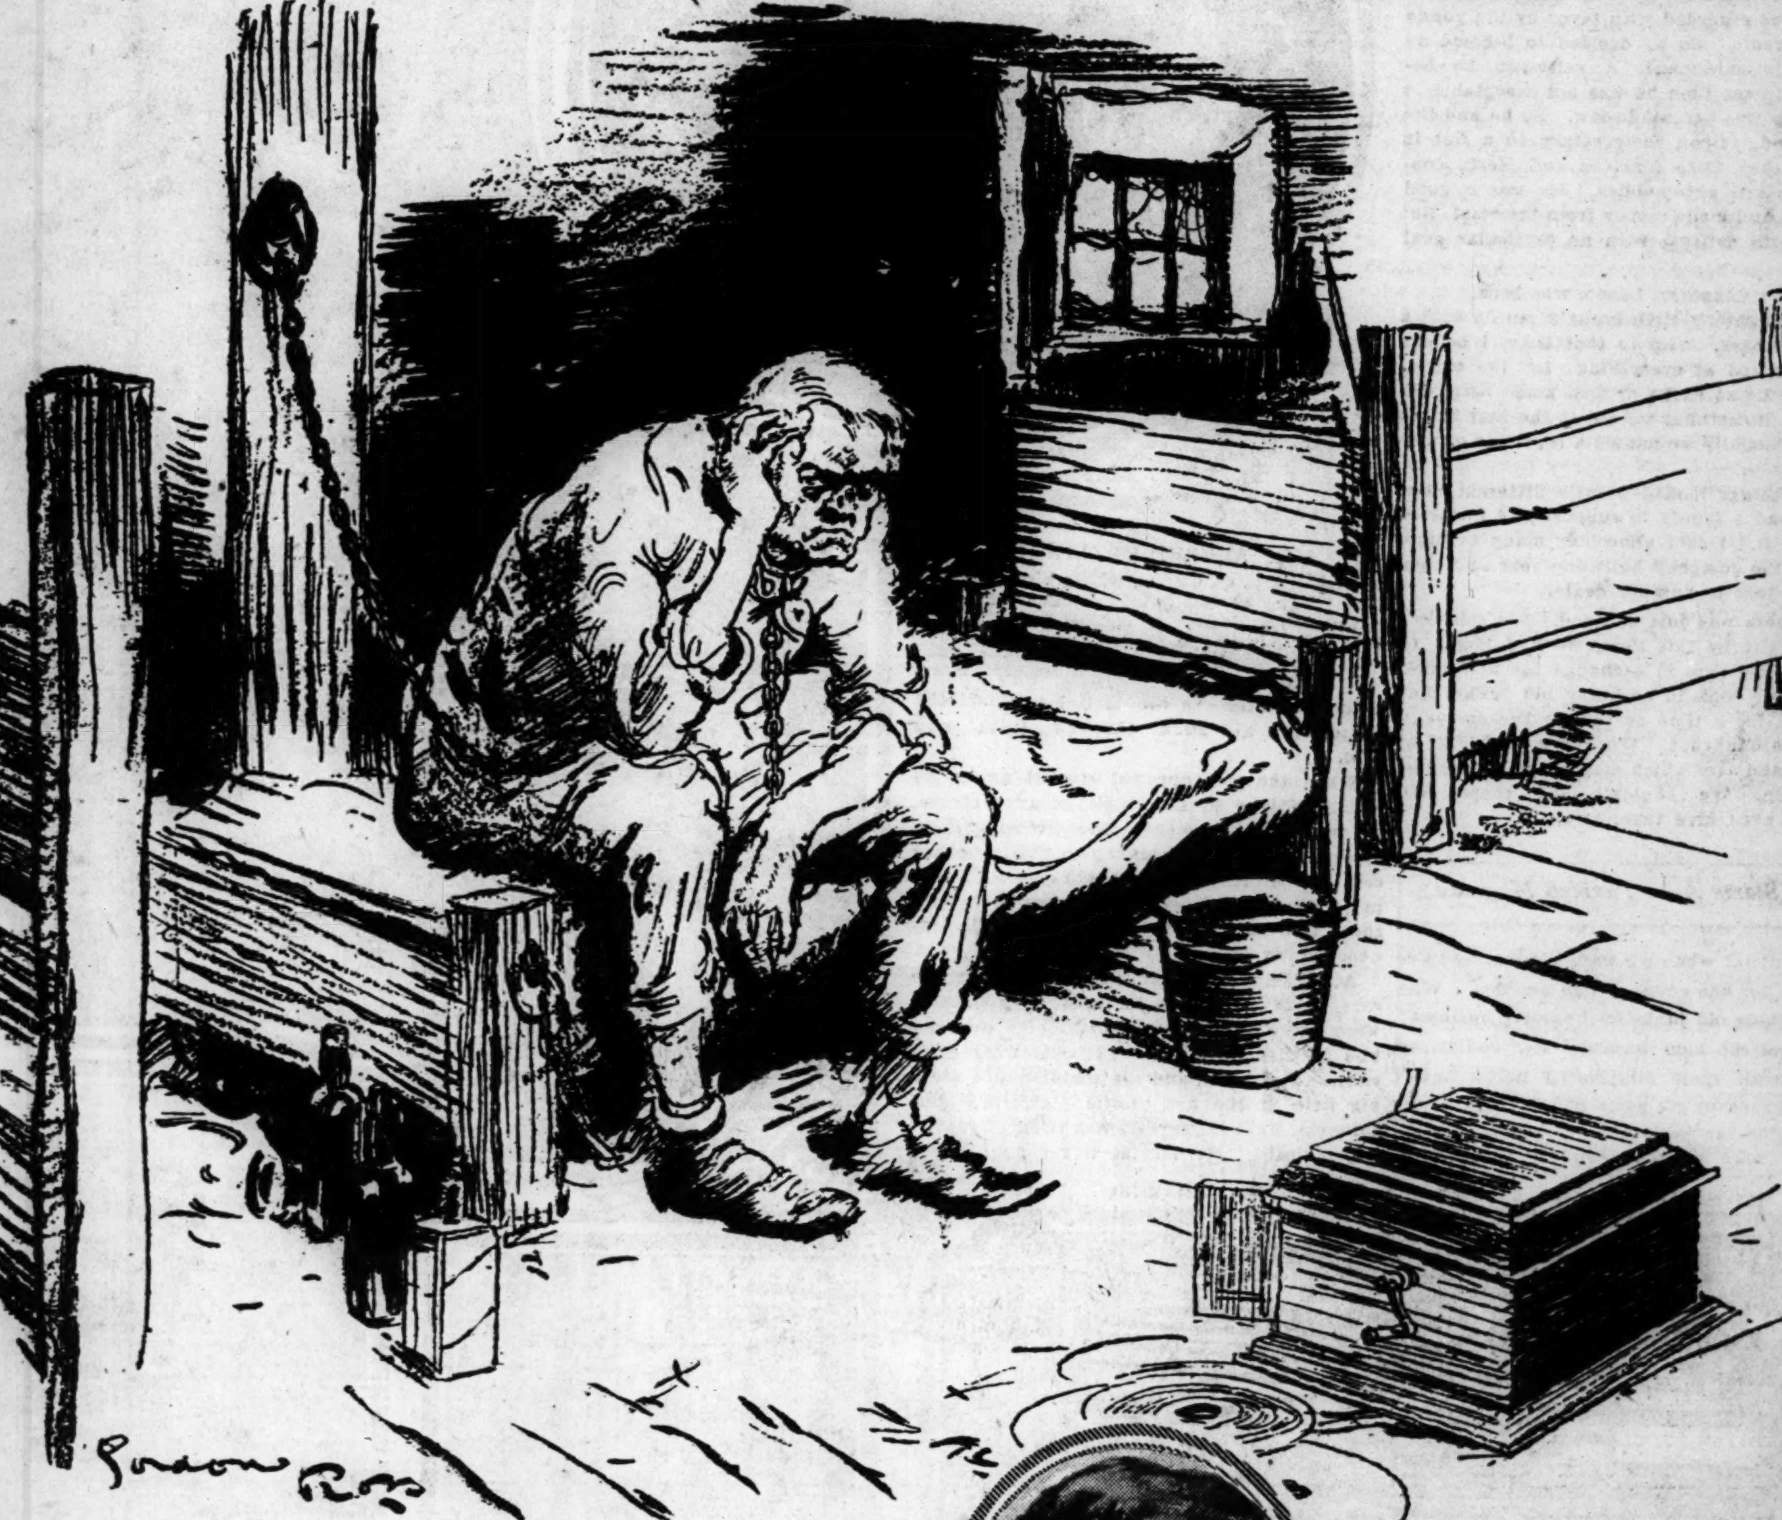
Sad Tale of M. Slater, New England Mill Owner, a Persistent, but Unlucky Lover

One Woman Put Him in a Madhouse; a Second Preferred an Englishman; a Third Staked Him in a Cow Shed

SAMUEL SLATER.
He's happy. At least part of his $3,000,000 left, and no woman bothering him just now, thank you. Of course, tomorrow is another day, and the maidens of France are lovely.



ANDRE BISCAYE,
The Swiss chauffeur, who disarmed M. Slater's big heart and repaid his master's kindness by staking him in a cowshed while he ran off with M. Slater's fiancee, Mlle. Anna Aimee Roosmale-Nepvue.

Yet M. Slater, at 63, Is Happy. The French Courts Have Just Denied His Second Wife's Claim for 150,000 Francs Alimony and Have Granted Him Absolute Divorce. All Day Long M. Slater Plays His Phonograph or Walks in His Garden. Is He Provoked With Love? Not M. Slater! He Is Resolute, Indomitable. Rumor Has It That He May Embark On Another Romance Most Any Day.

By Mail From a Special Correspondent.
GANNAT, France.

MONSIEUR SAMUEL SLATER, the rich American, is a most happy man. It is known in the village to be true, the happiness of M. Slater. He walks in his garden. He sighs. He has gay words with the postboy. All day long his phonograph plays, and he drinks wine. Monsieur, the Colonel, is very musical. Many times that weird American piece, "Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo' ", can be heard if one walks past the handsome villa where M. Slater has lived while the Court was considering his case.

But yesterday, M. Slater was advised that he need not pay to his wife, Madame Maude Spry Slater, the 150,000 francs a year alimony she demanded. Happy, happy, man! Madame also lost her suit for the 105,000 francs she claimed due her as support during the 13 years they had been separated. And to make matters better her husband was granted absolute divorce. Rightly so, one must believe, when he has heard the story of poor M. Slater.

Think not, however, that M. Slater pities himself. The years have made him a philosopher. Three times in the richness of his heart he loved a woman. A different woman each time. He was kind. He was generous. He was trustful. Well, they made him pay for his trustfulness and left him debtors for his kindness and his generosity. Heigh-o. M. Slater smokes his long-stemmed briar in the garden or listens to "Songs of The Past. Series 1 b to 13 c." on the phonograph in his study. That delightful room looking over the vineyards and the road to Moneins. Perhaps M. Slater finds himself the wiser for his experiences. Now Madame Maude Spry Slater for instance:

The Second One

She was his second wife. What ill solace she proved to his heart, wounded but not mutilated by his first matrimonial venture. He met her while on a steamship sailing for France to forget his first wife. The first Madame Slater had divorced him after placing him in an insane asylum by erroneous testimony. His good friends knew he was not insane. Alas, he was but in love with the woman who betrayed him. Too well he loved that first wife. And as it happened, too well the miserable man loved her successor. She gave his money to a handsome Englishman who promptly lost it at Monte Carlo, so he told the court.

Indeed all of M. Slater's troubles have been troubles of the heart. Ah, these Americans! They are so extreme in such affairs. M. Slater has had many sorrows, even after he was free of both wives. Many will recall the famous Biscaye case in 1917 which shocked France and gained the sympathy of all lovers for M. Slater. How the big-hearted American from across the ocean fell into the clutches of adventurers. One was his chauffeur, Andre Biscaye, a Swiss. The other was the charming Paris mannequin, Mlle. Anna Aimee Roosvale-Nepveu.

The Third Charmer

Although two domestic misfortunes had shattered the heart of M. Slater, romance was still in the world. He knew it at once when he laid eyes on Mlle. Anna. He was captivated. He repeated her full name rapturously. She laughed at his pronunciation, but she led him on. She called him "Oncle Samee" in a voice gurgly and sweet. And he with many white hairs to be so dishonored!

One gorgeous evening at his chateau near Saint Remyen-Rollat, M. Slater gave a dinner to his beautiful fiancee. The villain, Biscaye, who had wormed himself into a corner of that big heart, was the third guest. Monsieur's pulses were throbbing. Not a twinge of arterio sclerosis marred the gallantry of his presence. He was stately. He was superb. In old wine he toasted the lovely Mlle. Anna. He pronounced her full name, rolling the words like the connoisseur he was.

A sigh for M. Slater. He drank deep of the wine in his cup and deep of the lure in the violet eyes of Mlle. Anna. Then he knew no more. Blackness descended on him.

The next morning he awoke in a cow shed. Verily, a cow shed where kine of the field are stabled. The villainous Biscaye and the siren, Mlle. Anna had betrayed him. They had even done more than that. They had placed shackles and a chain about his ankles and had staked him in the cow shed. Staked in a cow shed—diable!—an ill-smelling stable, as if he were a bull or a billy goat.

But things immediately grew worse. This was not a practical joke conceived in that unfathomable Latin sense of humor M. Slater had often heartily cursed. Biscaye and Mlle. Anna came in and kicked his shins. Then they pulled his hair. Then they told him he must stay in the cowshed. And he did stay in the cowshed for seven months while they extorted money from him. Seven months! Consider the duration of time. Once when he refused to sign the check Biscaye put a dog collar around his neck and chained that to a post. Yet, this was not the final insult. They left cheap whisky and execrable wine for him to drink and as a final persecution, five phonograph records. Only five. The title of one was "You Made Me Love You," another told him, "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," another was "In the Gloaming, Oh My Darling, Think Not Bitterly of Me." Diabolical!

Imagine the plight of this unhappy gentleman, then. Could his countryman Monsieur Poe have conceived a more bizarre setting? Could that masterly compatriot of his, Monsieur Mark Twain have written a better plot?

Such a career is well worth reviewing, especially now that M. Slater is temporarily at peace while his heart recovers from its many bruises. His varied experiences must be portrayed in detail for appreciative understanding.

That First Romance

In Gannat it is known that the first romance of this great lover began some 20 years ago. He had at that time reached the dangerous period between thirty and forty when a man is not at his best. Having lived out the Romeo years with no disastrous results, the gentleman, alas, too often turns to that pattern of middle-aged chivalry, laid down by the great Balzac. So it was with Monsieur Henry Slater, of the Slater Mills, Webster, Mass., U. S. A.

Sauntering through his busy spinning mill one day M. Slater observed a beautiful young girl, toiling at whatever girls toil at in spinning mills. Her innocent beauty touched his heart. He felt at once fatherly and romantic. He would be her protector. He would lead her through the perils of youth. She would blossom before his eyes. She must call him Uncle Sammy and he came to hope that her voice would not be ardent merely through patriotism.

ANNA AIMEE ROOSMALE-NEPVEU
The charming, but the oh-so-false Paris mannequin, who captivated M. Slater and then helped Biscaye tie him up in the cowshed. She kicked M. Slater's shins. Both she and Biscaye are understood to be serving prison terms for their conspiracy.

He sent her to school as his ward. Imagine his surprise one day after her graduation when she said, "Uncle Samuel, these callow youths pall upon me. I am deeper than that. I desire the love of a middle-aged, mature gentleman. Someone like you."

Phonographs were just coming into practicability at that time. He owned one of the first Edisons. She had a fondness for "Daddy Wouldn't Buy Me a Bow-Wow, Bow-Wow." The third time he played it he said, "Dear little girl I'll buy you anything." They were married.

And inside of six months she had signed the committment papers sending him to an insane asylum. These dashing American girls! Now the affair would have been arranged much differently on the Continent—not so hastily—with less of the appearance of—the-well, the appearances.

Poor M. Slater. He was hurt. He would not have believed it of her. That little Barbara, the mill girl, would have proved so double. He raged. He tore his hair. He beat his fists on his head. And the keepers said, "The man is crazy!" Yes, but crazy with grief. Crazy from unrequited affections. Those American insane asylum attendants have no souls, no feeling for love.

There was nothing for the frantic lover to do but to escape. M. Slater escaped.

Call to mind the picture of this disappointed man, standing on the deck of the steamer which carried him from his wife, his country and the hideous madhouse! On that very deck, while he was musing the evanescence of love, he met Miss Maude Spry. Her name should have warned him, you say? But, ah, when was a lover daunted by names? Love had come again as easily as the seagulls flew.

He told her of the tragedy in his life. Of the little mill girl who had proved false. He said he was an exile. And she sympathized. She understood. Her hand crept over the side of his steamer chair to pat his hand.

"I would give anything I possess to comfort a man such as you," she said with a whimsical sigh as if to indicate, "But of course I'm not worthy."

Caught Again

Before they were three days out he was convinced—hapless man—that she was worthy. They were to be married in London. She suggested Monte Carlo. He had never been to Monte Carlo, having been engaged all his manhood days in the Slater mills at Webster, Mass. Innocent, scarce knowing what he promised, he declared, "To Monte Carlo then, dear. Anything your little heart desires." By cable they learned that his first wife had filed suit for divorce. They agreed that it was most thoughtful of her.

Madame Maude Spry Slater lost heavily in the Casino. She did not go banco once. Not once. The handsome Englishman at her elbow prevented that. "The English, pah! Such gamblers!" said those who looked on.

His second disillusionment impended for M. Slàter. The gossip reached his ears and when he looked at his bank balances he was forced to believe.

Oh, the perfidy of womankind. Poor M. Slater was beside himself with grief. He had trusted her so, with 50,000 francs he had trusted her. And she had played him false, as false as she had the roulette tables. Savagely denouncing her and love, he left Monte Carlo never to return. Nor would he return to Madame Slater. But he was not ready to say he would never return to love. His steadfastness to love prepared an honored place for him in Paris whence he repaired.

The Second Divorce Suit

There his second wife filed suit for divorce and there he filed a counter suit. That was 13 years ago. The case dragged through the courts until the decision just now made public.

Meanwhile M. Slater established himself at 70 Avenue d'Iena almost opposite the famous James Gordon Bennett house and directly across from the mansion of M. Bunau-Varilla. It was in this magnificent home that the unhappy man tried to console himself with his phonographs. "Casey Jones" and "Alexander's Rag Time Band" were flourishing, but M. Slater did not confine himself to American folksongs. He bought records and bought records until it was said, "That gray-haired barbarian in Avenue d'Iena has the best record collection in Europe." How unfair they were to pitiable M. Slater! [illegible] unkind! He was not a barbarian, time [illegible] given the lie to that. He was a lover. Through it all, that must be remembered of him. Resolutely, indomitably, he was a lover.

In Paris he fell in with the personable Andre Biscaye, and liking the man for qualities his generous nature believed him to possess, M. Slater took him to his heart. First Biscaye was chauffeur, then valet and finally confidential man to his master.

M. Slater's third great passion was at hand. He strode gaily forth to meet it, this love which was, next to his phonographs, the greatest element in his life. Indeed it will always be a moot question in France which force was the greater, phonograph music or love, in the career of M. Slater. It must be remembered, however, that his phonographs were with him always: his wives and his sweetheart were not.

Entering a jewelry shop on the Rue de la Paix one day, M. Slater selected a lavalliere.

"How much?" he queried.

"Twenty thousand francs," said the jeweler.

"I'd take it," murmured M. Slater with admirable logic, "if a pretty girl had been here to show it to me."

"Ah," exclaimed the jeweler, an artist in his way, "she shall be here tomorrow."

Thus did Anna Aimee Roosmale-Nepveu enter the life of M. Slater. They met over a 20,000 franc lavalliere, and looking into his

THE MAN WHO MADE MILLIONS BY PAINTING CABS YELLOW AND SELLING BUS RIDES FOR A DIME

John Hertz Began in Chicago as an Immigrant Newsboy; at 45 He Heads $100,000,000 Corporations

True Life Story of a Career Which Started When Hertz, Looking at His Baby Daughter, Said to Himself, "You've Got to Stop Drifting Along and Make Something of Yourself." So He Quit Selling Automobiles and Founded The Yellow Cab Company on the Idea of Low Cash Fares. Later He Took Up Motorbus Transportation and Controls Companies in New York, Chicago and St. Louis.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.

JOHN HERTZ was one of the first men to guess what a place taxicabs would take in American life. He staked his career on their indispensability. Today, his belief has been so well justified that the advertising department of the Yellow Cab Co., if it has not already gotten around to it, might start an educational series. The series would show how Americans flirt in taxicabs, fall in love in taxicabs, use them on honeymoons; carry through business deals in taxicabs, send wives to shop and children to school in them, and occasionally die in taxicabs.

However, the stroke of genius which made John Hertz the taxicab king was his early use of business psychology. Reading a treatise on colors one day he learned that a certain shade of orange yellow most strikingly impresses the eye. Very well, he would paint his cabs yellow. Men laughed at him, saying "People don't want to ride in circus wagons," but they knew nothing of business psychology. People did want to ride in yellow taxicabs. They were irresistible. Standing in a line of drabber vehicles in front of station or hotel they stood out like the proverbial sore thumb.

With the Yellow Cab Co. dominating the business in many cities, John Hertz did not stop thinking. It occurred to him while on a visit to London that the motor bus would go well in the United States. Especially in Chicago where surface cars and the elevated were serving none too adequately. Once more Hertz had resort to psychology. Wouldn't the poor straphanger run for a fast-moving auto bus on which he was guaranteed a seat? Wouldn't transients who wished to see the sights without a large taxicab bill gladly surrender their dimes for a place on the upper deck of a bus? What of the thousands who could not afford automobiles nor taxicabs and wished to ride for pleasure?

The Motorbus Idea

There was a bus company in Chicago, and it had not been patronized extensively. But Hertz and a friend, Charles McCullough, had faith in the idea. They purchased the equipment and franchise and began building new busses. Presently the public was being told "Ride in the Open Air"—"A Seat for Every Passenger"—"See Chicago From the Deck of a Bus"—"Ride in Safety and Comfort." Trying the new busses, the public was won.

Today, John Hertz at 45 heads the Yellow Cab Co., operating and manufacturing taxicabs not only for its own service but for other companies; the Chicago Motorbus Co. and the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. of New York. He also owns one-third interest in the People's Motorbus Co. of St. Louis and controls its operation. The combined value of the enterprises managed by Hertz is estimated at $100,000,000.

Of course bright ideas alone did not make Hertz nor his enterprises. He was helped primarily by the fact that he cast his lot with the automobile industry when it was young. Getting in on the ground floor he worked hard and long. Such elements as business integrity and business sense, service to the public at moderate rates and the knack of surrounding himself with capable subordinates counted largely. Even then, an element of the miraculous is left:

He started as a ragged newsboy, an immigrant, an uneducated Austrian lad. Now he has several millions.

His Start in Chicago

Brought to America by his parents when he was 4 years old little Johnny Hertz found himself with all the other Hertzes established in a house in West Chicago. He went to school with his brothers until he was 12 and then he was put to work. He used to get up at 3 in the morning to trudge to the old Tribune office for papers. If he got there too early he slept in the doorways until the city editions were off the press.

He seemed to have been cast for a newspaper man. After several years as a newsboy he became an office boy in the Tribune's editorial rooms and from this graduated to the sports department. It took just a few years as a reporter, as it usually does, to convince him that if he ever hoped to be wealthy he must quit newspaper work. The quickest money from his viewpoint then appeared to lie in prize fighting. Hence he became "John Hertz, manager of the coming champion, Benny Yanger."

Benny never quite arrived as a champion but through Hertz's talent for publicity he was able to make a good deal of money and his manager profited correspondingly. Things were drifting along and Hertz was drifting with them when one day he fell in love.

His romance put an end to the prize fight managing. He must get into something more likely to be regarded with favor by the young lady's parents. So he decided to become an automobile salesman. A salesman he became, but even then he was not acceptable to his prospective parents-in-law. So he and the girl eloped. Upon their return to a flat in Chicago they were forgiven and Hertz continued to sell automobiles. He was a good salesman and made money from the start. But he was still drifting with no particular goal in mind.

Then his daughter, Leona, was born.

"My daughter's birth brought me up with a jerk," he says. "Up to that time, I believe I had worked at everything in the world. Whether I was broke or rich made little difference. Sometimes we ate at the best hotels and occasionally we missed a luncheon or dinner.

"But things looked a little different now. Here I had a family to support and I started in to do it. I sold almost as many automobiles as the company built one year and then changed jobs to another dealer.

"Business was just as good. We sold lots of cars, but by this time, we had begun to take in used cars in exchange for new ones. In fact, we took in so many old junks that it looked for a time as though the company would go bankrupt. We had a store full of second-hand cars which maybe and maybe not would run. We couldn't sell them. We couldn't even give them away.

He Starts As a Taxicab Magnate

"Just about when we were getting ready to go down for the count, I had an idea. Why not use these old junks in the livery business? The horse cab men were making oodles of money with their dilapidated hacks and I saw a chance to get some of that easy profit with motor car hackes."

There were no taximeters in those days.

Eight new busses of the People's Motor Bus Company of St. Louis, which is in part owned and wholly controlled by Hertz.

Automobiles were hired by the hour and just as fast as it was possible to fix up the old cars so they would run, they were placed in service and drivers hired for them. The idea went well and within two years, with the advent of the taximeter in Chicago, a regular taxicab company was organized. Hertz and his partner bought limousines and for the first time standardized a service.

It looked like a gold mine for a time when suddenly, out of the clear sky, all the drivers went on strike. For weeks not a wheel turned. The company's expensive cars were standing backed up against the garage wall with no chance of earning a nickel. They hadn't been completely paid for, either. The rent and overhead and the payroll were going on just the same.

"I slept in the office for weeks," Hertz describes. "All the rest of our loyal employes did, too, and if the strike had lasted a week longer, we all probably would be sleeping in the poorhouse by now.

"Fortunately, it ended one day and then began a struggle to get back. We had borrowed all the money we were entitled to from the banks and they wouldn't lend us another cent. Finally, we found one banker a little easier than the rest, and got enough for a new start."

The Strike and Its Lesson

That strike was the beginning of John Hertz's success. It taught him one lesson—that partners take a greater interest in the company than employes do; that a man with a financial stake in the capital assets of the corporation will stick through thick and thin.

MRS. ALFRED ETTLINGER,

Hertz's daughter, Leona, whose birth brought him to the realization that he must settle down and make money and who was his inspiration during the years of struggle.

When the company got started again, he began to take in his employes as partners. He was earning money and he sold them stock on the installment plan. Ninety per cent of the men who were working with him in those days became active partners and those who have stuck to him now all are independently rich.

At this time, the manufacturers of pleasure cars, from whom the taxicabs were bought, were not building so substantial an automobile as they do today. Taxicabs were daily subject for repair and the maintenance ate a big hole in the net profits. Hertz's shop foreman, Paul H. Geyser, was tired of repairing taxicabs. He was at it for 20 hours a day and in his periods of rest (which came from midnight until 4 a. m.) he conceived an idea that he could build a better automobile for less money; an automobile that wouldn't have to go into the shop every time it went around the block. He talked about it and drew plans, designed axles and differentials and transmissions for the gruelling wear of taxicab service until finally he talked Hertz into standing the cost of an experimental job.

He Builds His Own Cabs

The experiment was a success. It did run and it stood up a whole lot better than any other automobile had up to that time. The result was that the company, then the Walden W. Shaw Livery Co., began to build its own taxicabs. The factory was in a little second floor shop in the first garage and only two could be worked on at a time. But as the idea grew a special building was added in another part of the town and regular taxicab building began. At first, cabs were built only for the Shaw company, but their reputation spread and soon there were demands for cabs from out of town operators. A few were built and the factory started to make a little money.

Meantime, Hertz took his first vacation. He went to Europe and was amazed to see the thousands of taxicabs in London and in Paris. What amazed him most was that you could get one anywhere without having to telephone and wait for it and that the fares were half as much as they were in Chicago, which had been boasting of the best taxicab service in America.

The master traffic tower on Michigan boulevard, Chicago, known as the "world's busiest traffic artery." Hertz installed automatic traffic regulators in Chicago at his own expense. He was later reimbursed by the city.

The idea of a low priced taxicab service was born right there. The Shaw Co. had charge accounts, the bookkeeping on which ran into money. Hertz knew that if he wanted to cut taxicab fares, he would have to cut out charge accounts.

All the way back on the boat, he turned the idea over in his mind and happened to pick up a copy of a scientific journal in the smoking room of the steamship. In it was an article by a noted scientist detailing color tests which had proved that a certain shade of orange yellow was the most clearly defined in the eyes, could be seen farthest and left the most lasting impression.

They Laughed at Him

When he got home, the idea for Yellow Cabs was full grown. A smaller cab, painted yellow, run for cash only. So he broached it to his partner and the board of directors of the company. They hooted him down. "Nobody would ride in a circus wagon," they cried. "And nobody will pay cash. Only sports and the rich ride in taxicabs and they don't care how much they pay."

But Hertz thought differently. He was convinced that he could cut taxicab fares in half, still make money and get the whole town riding. Inasmuch as he had made all the money anybody ever had made in the taxicab business and because he was so insistent, they finally, decided to humor him a little and let him start on a small scale.

JOHN HERTZ,

Six months later, on Aug. 2, 1915, the first Yellows appeared on the streets. Chicago was amazed. It looked for a time as though the directors were right and Hertz wrong. Riders shied away from them. They were too prominent. But like every other innovation, they became commonplace in a few days. People who used cabs found that they could ride cheaper for cash and they started doing it. One customer attracted another and the little fleet started to grow.

The parent company by this time had [illegible] luxurious and high price taxicabs. The Yellow company had 30 and it suddenly became apparent that the Yellows had the call. Everybody started to ride. It had ceased to be a millionaire's equipage and the taxicab came into its own. That was only nine years ago. The demand, fostered by newspaper advertising, grew so tremendously that a new factory had to be built to produce enough cabs.

The two companies began to grow together and today each of them is worth considerably more than $25,000,000, figured in stock market values. To be exact, on the day this is written, the combined value runs around [illegible]000,000.

Success naturally attracted more [illegible]. Operating 2700 taxicabs at a good profit was only a step towards his vision of a great motorized transportation system. Two years ago, together with Charles A. McCulloch, who sold newspapers with him in the old days, he bought the dying Chicago Motorbus Co. and rehabilitated it. It had 54 broken down busses of an archaic type when they took it over. Today it has 400 of the latest type motor coaches, which are built in the Yellow Cab Manufacturing Co.'s plant. Then he and his colleagues bought a third interest and the operating control of the People's Motorbus Co. in St. Louis and this company is expanding. Subsequently, the Chicago Co. bought the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. in New York and have formed the Omnibus Co. of America, which eventually will have a part in the operation of motor coaches all over the world."

"We want to see motor coaches operating in every city in America," said Hertz in a recent address. "They are more economical than street cars and undoubtedly will supplant traction trasportation in many places. We do not intend to fight the traction men, but rather work with them. And we are willing to put our own money against theirs in the operation of motorbusses as extensions and supplements to their own service."

eyes and then at the lavalliere, Mlle. Anna declared herself to have been enraptured.

Mark the nobility with which M. Slater pursued all his amours.

"I shall make you my wife," he announced.

It was Biscaye who counselled delay. He suggested to M. Slater that it might be well if the pretty mademoiselle came to the Slater menage as housekeeper. Then, in a few months—did Monsieur understand? Wily Andre Biscaye. Intriguing Anna Aimee Roosmale-Nepvue. They already were plotting the undoing of big-hearted M. Slater.

The scheme progressed swiftly. Biscaye, in 1917, proposed a motor trip through the south of France. With Monsieur and Mlle. Anna all snug in the tonneau. Eh? and he winked.

So they toured Southern France, the Midi, the Riviera and finally arrived at Clermont-Gerrand, in the heart of the mountainous Auvergne region. Stopping at the little mountain village of Saint Remy-en-Rollat, the scenery seemed to enthrall charming Mlle. Anna. Her perfect figure seemed poised for a flight to wooded crests. She gurgled and moued and rolled her violet eyes. Enchantment! Surely noble M. Slater would rent a chateau at this lovely place for a little while?

Biscaye, making inquiries, found that the chateau called des Bouchots could be hired for a year for 14,000 francs. M. Slater, generous soul, agreed and the three were established in the old chateau.

That night M. Slater gave his ill-fated dinner to the woman of his heart in the heavy raftered dining room of the chateau. Little did he dream that the ingenious Mlle. Anna and the dashing Swiss had fallen in love with each other and were at the moment preparing for their dastardly act. To think that they could seize a nice old fellow like M. Slater and tie him in a cowshed.

For seven months they kept M. Slater like a felon in chains. They hired a [illegible] Barreau to guard their prisoner, telling [illegible] that M. Slater was insane. With five phonograph records and bad liquors they kept [illegible] these fiends, who knew not the [illegible] love. He was obliged to sign a check for 10,000 francs on Morgan, Harjes & Co. of Paris. With his third disappointment [illegible] his gray head, he pleaded with Mlle. Anna to release him. But she kicked his shins.

But the plotters outdid themselves. They had the effrontery to take M. Slater's [illegible]

THE MARVELOUS STORY OF JOSEPH CONRAD, SEAMAN, WHO WROTE WHAT HE HAD LIVED

A Polish Lad of 15 When He Put to Sea, He Became a Master of Ships and Over-Lord of English

Against the Wishes of His Family He Answered the Call of Romance and Open Water. After 20 Years He Quit the Sea and, Though His English Was Self-Taught, He Was at Once Successful. His Fame as a Man of Letters Will Hold His Name High Among the Great Writers of All Time.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

SOMETHING occult and phantasmal, something of that wild but logical romance which often envelopes his tales with an air of hallucination, presided over the life as well as the art of Joseph Conrad. Destiny spared the author personal violence and tragedy; yet himself regarded the two crises of his career with an abiding sense of inexplicable mystery. They were actuated, he felt, by powers as blind and as irrational as the fates of his own Lord Jim or Tuan Tom Lingard.

To that inscrutable instinct which, at the age of 15, sent the Polish lad to the sea which he had never beheld; which plucked him up, the son of generations of country squires and soldiers, from an inland region without direct or even indirect marine traditions—to this cryptic impulse he customarily referred in terms of theology. It was a "vocation," a "call."

And then, behold him, one morning 17 years later, pacing the front sitting room of furnished apartments in a decayed part of Belgravia, London. In the interval he had risen from apprentice to mate, and from mate to master, in the British Merchant Marine. He had never written a line for print; had never written anything, in fact, except entries in the log books of ships and a few letters. Never in his life had he made note of a fact, an impression or an anecdote. He gives his word that he had no vision of a printed book, or an author's fame.

His proceedings on that fateful day, he confesses, had a touch of insanity—like the French gunboat which he saw, off the coast of Africa, solemnly shelling a continent. "Never," he records, "had Rubicon been more blindly forded." As if acting under unconscious compulsion, he took pen, ink and paper and wrote two words. "It was infinitely more likely," comments he, "that the sanest of my friends should nurse the germ of incipient madness than that I should turn into a writer of tales." The two words formed the first line of "Almayer's Folly," and launched the ship captain—who did not know six words of the English language when he first went to sea—upon a career which culminated in his recognition, long before his death on Aug. 3, as one of the lords of English prose.

Joseph Conrad Korzeniowski was born Dec. 6, 1857, in the Government of Kiev, Russian Poland. Of his childhood glimpses are given in the delectable but fragmentary autobiography, "A Personal Record." From the age of 5 he was a great reader, as he says was perhaps not wonderful "in a child who was never aware of learning to read." When the boy was 4 years old his father was exiled to Russia for his part in the Polish uprising of 1863, and was accompanied by his wife and son. A governess of this time is recalled, who, in three months, simply by playing with us, taught me not only to speak French, but to read it as well."

His recollections of his mother, who died early, are those of "a beautiful woman, exceptionally distinguished in person, manner and intellect." He recalls a certain granduncle, Nicholas, "who remains for me the unfortunate and miserable (but heroic) being who once upon a time had eaten a dog." It was during Napoleon's retreat from Moscow. Conrad's childish horror of the deed no doubt found expression in his tale of the cannibalism of Christian Falk.

The boy was 8 years old when he made his first acquaintance with English letters, through a page, which he was asked to read aloud, of his father's translation of "Two Gentlemen of Verona" into Polish. Five years later he read his first English book, "Nicholas Nickelby," in a Polish translation. "It was extraordinary," he relates, "how well Mrs. Nickelby could chatter disconnectedly in Polish, and the sinister Ralph rave in that language." Through translations, he made the acquaintance not only of Dickens, but of Thackeray and Walter Scott. It appears to have been a novel by Anthony Trollope, one of the first of the English fiction writers undertaken by Conrad in their original tongue, which he was reading on the night before he began "Almayer's Folly."

At 10 years of age, he relates, he had read Victor Hugo in the original language, much poetry in both French and Polish, and a quantity of books of travel and adventure. These, together with a geography, probably dictated his career on the sea. He remembers, when 9 years old, putting his finger on a blank space representing the then unsolved mystery of the continent of Africa, and announcing: "When I grow up I shall go there." As a matter of fact he did go there and to many other places, but not to the North Pole, another blank space on the map which fascinated the urchin. The narrative skips to the author's fifteenth year, when he first disclosed to his relatives his ambition to go to sea. "The scandalized astonishment could not have been greater," he declares, "if I had announced my intention of entering a Carthusian monastery." The memory of that conflict haunted him for years—as a grizzled man he sometimes caught himself propounding arguments with which the boy might have defended him-

"There was no precedent," he explains. "I verily believe mine was the only case of a boy of my nationality and antecedents taking a, so to speak, standing jump out of his racial surroundings and associations. We were remote from the sea, not only by situation but also from a complete absence of indirect association, not being a commercial nation at all, but purely agricultural."

There were reproaches and debates, and, on the youth's part, many secret tears. The mildest view taken of his chimera was that he was partly demented. He did not dare tell his family that he had resolved to be not only a seaman, but a British seaman. They would have believed his insanity complete. As a last resort, in the summer of 1873, he was sent on a walking tour in Switzerland, with a tutor, a student at the University of Kiev, who had received a confidential mission to talk him out of his folly. The tutor argued day and night, in railway trains, on lake steamboats, even while they were viewing the sunrise from the summit of the Righi.

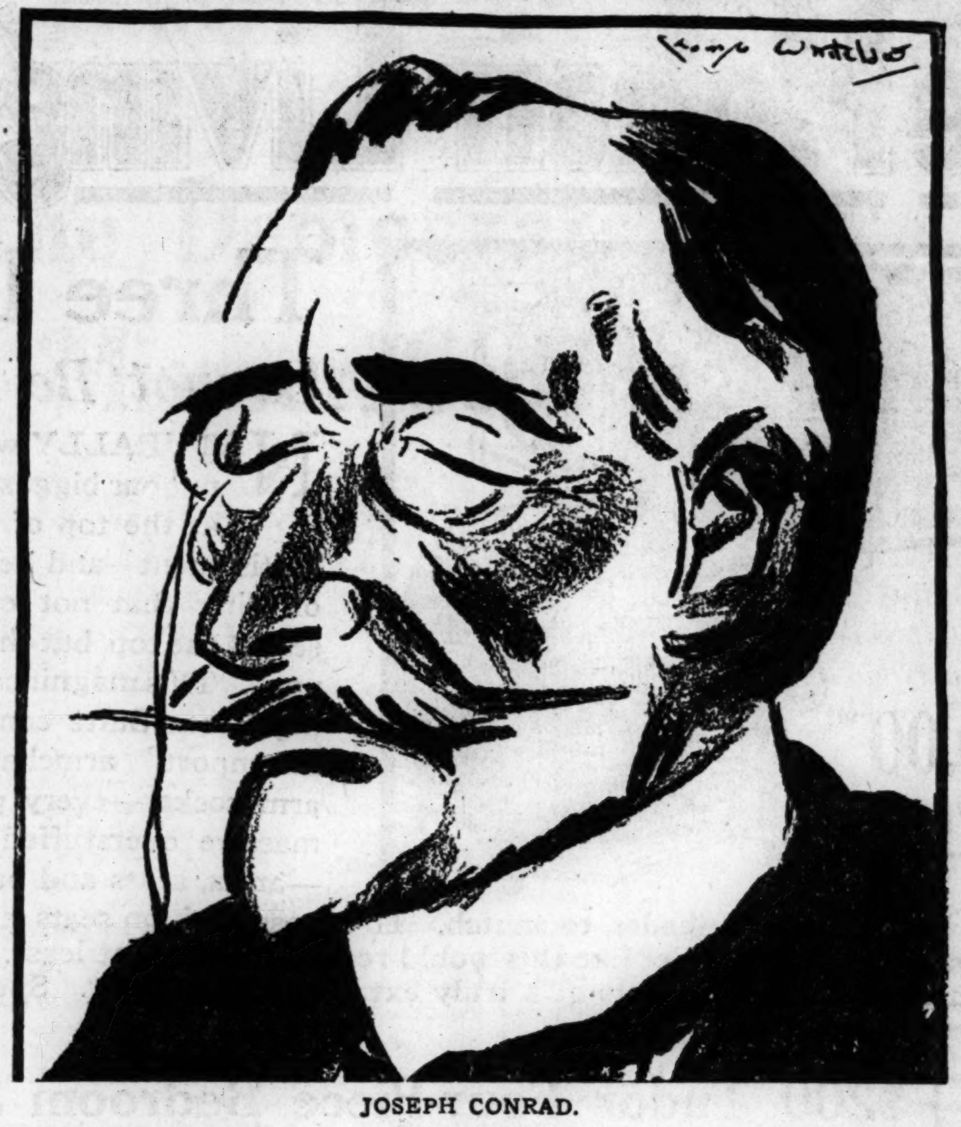
Conrad confesses that he was at the point of surrendering, one morning as they were tramping over the Furca Pass towards the Rhone Glacier. At this moment, "like an ambassador of my future," there passed "an unforgettable Englishman," in knickerbockers, with naked calves shining like ivory, a clean-cut, very red face, silver-white whiskers, and "a striving-forward appearance of inextinguishable and comic ardor." The apparition turned the scales. One glance into his companion's eyes, and the tutor arose, acknowledging defeat. He merely said: "You are an incorrigible, hopeless Don Quixote." Eleven years later, month for month, Conrad stood on Tower Hill, on the steps of St. Katherine's Dockhouse, a master in the British Merchant service.

The Russian and German navies, for national reasons, were out of the question; to almost an equal degree was the Austrian service. Conrad was astute enough to make no objections when his family at last decided to take steps to place him in the French merchant marine. The principal thing was to get away; and besides, he did not wish to present himself "totally green" in the British service. A friend at Marseilles undertook to put "le jeune homme" in the way of getting a decent ship for his first start if he really wanted a taste of "ce metier de chien."

While waiting for his ship and lounging about the Marseilles wharves, Conrad one day sailed forth in a pilot boat. Auspiciously before him lay the island of Monte Cristo and the Chateau d'If. For the first time he held a tiller in his hand, though his first sight of the sea had come a few months earlier, with his tutor, at Venice. In the company was an aged marine who remembered, as a boy, having beheld Napoleon on his return from Elba. "The Emperor," he said, "was a little fat fellow, with a big, pale face inclined on one shoulder, looking something like a priest. His hands were clasped behind his back."

There appeared on the horizon a black speck, which grew into a big cargo steamer. The pilot boat rushed forth to intercept its prey, and on that day Conrad for the first time laid hand on the side of a British ship. For the first time in his life, also, he was addressed in English—"the speech of my secret choice, of my future, of long friendships, of the deepest affections, of hours of toil, of thoughts pursued, of remembered emotions—of my very dreams." A huge, fat deckhand, with a hairy double chin, threw down a rope and directed Conrad's attention to it with three words, huskily growled: "Look out, there!"

As the dinghy followed the steamer, she hoisted the British merchant flag, according to harbor regulations. "The Red Ensign!" exclaims Conrad. "In the pellucid, colorless atmosphere bathing the drab and gray masses of that southern land, the livid islets, the sea of pale, glassy blue under the pale, glassy blue of that cold sunrise, it was, as far as the eye could reach, the only spot of ardent color—flamelike, intense and presently as minute as the tiny red spark the concentrated reflection of a great fire kindles in the clear heart of a globe of crystal. The Red Ensign—the symbolic, protecting, warm bit of bunting flung wide upon the seas, and destined for so many years to be the only roof over my head."



JOSEPH CONRAD.

However, Conrad spent two years under the French flag, cruising about the Mediterranean and to the West Indies, before he realized his ambition of enlisting under the Red Ensign. His autobiography is almost silent concerning the period of his apprenticeship. There is a hint in the sentence: "I have carried bags of wheat on my back, bent almost double under a ship's deck beams, from 6 in the morning until 6 in the evening." His sea experiences and observations are written large, however, in his novels.

He must have been a navigator of a unique sort. To the outward eye, no doubt, a quiet and reserved officer, totally absorbed in his practical duties. But within, as yet lacking purpose so far as he could see, what teeming intellectual ferment! What an infinity of sensations and observations, of sea, sky and landscape, noted down in minutest detail, and stored away in that fathomless memory! What a gallery of human portraits, analyzed to the final degree, and waiting to be brought forth only until he took pen in hand!

Some wealthy, pompous and imbecile British yacht owner caught for a moment that studious and accurate eye, to emerge years later as Mr. Travers of "The Rescue." A youth glimpsed somewhere in the East, powerfully built, with a fixed stare and stooping shoulders, like a charging bull, grew into the hero of "Lord Jim." A negro sailor from the West Indies, dying on a homeward voyage, became "The Nigger of the Narcissus." And there were women—Edith Travers, Dona Rita, possessing sex at the supremest vibration of intensity, dowered with enchantment as a poet is with genius; or those other women, Almayer's half-caste daughter, or Alma in "Victory," who plunge headlong into love like Curtius into his gulf.

But most pressingly of all, at first, came the remembered figure of Almayer, as seen by Conrad in the life on an island in the Malay Archipelago. He came to live in those Belgravia apartments, with a vividness and poignancy foreign to their real intercourse; and soon his wife and daughter joined him. "Then," the author writes, "the rest of the Pantai band came, full of words and gestures. Unknown to my respectable landlady, it was my practice, directly after my breakfast, to hold animated receptions of Malays, Arabs and half-castes. They did not clamor aloud for my attention. They came with a silent and irresistible appeal."

And so, one morning, like one in a trance, Conrad wrote his first page of fiction. "Almayer's Folly" proved the shortest of his many novels, but five years intervened between the opening sentence and the last. The manuscript of seven chapters went with Conrad up the Congo and narrowly escaped drowning with him in the rapids. The eighth chapter was terminated at Geneva, where he was recovering from tropical fever. The ninth was penned while he was managing a waterside warehouse in London.

The unfinished novel went with him to Berlin, and was almost lost in a bag abandoned between trains at the Friedrichstrasse station; it traveled with him by railway and sledge to the Ukraine; then, like a cask of choice Madeira, it got carried three years to and fro upon the seas, including a voyage to Australia and return.

It was on this trip that Conrad encountered his first reader—a sallow young Cambridge University man, who courteously took his thoughts from his own approaching death to peruse the nine chapters of manuscript, which had acquired a faded look and an ancient, yellowish complexion. His comments were brief. Conrad asked if the book were worth finishing. "Distinctly," he replied. "Were you interested?" "Very much." "Is the story quite clear to you as it stands?" "Yes, perfectly." Save for these laconic but encouraging responses, says Conrad, the novel might never have been finished. The first of the millions of Conrad's readers died before "Almayer's Folly" was completed.

The tenth chapter was begun aboard a 2000-ton steamer, frozen up in winter alongside a quay in Rouen, and the author, in the uniform of a second mate, used to quit his pages to show visitors over the ship, like a Cook's tourists' interpreter. This employment marked also his last connection with the sea, for at the call of his new vocation of letters he decided to retire. The book was completed in 1894, when Conrad was in his thirty-seventh year. Published in an obscure magazine, it attracted little attention. Renown came with "The Nigger of the Narcissus," which W. E. Henley serialized in the New Review.

After "Almayer's Folly" ensued, at intervals of a year or so, a list of novels whose very names are like beads on the rosary of romance: "The Outcast of the Islands," "The Nigger of the Narcissus," "Tales of Unrest," "Lord Jim," "The Inheritors," "Youth," "Typhoon," "Romance," "Nostromo," "The Mirror of the Sea," "The Secret Agent," "A Set of Six," "Under Western Eyes," "A Personal Record," "'Twixt Land and Sea," "Chance," "Within the Tides," "Victory," "The Shadow Line," "The Arrow of Gold," "The Rescue" and "The Rover." At his death, he had finished two-thirds of a novel called "Suspense," which had nothing to do with seas and ships, and was laid in Italy.

On his last morning he wrote his daily stint, for, as he acknowledged, "I dare say I am compelled—unconsciously compelled—now to write volume after volume, as in the past I was compelled to go on sea voyage after voyage. Leaves must follow upon one another as leagues used to in the days gone by. I do not know which of the two impulses has appeared more mysterious and wonderful to me." Although he followed the sea for 20 years, it was his fate never to cross the North Atlantic until he visited America for the first time, in the spring of 1923.

Conrad was 20 before he seriously began the study of English, and he mastered it with the facility of the Slav, whose own tongues are so fiendishly difficult that others seem child's play. A dozen years ago an English authority declared him "the best English writer of us all." He had a flexible and picturesque command of the argot of the forecastle; and is most English, perhaps, in the easy chatter of that discursive and charming gossip, Capt. Charles Marlow, who tells the magnificent stories of "Youth," "Heart of Darkness" and in part, "Lord Jim."

When writing in his own person, Conrad's style could not be called idiomatic, like the style of Carlyle, for instance; to the sensitive ear his writing betrays at times a lucidity, a cadence, which are Gallic. His highest virtuosity lay in his formidable, luxuriant and aromatic vocabulary, which was able to express with precision and passion every shade of natural scenery, every nuance of human emotion. His store of words was particularly rich in the field of man's atrocious and idiotic malevolence.

The quality which made his work artistic was due to his heritage as Slav and his adoption as Englishman. He had the Slav's fire and intensity, his sincerity, his imagination, his abandon of emotion. These were restrained by his contact with the manliness and reticence of British character, and with the austerity of the sea. To human tragedy, as he himself wrote, he gave a sigh but not a sob; to human folly a smile, but not a giggle. One of the requisites of a novelist, he maintained, "is the high tranquility of a properly steeled heart." If Conrad's prose verges often upon music, it is music designed massively in accordance with symphonic architecture and contrapuntal science.

Like that other great Pole, Friedrich Nietzsche, Conrad had come to the deliberate conclusion that no man of heart and intelligence can endure to regard the universe as a moral creation, and that it is necessary to view it as a work of art. "The ethical view of the universe," he wrote, "involves us at last in so many cruel and absurd contradictions, where the last vestiges of faith, hope, charity and even of reason itself, seem ready to perish, that I have come to suspect that the aim of creation is not ethical at all. I would fondly believe that its object is purely spectacular: a spectacle for awe, love, adoration or hate, if you like, but in this view—and in this view alone—never for despair!"

"The unwearied, self-forgetful attention to every phase of the living universe reflected in our consciousness may be our appointed task on this earth," he held, and added that "resignation, not mystic, not detached, but resignation open-eyed and conscious, is the only one of our feelings for which it is impossible to become a sham." "I have never sought in the written word anything else but a form of the beautiful," is one of his confessions.

With these views, it is small wonder that his favorite themes, one which he varies in book after book, is that the very virtues of men may bring about their destruction. Again and again, it is some frailty of rectitude, some infirmity of conscience, some fatal flaw of innocence, which betrays his heroes to ruin, before opponents of the basest and most grotesque iniquity who are unhampered by scruples.

There is Lord Jim, destroyed by his trustfulness in the good will of men; there is Tom Lingard, in "The Rescue," wrecking himself, his friends and a great enterprise, because his humaneness cannot endure the massacre of a yacht load of worthless idlers. Almayer and Capt. Whalley, in "The End of the Tether," are driven to ruin by love of their daughters. It is Axel Heyst's supreme and scornful intelligence, to which all forms of action have become hateful, which disarms him before that garish trio of scoundrels, in "Victory." Even Mr. Kurtz himself, in "Heart of Darkness," who turns savage on the upper Congo and is worshiped as a devil with unspeakable sorceries—even the infamous Mr. Kurtz shrinks at last from the slaughter of a boatload of his enemies, who are intent on his destruction and who are more fantastically sordid and brutal than himself.

Conrad, who has depicted so many unsuccessful Napoleons, has placed on record his adverse opinion of the real Bonaparte. Of Don Quixote he has written that this "sublime caballero is the patron saint of all lives spoiled or saved by the irresistible grace of imagination." Perhaps, in the fate of his heroes, we may be permitted to detect, despite their material downfall, a victory of the spirit—a benison pronounced upon those gentle souls which are too honorable to survive.

Conrad could depict a storm at sea in language which, like the elements themselves, flares, crashes and smites; but his diction grows exotic and glamorous when celebrating the East and its mysterious peoples. He was an ardent explorer, too, of the China Seas and Malay Archipelagoes of the soul. It is difficult to recall more than a few of his throng of characters, white as well as Asiatic, who are not touched with something alien, strange and sinister.

He has left a comprehensive collection of castaways, fools and rogues; these bizarre specimens he perused with the subtle, dispassionate eye of an entymologist. Homicidal mania—as in Martin Ricardo and "Gentleman" Brown—particularly engaged his scientific curiosity; and likewise the mortal lesions frequently wrought by the Orient in European character.

Tenderness unreserved he vouchsafed only to the sea, to ships, "those sentient creatures of men's hands," and to the toilers of the sea—three influences, as he never wearied of acknowledging, which molded him into what he became.

Conrad As Imagist

AMONG his other gifts, Joseph Conrad possessed a knack for violent, shattering figures of speech. The following may be offered as representative examples of these thunderclaps of the imagination:

"At its setting the sun had a diminished diameter, and an expiring brown, rayless glow, as if millions of centuries elapsing since dawn had brought it near its end."

"The ship tossed about, shaken furiously, like a toy in the hand of a lunatic."

"The horizon seemed to have come on all sides within arm's length of the ship."

"A big, foaming sea came out of the mist; it made for the ship, roaring wildly, and in its rush it looked as mischievous and discomposing as a madman with an ax."

"A sharp adze stuck up with a shining edge that gleamed dangerously down there like a wicked smile."

"On the very brink of eternity we tottered together with concealing and absurd gestures, like a lot of drunken men embarrassed with a stolen corpse."

SAD TALE OF M. SLATER, WHO LOVED PERSISTENTLY, BUT UNLUCKILY

he had bought for his third honeymoon and use it for their honeymoon. While M. Slater played "K-Katy" and "Good-Morning, Mr. Zip-Zip-Zip" on his phonograph, they were billing and cooing.

Over and over he had to play the records, these and "You Made Me Love You," and the other two. His needles wore out and the music was flat after the first three weeks. The wine was flat, too.

However, the guard, Barreau, got drunk in the village one night and gave the secret away. He said he had been hired to guard a spy. The Commisaire of Police and two gendarmes hearing of this thing, went out to the chateau to investigate. They met the honeymooners coming back from their trip.

"There's no one in the cowshed," smiled Biscaye.

"There is, too," said Barreau.

While the officers hesitated the strains of "When the Moon Shines Over the Cowshed" floated on the night air. They issued unmistakably from the cowshed.

M. Slater was rescued and the plotters placed under arrest. They afterwards were sentenced to long prison terms.

Note well the nobility of M. Slater. His first lament was not for the months he had spent in the cowshed. Straw walls do not a prison make. This noble gentleman's sole complaint was, "They left me only five phonograph records."

Monsieur Samuel Slater sits in his garden. All day long he listens to his phonograph, except when he is making eyes at the village maidens who sometimes pass the villa. "Someday," prophesy the villagers of Gannat, "the rich Monsieur will marry and settle down. You see."

NEW LOEW'S THEATER TO BE OPENED AUG. 21

Thirty Stage and Screen Stars to Attend Initial Performance.

The city's newest motion picture house, Lowe's State Theater, Eighth street and Washington avenue, which has been under construction for the last year, will be opened Aug. 21 with a special evening performance. Marcus Loew, head of the Loew's circuit of 300 theaters, with 30 stage and screen stars as his guests, will attend the opening.

The new theater comprises two buildings. The first, of concrete and terra cotta construction, having a frontage of 135 feet on Washington avenue, has six stores and the lobby of the theater on the first floor, and two floors of office rooms above. Construction is such that two additional floors may be added.

Entrance to the theater proper, which is of structural steel, concrete and brick construction, with a frontage of 90 feet on Lucas avenue, is through an upper foyer, bridging the alley between Washington and Lucas avenues. Exit is by way of this alley, which has been specially paved and covered, or direct through west doors to Eighth street.

Staircase of Marble.

The lobby is modeled after the McVickers' Theater of Chicago, with terrazzo floors, bronze ticket kiosk, and walls finished in rouge royal marble. Lighting fixtures in the lobby include two gold-plated wall brackets purchased from the Vanderbilt estate. The inner rotunda is circular and elaborately decorated, including two display fountains with white Italian figures set in black and gold marble niches in the east and west walls, with a chandelier of cut Colonial prisms suspended in the center.

A grand staircase of Tennessee marble leads from the rotunda to the upper foyer, which is wainscoted 10 feet high with American walnut. The ceiling is finished in blue and silver, and two paintings, "Romance" and "Adventure," by Edward Trumbell, adorn the walls. The furniture and "props" of the foyer and promenade include canary birds and parrots, antique pieces from France and Italy, bronze clocks and lamps, and modern American lounges and easy chairs for practical purposes. A ladies' room, decorated in "harem" style, is at the south end, with the men's room, more soberly finished, opposite. The way to the lower floor is by a second marble stairway, and to the balcony through north and south doors direct from the foyer.

Orchid and Gold Finishing.

The theater proper is finished in orchid and gold, decorations including two large tapestries symbolic of "Music" and "Drama," and a 3000-pound chandelier of crystal beads. Illumination is by semidirect panels, with four color lights. The standing rail in the lower floor is of York Fossill marble, all other rails being of bronze tubing. The stage is 70x35 feet and especial care has been taken for lighting effects, produced by the use of metallic cloths and drapes. A combination heating and cooling system provides an individual ventilator under each seat, this being the first installation of this system in an American theater. Two-thirds of the balcony seats are of the upholstered, lodge type.

Construction cost of the new theater, the promoters state, was $1,200,000, with an additional $500,000 for equipment and furnishings. The site is under a 99-year lease from four estates, annual rental being $60,000. The seating capacity is 3500 persons, and no seats will be reserved after the opening performance. Tickets for this performance will be on sale at the theater Monday. Prices will be the same as those charged at the other large picture houses here, and Metro-Goldwyn pictures will be shown exclusively. In addition to the pictures the usual soloist and band features will be presented weekly. Performances will be continuous from 11 a. m. until 11 p. m.

The orchestra, 35 pieces, will be directed by Don Albert, who furnished the musical settings to numerous D. W. Griffith pictures. This will be augmented by an organ. Nash Weil of New York has been named manager of the new house, with Sidney Gates of Baltimore assistant.

League Official Describes How Problem of Austria Was Tackled and Solved

Says One of Secrets of Success Is That League Forms Half-Way House Between Neutral Experts and Government Officials

By RALPH COURTNEY,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 16.

TAKE an intensely humorous and intelligent sparrow; turn him into a human being; give him a pair of large round glasses. Therewith you have a rough picture of Sir James Arthur Salter, savior of Austria, chief of the finance and economic section of the League of Nations.

Sir Arthur knows what the league really is. He is in America and he has this valuable piece of information. Listen while he expounds his institution, remembering that this is the first authoritative statement on the league in this country by one of its highest officials.

Sir Arthur is at the center of one side of a square of students. The square is made of desks occupied by 40 odd members of the Institute of Politics. On the right is the Bulgarian Minister, not far away on the left is Major-General Henry T. Allen, commander of the American forces in Germany. The students are professors, admirals, editors, judges, generals, diplomats and a few just ordinary mortals.

To those who insist that the league must be a kind of super-government, Sir Arthur's first statement comes as a blow.

"The league," he says, "is not a government, either superior, equal or inferior to others. It is essentially an organized system of conferences designed to facilitate agreement.

Action Must Be Unanimous.

"When the league succeeds," he continues, "the governments co-operate in the action to which every one of them has agreed. When the governments do not agree the league system has, in that case, not succeeded. The different governments are then free to act as if there had been no league intervention, each in full exercise of its full sovereignty. The members of the league do not sacrifice their freedom of action as sovereign states.

"Is there then nothing," Sir Arthur asks himself for us, "which countries entering the league promise to do or not to do?

"They undertake while members," he answers, "not to resort to war until they have submitted the matter in dispute either to arbitration, where that is suitable (generally when the dispute relates to the interpretation of application of legal engagements), or, in other cases, discussion with other members of the league in the Council. And they undertake not to go to war to enforce a claim which the Arbitration Court has held unjust.

"That, in effect," he says, "is all that a country commits itself to definitely in becoming a member of the league.

In Case of War.

"It is true," he adds, "that members also undertake to co-operate in economic sanctions against a country which has resorted to war in contravention of the above provisions. But this obligation ceases if the council (except for the parties in dispute) is not unanimous in deciding against the country going to war; so that the obligation of a country or the council to join in economic sanctions does not arise until its own vote has been given against the given State. Each sovereign State decides itself as to sending its soldiers.

"The general agreement in Article X must, of course, be read in conjunction with the other provisions of the covenant."

Here Sir Arthur is trying to allay our American fears about Article X. He tells us, in fact, that we are too literal by a lot.

"What then of the voting power," Sir Arthur now asks.

"Voting power practically counts for nothing in the working of the league. Except for elections, procedure and certain exceptional administrative tasks, the league works by unanimity of all countries interested. Let me give you an example. When the council of the league considered the plan of Hungarian reconstruction, Hungary, Czecho Slovakia, Serbia and Rumania became additional members of the council, as countries especially interested and the agreement of every one of them was necessary before the plan was adopted.

States Remain Sovereign.

"The idea that a State undertakes to do what any majority of other States may consider desirable is a pure delusion," he emphasizes. "States remain sovereign and decide separately themselves what they will do or not do."

Sir Arthur here interposes a short explanation of the constitution of the league.

"The Assembly, in which all members of the league are represented, meets once a year. It controls the budget, elects a part of the Council and directs the main lines of the league's policy. The Council, consisting at present of four great powers and six smaller elected States, meets four times a year, and, largely because it consists of only 10 members and meets four times yearly, it is, in effect the executive organ. Besides the Assembly and Council is the technical organization, consisting partly of a permanent secretariat. This organization gives the league conference system three great advantages over specially convened conference. The organization prepares the ground beforehand; during the conference it facilitates agreement; and after agreement it watches and assists execution."

It is clear from conversation with Sir Arthur that neither he nor the league has much use for the Lloyd George type of conference which meets hurriedly and then disperses. The ground for the conference has not been prepared, the experts of the various nations are not used to working together, the negotiators are soon forced to turn the questions over to the experts, and, because the experts are unable to finish their job before it is time to adjourn, very little happens. And if, by chance, decisions are taken, no permanent body is left behind to see that they are carried out.

The League and Austria.

The league has tackled and solved with conspicuous success one great problem. This was the problem of Austria. We shall hear what the league has to say about this in Sir Arthur's own words.

"All the world knows," he says, "that Austria in 1922 was on the verge of starvation and dissolution and that she is now prosperous, self-supporting and politically secure. Previous attempts to save her had been made. They had all failed. How and why did the league succeed? Chiefly because for a complex problem the league had an appropriate and elastic machinery.

"The problem was political as well as financial. It was necessary to prepare a technically adequate scheme and (what was more difficult) to secure agreement and co-operative action by a number of different governments.

"What advantages had the league in accomplishing this?

"The Council of the League,

"If the Democrats Carry Missouri Coolidge Cannot Win"

Increase of Vote of Both Parties Regarded as a Hopeful Sign by Political Expert, Who Contends That Only Way to Curb "Machines" Is to Use the Primaries.

If the Solid South Can Be Counted On for the Democratic Ticket, the Defection of La Follette States Will Leave Republicans With Thin Margin They Must Hold to Win.

By FRANK R. KENT,
Author of "The Great Game of Politics."
BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 16.

MR. KENT is the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun. His long experience as an observer and recorder of affairs, both in Baltimore and Washington, together with his natural aptitude for politics, have advanced him to a position where he is regarded as an authority on political matters. His book, "The Great Game of Politics," has had a wide circulation. Its purpose was to explain the practical workings of our political system, and the "machines" which have grown from it.

The big lesson of his book, and one many times emphasized, is that it is of greater importance to the public welfare that citizens not affiliated with the "machine" should vote at the primaries than it is that they should vote at the general election. This article is written for the Post-Dispatch.

IT is, of course, foolish to think an August primary in a single state sheds a revealing light on the presidential election in November, but it is certainly true there is real significance in Missouri's recent Statewide primary results and figures. A study of the returns discloses certain currents and make possible certain comparison that seems to have a direct bearing on the national situation.

In the first place, it ought to be clear that, this time, Missouri, with its 18 electoral votes, comes pretty close to being a key state—is, in fact, as pivotal and important as Ohio and more so than Indiana. It is possible so to juggle the figures of the electoral table as to prove almost anything in August—and even in October—but there does appear to be both logic and force back of the belief that if the Democrats carry Missouri, Mr. Coolidge cannot win.

It is the La Follette situation that makes Missouri so vital to the Republicans this time. Undoubtedly, it is true, that in every table made by Republican and Democratic managers, Missouri appears. It seems to be the indispensable State.

Missouri the Biggest Doubtful Border State.

The facts to back this theory up are these: Missouri is not only the biggest but the most doubtful of the five border states. If it goes Democratic, Maryland, Kentucky, and Tennessee—all of which went for Harding in 1920, can be reasonably counted upon to swing back. Add them to the solid South and count in West Virginia, the home of Davis, and Nebraska, the home of Bryan, and you have a total of 200 electoral votes, without touching territory where the big fight is usually made—New York, New Jersey, Indiana, Ohio. Here is the table:

Alabama, 12; Arizona, 3; Arkansas, 9; Florida, 6; Georgia, 14; Kentucky, 13; Louisiana, 10; Maryland, 8; Mississippi, 10; Missouri, 18; Nebraska, 8; Nevada, 3; New Mexico, 3; North Carolina, 12; Oklahoma, 10; South Carolina, 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 20; Virginia, 12; West Virginia, 8. Total 200.

Now, add to this 200 and the 39 votes of the five States conceded to La Follette, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana—and you have a total of 239. Obviously then, Coolidge, to get the 266 votes necessary to a choice, would have to carry everything else in the country. If a single sizeable State slipped away he would be lost. If Davis and La Follette, separately or combined, got 27 additional votes from any section the door would be definitely closed on Republican success. Davis might not win, but Coolidge could not. Give Missouri to the Democrats and the calculation on Coolidge becomes too close to risk.

Of course, if La Follette should carry more than five States—and the way his friends talk it is easy to imagine he will carry at least 10, there would be no way at all for the Republicans to win, because of the very simple and obvious fact that every State in which La Follette has a real chance is a Republican State, impossible for any Democrat to carry, except by a fluke. This means that one of the other alternatives would be assured—either the election of Davis, through a combination of the solid South, border States and the East, or the throwing of the whole business into Congress.

It is the Democratic belief that by October La Follette's strength in the normal Republican States of the Middle and Northwest will appear sufficiently formidable to convince the big interests now back of the Republican ticket, that the only sure way to avoid the calamity of a deadlock election is a shift from Coolidge and Dawes to Davis and Bryan.

Significance of the Heavy Missouri Vote.

It is a plausible and interesting theory and it has some real foundation, but it completely collapses if Missouri, the most potent and significant of the border States, should again break away from its Democratic moorings. With this view of the importance of Missouri in the fall and the certainty that both Democrats and Republicans will exert themselves to the limit in that State, it is easy to understand the unusual outside interest in the primary vote.

The most striking thing about that vote was its size. It seems that approximately 700,000 votes were polled. It is difficult to get exact figures because of the absence of registration data in the rural districts, but the best estimate is that there are in Missouri at this time about 2,100,000 potential voters—that is, men and women qualified to vote. Four years ago, there were 1,969,711. That was the first year the women voted and there has unquestionably been an increase of 150,000 in voting strength since then. The total vote cast for President in Missouri in 1920 was 1,301,961, which means that 636,911 qualified voters stayed at home.

Democratic Voters Back on the Job.

The vote in the primary shows that fully two-thirds of the voters of the State did not participate in the primaries. It shows that more voters failed to vote in the primaries than voted in the general election for President four years ago. Yet, the vote —approximately 700,000—is probably the largest ever polled in a primary election in Missouri. It is nearly 300,000 greater than the vote in the 1920 senatorial primaries and 40,000 greater than the vote in 1922 for senatorial candidates—664,875. The figures show that this time 131,974 registered voters in St. Louis did not take the trouble to go to the polls and that in Kansas City 90,000 out of a total registered vote of 154,412 stayed away.

When the vital nature of the primaries is considered, this still seems an appalling stay-at-home vote and, of course, it is. Actually, however, it is an increase over preceding primaries and indicates an increased political virility and interest.

This is particularly true of the Democratic vote, which shows a greater proportionate gain compared to the primaries two and four years ago, than the Republicans with, of course, a proportionately smaller stay-away vote. From the angle of the national ticket this is distinctly encouraging. It is the best possible indication of the return of the Democratic party to dominance in the State. There may and probably were local reasons for the better numerical showing of the Democrats this time, but that does not detract from the soundness of the view that the greater the primary interest, the brighter the general election prospect.

It is also true that the increase in the Missouri primary vote is the first hopeful sign seen in four years by the students of politics who have become more or less appalled by the shrinkage in the vote all over the country and what seems to be a growing tendency upon the part of the people to refuse to participate in elections—particularly primary elections. In Missouri the records, based on the election figures for the past four years, show that every 100 voters who vote in the general election, 48 who could vote stay away—and Missouri is well up among the leaders in this matter of vote efficiency percentage. The highest grade is made by Kentucky, where there are only 24 stay at homes, or absentees, for every 100 voters while the worst record is that of Pennsylvania, where there are 133 stay at homes, or absentees for every 100 voters.

These are general election percentages. When you come to the primaries the smallness of the vote throughout the country becomes absurd and that is what makes the Missouri vote, at this time, particularly noteworthy. In spite of the fact that practically two-thirds of the potential voters in the State did not participate, it is probable no State primaries in the country so far this year have shown a higher participation percentage, and most of them—Maryland, for instance—far lower.

The Vital Importance of Voting at Primaries.

Always and everywhere, the vote in the general election is greater than the vote in the primaries. Actually it ought to be reversed and more voters should vote in the primaries than in the general. Actually the primaries are infinitely the more important of the two. The primaries are really the key to all politics. They are the exclusive gate through which all party candidates must pass in order to get on the election ballot.

The big point is that the voters in the primary elections limit the choice of the voters in the general election to their choice in the primary election. There is no getting away from that. When the full significance of that statement is grasped, the tremendous importance of the primaries ought to be appreciated. It ought to be clear that the man or woman who votes in the general election and not in the primaries loses at least 50 per cent and probably more of the value and effectiveness of his vote as compared to the voter who votes in both. Failure to vote in the primaries means that you confer upon those who do vote complete power to pick the candidates for whom you must vote at the general election.

It is the general disposition among average men and women not to participate in the primaries that gives political machines their real power. Control of the primaries is the secret of all machine strength. The power and permanence of political machines in any city or state are exactly equal to the tolerance of the voters in such city or state. The machine voters vote in the primary with extreme regularity and solidity. The non-machine voters vote irregularly and without solidity. Failure of the non-machine voters to participate is plainly the reason machines, although representing a small minority of the vote so frequently and thoroughly control primaries.

There unquestionably is a tendency upon the part of most people to regard the primaries as particularly the business of the politicians and to consider that they have done their duty if they vote in the general election. There simply could not be a greater mistake. Defeating machine candidates in the general election does not damage a machine. They can and do survive innumerable general election defeats, but they do not and cannot survive a primary election defeat. The primaries are where the machines "live." It is the only place they can be beaten, and the idea that they are invincible in the primaries is a mistaken idea. They can be defeated there at any time the bulk of the qualified voters decide to participate.

Hope in Interest Shown in Missouri.

It is these facts that make the unprecedented heaviness of the Missouri primary vote encouraging. It seems to mean an increased interest upon the part of the Missouri people in politics. More than anything else this country needs a general increase in political interest among the people.

Unless the tendency of the voters not to vote is checked in this or some other way, the time will soon come when our Presidents will consistently be elected as was the one in 1920, not by a majority of all the qualified voters, not even by a majority of a majority of the qualified voters, but actually by a majority of a minority of the voters. And if that time should come, it would mean complete failure of our whole political system—the turning of our theory of government by the majority into a joke.

Democratic Plan of Battle in East Depends Largely on Smith's Decision on Gubernatorial Race

Some Leaders Look to Him as Party's Moses. He Is Uncertain Whether His Candidacy Would Help Davis.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.

ALTHOUGH a number of Democratic leaders believe the greatest opportunity for John W. Davis lies in a split of the Republican vote in the West between La Follette and Coolidge, not a few chieftains are insistent that Gov. Al Smith is Democracy's real Moses and that upon his decision the whole course of the Democratic campaign in the East will turn.

Al Smith, it would seem, has it in his power to be the innocent means of injuring the Davis candidacy or helping it. Just now the most interesting discussions are going on which indicate conclusively that John W. Davis himself is deeply concerned over the trend of Gov. Smith's mind.

To understand the situation, with its many sides it must be remembered that the close friends of Al Smith have not given up hope of ultimately landing him in the White House. While the Governor himself will render loyal support he cannot control all of his followers. Some of them, he thinks, might vote for him and cut Davis on the mistaken assumption that in this way they could demonstrate the truth of their preconvention boast that Al Smith could carry New York even in a presidential year.

Might Do More on Stump.

The Governor has said to close friends that if he ran for re-election he might not be helping Davis to poll the normal Democratic vote. He argued that possibly he would do more good by stumping other states like New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where he is admittedly popular and would draw enormous crowds, whereas if he ran for Governor of New York all his time would have to be devoted to speech-making in the empire state itself.

This viewpoint has been misrepresented, as it has percolated through Democratic channels into a story that the real purpose of the Governor's advisors in dissuading him from running is a selfish one and that they really want him to spend his time on the stump, not in the East, but in the West, in preparation for the 1928 campaign.

This theory is predicated on the notion that Smith needs to establish contacts in the West, that Davis will not be victorious anyhow, and that to help Davis carry the East by running for Governor of New York and carrying Davis along might by chance bring Davis into the White House, in which case he would be the logical candidate to succeed himself in 1928 and there would be no chance for Smith to win presidential honor.

Tammany Wants Local Victory

This correspondent came back from Clarksburg, W. Va., on the same train with several Tammany leaders and discussed the gubernatorial situation with them. They gave the sincere impression that while anxious indeed for the triumph of Davis because on more than one occasion he has shown a distinct friendliness to organization men in politics, their chief concern after all is the local Democratic ticket.

They — meaning Tammany— want to win. No other vote getter like Smith has appeared in a generation in New York politics. So while they know of Smith's disinclination to run again, they feel he would insure the victory of the state and local tickets and they prefer him to make the race. If it helps the national ticket well and good, if it doesn't, at least the local candidates will have been swept into power.

Although nobody has the right to speak for Davis authoritatively except himself, some of the Democrats who have discussed the New York situation with him are confident he wants Smith to run for Governor again. No statement to that effect will come from Davis because if Smith is going to run he will do so, not as an adjunct to the national ticket with a half-hearted interest in his own race, but in response to the demand of the people of New York State for another administration of their affairs by him at Albany.

The last time he ran he did not disclose his intention too early in the race.

May Not Stump West.

Should Smith fail to become the Democratic nominee for the Governorship of New York, it may be seriously doubted whether his stump speaking will be in the West. Al Smith is known as a "wet" and the Democratic managers would be taking a big chance to send any pronounced "wets" to the dry West to tell the people of the arid belt how to vote.

In the East, however, where to be a "wet" in politics is considered no great handicap, but on the contrary in the larger cities is a great asset, the New York Governor would be helping Davis by giving him enthusiastic support.

Nor would there be any question of sincerity involved because Smith had the delegations from the big Eastern States at last month's convention and could have them again if he runs in 1928.

The strength of William Gibbs McAdoo was in the West. According to letters received here from Europe, McAdoo plans to make speeches for Davis in the West, endeavoring to hold the radical Democrats to the Davis and Bryan standard. With Smith pulling hard in the East and McAdoo in the West, the Democrats hope to keep their lines steady against the La Follette invasion so that the Wisconsin independent may gather most of his votes from the Republican party, for the outcome of the election depends almost entirely on how many Republican votes La Follette can take away from what might under other circumstances be expected to be a solid Republican vote for Coolidge.

CHINESE RIVERS STATIONARY; FLOODED AREA BEING DRAINED

Belated Reports Tell of Villages Being Devastated, but Details of Disaster Are Lacking.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Aug. 16.—The cessation of rain the past week has resulted in levels of the rivers in Chihli province remaining stationary, with the exception of two points, where there was a slight rise. No additional floods have been reported and much of the flooded area is draining.

A belated report from Heng Chow Fu, Hunan province, says that the flood was the worst known. Villages along the rivers south of the city are in ruins, while in Heng Chow Fu a thousand houses were inundated. It is impossible to estimate the damage in the provinces, due to the lack of details contained in Chinese official reports.

The international relief commission anticipates much distress in the fall and winter, and in the meantime is not distributing relief.

In addition to the customs and other surtaxes, which are to be devoted to relief work, the Cabinet has issued a decree reducing transportation rates on materials and supplies to the stricken districts. President Tsao Kun has donated $20,000 for relief.

The Beginning of Religious Freedom.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MR. DAVIS, in his speech of acceptance as a candidate for the presidency, on the evening of Aug. 11, is quoted as saying: "Let it be said to the immortal glory of those who founded the province of Maryland that religious freedom on this side of the water began with the toleration act which they adopted in 1649. It broadened with the years until it was written into the Constitution in language too plain to be mistaken that in this happy land of ours every man might, without loss or threat of loss, without lessening or threat of lessening his civic, social or political rights, worship in his own way and fashion the one God and Father of us all."

We are thankful to the speaker for his tribute to the colony of Maryland; but his words are not exact and do not give full justice to those who laid the foundation of religious liberty in this country.

Maryland history began in March, 1634, and from this time dates the beginning of religious liberty in Maryland and not in 1649. This is evident from the oath which was taken by the Governors at the very beginning of the province. The oath read as follows: "And I do further swear that I will not by myself or any other person, directly or indirectly, trouble, molest or discountenance any person whatsoever, professing to believe in Jesus Christ, and in particular no Roman Catholic, for or in respect of religion, nor his or her free exercise thereof within the said province, * * * nor will I make any difference of persons in conferring offices, rewards or favors, for or in respect to their said religion, but merely as I shall find them, faithful and well deserving of his said lordship and to the best of my understanding endowed with moral virtues and abilities * * * and if any other officer or persons whatsoever shall * * * molest or disturb any person * * * professing to believe in Jesus Christ, merely for or in respect of his or her religion or the free exercise thereof upon notice or complaint thereof made to him, I will apply my power and authority to relieve any person so molested or trouble, whereby he may have right done him."

When it was stated in the oath of the Governor that no discrimination would be made against any Roman Catholic, the purpose of the phrase was to assure the Catholics that they would have religious toleration, at least in Maryland—toleration which they did not enjoy in England or any other province of England.

In 1649 a law was passed which guaranteed the religious liberty as given in the Governor's oath. The following is the law of 1649 to which Mr. Davis referred in his speech of acceptance: "And whereas the enforcing of conscience in matters of religion hath frequently fallen out to be of dangerous consequence in those commonwealths where it has been practiced, and for the more quiet and peaceable government of this province, and the better to preserve mutual love and unity amongst the inhabitants, no person or persons whatsoever within this province or the islands, ports, harbors, creeks or havens thereunto belonging, professing to believe in Jesus Christ, shall from henceforth be any ways troubled or molested or discountenanced for or in respect of his or her religion, nor in the free exercise thereof within this province or the islands thereunto belonging, nor any way compelled to the belief or exercise of any other religion, against his or her consent."

As will be seen from the above quotations, religious freedom on this side of the water did not begin in 1649, but at the very inception of the Maryland province in 1634. This point which I am making is important, for Rhode Island passed a law of religious toleration before 1649; and many, even historians, claim that religious freedom originated in the Rhode Island colony. Religious freedom began in Maryland in 1634. HENRY S. SPALDING.

No Cannon-Fodder Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A CORRRESPONDENT in your issue of Aug. 6, in a burst of 100 per cent holiday rhetoric, makes the junker's usual appeal to Providence. "In God's name," he inquires, "what do these men (opponents of Mobilization day) desire?"

If he refers to the Christians' God—as he apparently does not—he will find the answer to his question in the admirable letter by Mr. Frederick J. Libby which you published in the same issue. These men desire peace and not peace with a kick in it. They are patriotic enough to prefer Uncle Sam extending the hand of friendship to Uncle Sam displaying the chip on his shoulder. They want the youth of the land to serve as ambassadors of friendship, not as cannon-fodder.

EX-LIEUTENANT.

THE PARTY IS NOT COOLIDGE.

Mr. Coolidge's complacency at the time of the disclosures of corruption in his Cabinet and administration and his failure in his acceptance address to acknowledge any party culpability for the series of scandals in the administration of the past four years are an unfavorable background at best for his claims of personal honesty and devotion to economy. Assuming, however, that he is an honest man, which nobody disputes, and that he desires the utmost in honest, clean, constructive government, what is his power, as revealed by his past record, to give effect to his policies?

Coolidge is one thing, the Republican party is another. What can Coolidge do against the will of his party or of Congress? If Coolidge is a man of trenchant honesty it must have offended him sorely to have remained silent and outwardly complacent when the exposures were being made of the rottenness in his Cabinet and the Veterans' Bureau. It must have gone against his conscience to remain mute while the Walsh committee was endeavoring so painfully to secure legal proof that the word "principal" in one of the famous telegrams to Florida meant no other than the President, as everybody believes it did, and nobody can honestly conceive that it did not.

But Coolidge wanted the nomination of his party; his party wanted silence, denial and suppression. Therefore, the will of the party prevailed, and Mr. Coolidge, to keep the party's favor, suppressed whatever fire of outraged honesty he had. What relation does this phase of past history bear to the future? Only this: That the party's will and not Mr. Coolidge's will prevails. Fall was not Harding's personal choice for Interior Secretary. Fall was chosen by the controlling powers of the party before the nomination was offered to Harding. It is understood that Harding's nomination in a room in the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago was made contingent on his acceptance of the Cabinet officer who later became, in the judgment of public opinion, a bribetaker. What power now has Calvin Coolidge to resist what the Republican party wants?

No fact of Mr. Coolidge's incumbency of a year is so conspicuous as his utter lack of control over his own party in Congress. This was not on account of La Follette and the pestiferous progressives. His own party regulars paid no heed to his leadership on the bonus bill, the tax bill and Japanese exclusion.

Mr. Coolidge may have impulses of reason and liberality in foreign affairs. But what will that avail him? "We propose," he said in his acceptance speech, "to become a member of the Permanent Court of International Justice." Coolidge proposes and the Senate disposes. Thus far it has been disposed to bury Mr. Coolidge's World Court proposition. "I personally," says Mr. Coolidge, "should favor entering into covenants for the purpose of outlawing aggressive war by any practical means." But Mr. Coolidge's personal inclinations thus far have been as influential in the Senate as those of any other good Republican of the rank and file, and no more. His use of the word "personally" is an unconscious confession of his futility in getting his views enacted into law.

Mr. Coolidge's personal policies may in many instances be admirable. But to elect Mr. Coolidge is to elect the Republican party. And the Republican party, using Coolidge as a figurehead, a symbol of New England thrift and honesty, has shown its contempt of his leadership. And the Republican party is the same party that chose Fall to give away the public domain, defended the corruptionists when brought before the bar of Congress, maligned and bedeviled the investigators and charged the investigations to "politics."

MARYLAND, MOTHER OF TOLERANCE.

Strongly indorsing religious tolerance, in his speech of acceptance, Mr. John W. Davis called attention to Maryland as the place where the early colonists found refuge from creedal strife. "Let it be said to the immortal glory of those who founded the province of Maryland that religious freedom on this side of the water began with the Toleration Act which they adopted in 1649."

The history of conditions which produced that Toleration Act is well told in the first volume of Woodrow Wilson's "History of the American People." Those were the days when religious tolerance was practically unknown. Most of the land now in the State of Maryland had been granted by King Charles to his favorite Minister, Lord Baltimore. His son, the second Lord Baltimore, a Catholic, "was too cool and prudent a man to wish to set up a colony to which none but Roman Catholics should be admitted." All creeds were welcomed and lived in amity.

Meanwhile, the adherents of the Church of England and the Puritans, in other neighboring colonies, were constantly at strife, while, in England itself, religious intolerance continued to impel men and women to migrate to the New World in the hope of finding liberty of faith there. Persecutions of Quakers and other nonconformists by the New England authorities drove large numbers into Maryland, which flourished from this access of independent persons. And, finally, the great Civil War in England, in which religious differences played a large part, also drove others to the colony where alone toleration could be found.

From that center religious freedom spread, especially as the other colonies found that intolerance did not pay. Commerce and common sense slowly drove out prejudices and broadened men's minds. Today it is inconceivable that the spirit of intolerance can make any dangerous headway.

SOCIALIST-LABOR PARTY DREAM.

If someone should dream a dream that the state of society pictured by Edward Bellamy 36 years ago was about to be realized, and that he would prove it in an address at the Statler Hotel in St. Louis, some curiosity would be aroused. But no one would expect to hear a convincing speech. Bellamy's vision of a reconstructed society, in which all industry was carried on for the sake of the workers and consumers, without regard to profit, was expounded, without credit, by Socialist-Labor Presidential Candidate Frank T. Johns, at the hotel named, in an interview in Thursday's Post-Dispatch.

Bellamy's economic romance had a wonderful sale and was translated into many languages. It may have had something to do with forming the ideas of the little group of Russian revolutionists who seized governmental power after the fall of Kerensky and in trying to put it into effect wrecked the entire industrial system of Russia.

Fortunately for the United States and most other countries, it remains nothing but a dream. The Socialist-Labor party, which held its fifteenth national convention in 1920, continues to dream the dream and preach it as best it may, in face of the fact that American labor has never given it any appreciable support, the vote of the party in national elections being far below that of the Socialist or Prohibition parties, and so insignificant that none of the almanacs or other records take the trouble to give the total.

All that the Socialist-Labor party has to do to realize its dream is to convert over 50 per cent of the voters to the idea of wholesale confiscation of wealth involved in carrying it out; to show how this could be done without bringing ruin to the millions, and to prove that industry can be carried on successfully without the incentive of profit that now produces leaders. Just a bagatelle for dreamers! Practical men, however, have never been able to think out any means for improving social and economic conditions except through the slow but safe process of experiment and mutual concession.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"I have been reading the Franks case more or less religiously, and have reached a conclusion about it," Mr. Antwine said.

"The Loeb and Leopold boys are not insane. They are as sane as most people are, and I don't think they are suffering from unusual gland trouble.

"They are just damn fools. That doesn't sound very learned; perhaps is not elegant but it is the truth. We have not paid much attention to damn fools. I think I have pointed out that we did not know how many of them there are until we all tried to drive automobiles.

"We must know by this time that this is a very general affliction. Some cases are almost beyond belief. That is, some people are bigger damn fools than most and still others are even bigger damn fools still.

"The Loeb and Leopold boys are the biggest damn fools I ever heard of. There was not a single thing they did that everybody but a damn fool would have done. Imagine wanting to commit the perfect crime! What a damn fool idea!

"I am sorry to bring a so famous mystery to a solution so utterly commonplace as this is, but if you will read the story as closely as I have read it you will reach the same conclusion.

"There is nothing abnormal, subnormal or in the least pathological about these boys Anybody with horse sense can tell you what is the matter with them, science or no science. They are just the two biggest damn fools anybody ever heard of; and as is always the case with damn fools, it is up to the judge."

RAMSAY MacDONALD.

If ever justified are we,
Who claim God's purposes to see,
His wisdom—His unerring plan,
That with the hour provides the man—
Then may we find in our TODAY
How God brot to the closed door
One who, in worldly goods, was poor;
Who in sequestered path would stay,
Not seeking for the tumult and the strife—
The voice of power in the larger life;
Content to do his humble part
With noble instinct—kindly heart.

But when the GREAT tried, o'er and o'er,
To let the sunshine of Good Will—
Sweet Peace for war—deep Joy for ill—
Stream thru that door—that closed door
And failed to press it open, then God drew Unto the door the man He knew
And placed upon His map—unfurled—
Ramsay MacDonald—the LINCOLN of the world!

Sir: If the immortal Lord Byron were alive today to listen to the discussions anent his future resting place he might quote with Kipling:

"The tumult and the shouting dies,
The Captains and the Kings depart,
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart."

Or again, with Gray in the elegy:

"No farther seek his merits to disclose
Or draw his frailities from their dread abode,
There they alike in trembling hope repose
The bosom of his father and his God."

PARAGRAPHS.

Hamlet is said to be the most talkative character in all of Shakspeare's writings, which shows just how much the Bard of Avon knew about women.

Most all of the love affairs of "Dickie" Loeb are now being thrashed out in court, being an endeavor on the part of his attorneys to show the irrationality of these necking affairs in order to beat the State out of one.

To Spain, Morocco merely means more ruckus, more expense, more trouble and more fatalities.

One of the largest cocoanuts ever grown has been found in California. It is on the shoulders of a bird out there who is running for Congress.

Masters Loeb and Leopold are said to have made a special request to their friends to supply them with all the newspaper clippings concerning their trial they can get hold of. An insatiable craving for noose, we call it.

That Chicago couple who preferred a flivver to their baby probably were of the opinion that one rattler around the house was enough.

Besides, if they'da kept both the kid and the flivver there would be some danger of the flivver being chewed up alive.

A couple of cake-eaters we know are to vindicate themselves by reforming. They're going to eat rye bread now.

According to the findings of alienists, Babe Leopold was exceedingly cruel to birds. Which may interest some of the wrens who have been fluttering into the courtroom daily in order to get an earful.

Although we don't know for sure, we suggest that Charley Dawes' celebrated violin must be a Straddle-varius.

ALONG THE MERAMEC.

Where winds the Meramec about the hills
Amid Missouri's sloping valleys fair,
'Tis there the air with glamour nature fills,
In all her wondrous charm flashed everywhere.
Here lisp the waters in a rhythm sweet,
Casting upon its breast a dreamy spell;
The hills above smile down upon your feet,
And wave the trees around the perfum'd dell.
The sunlight dances o'er the rippling stream
Like hopes across the azure summer sky;
The shadows chase the light as in a dream
While from its nest is heard the wild bird's cry.
Exquisite vision of sweet beauty rare,
Which haunts the road that leads so far away;
Bewild'ring picture framed in tints all fair,
A master poem of a perfect day.
So grand the scene, the soul drops in a swoon,
Inebriated by the joy of earth,
Which offers up her kiss-like precious boon,
Touched by God's finger with high heaven's mirth.
Reluctant, we will trace our steps to rest,
And dream of all this glory o'er again;
Once more we hear birds singing in their nest,
Like children who upon our heart have lain.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND MODERNISM.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

IT is the chief glory of the Church of England that an honest thinker in its ministry may express his thought without fear of losing his means of making a living. Interpretation is free. Doctrine is elastic. Hence it is not surprising that we had a clearer, a more concrete expression of what Americans call "Modernism" than we are accustomed to in our own discussions, coming from the lips of the newly consecrated Bishop of Birmingham, thus: "There was no special creation of Adam and Eve. They were evolved probably from a tribal group of monkeys who slowly began to show a brain development characteristic of humanity. The Book of Genesis is an allegory."

The Rt. Rev. Ernest William Barnes, second wrangler at Cambridge, president of the Cambridge Union, a select preacher of the university and for six years canon of Westminster, is a scholar of high standing as well as a theologian. He is not what we colloquially term "a lightweight" in his own communion. Yet is it absolutely true that the masses of churchmen and churchwomen in the English establishment will not accept this sort of hyper-Darwinism from any source as a categorical embodiment of their own views. Charles Darwin avoided the categorical as carefully as if he had been an American clergyman, but for other reasons. And everywhere, among Protestant Christians, evangelical and non-evangelical, there is the unformulated feeling that "there is more faith in one grain of honest doubt than in the whole fabric of some men's philosophies."

THE PRAYER OF PETITION.

PROF. KIRSOPP LAKE in Atlantic Monthly for August.

PRAYER means petition, communion, aspiration, and confession. In the public worship of the churches petition has always been put in the first place, and naturally so, for it is historically the most prominent. Nevertheless probably few educated men believe in its efficacy. The laws of life—which is the will of God—are not changed in their working by prayer, sacrifice or fasting. The most striking example of this fact is the crudest and simplest. In my boyhood, it was still customary to pray for fine weather, or, on rarer occasions when the English climate demanded it, for rain. The custom is now, I fancy, almost dead. It has not been killed by any atrophy of religion, but by increased knowledge of meteorology. If you teach the public in the newspaper every day that the weather is fixed through complicated laws, that if the barometer is rising fair weather is probable, while rain may be expected if it is falling, you cannot expect them to believe on Sunday that the humidity of the atmosphere will be affected by prayer. * * * That the religion of tomorrow will have prayer I do not doubt, unless the churches should be so foolish as to insist that prayer must include petition, in which case they will keep the word, but another name will be given to the thing. For I do not believe that the religion of tomorrow will have any more place for petition than it will have for any other form of magic.

Describes How Problem Of Austria Was Solved

consisting of political representatives, was able to deal with the political aspects and secured the signature of a political protocol signed by the great powers and other countries specially interested which gave an assurance of political security.

"The technical work was simultaneously done by a body of highly competent technical experts—the financial committee. This committtee consisted partly of high treasury officials. The latter acted as experts and not government representatives, and therefore did not bind their governments—but in producing a technically good scheme they were at the time in a good position to know what was politically practicable.

World's Good Will Enlisted.

"The league was able to enlist the collective good will of the world as expressed and rendered effective through the Assembly, representing all States in the league.

"In September, 1922, the continuous and simultaneous presence in Geneva of Assembly, Council and Financial Committtee for a month enabled the technical and political difficulties to be satisfactorily worked out and adjusted without undue pressure of time.

"The league's foremost organization, the Financial Committee, which could be convened as required, and the Secretariat, which was always available, were at hand to secure the execution, in all its infinity of intricate detail, of the scheme when approved.

"In all these five aspects, each of them essential, the league had an advantage over a system of specially convened conferences of governments or any other system or machinery existing in the world.

When the governments acted separately they left and lost over $100,000,000, and at the end the state of Austria was worse than ever. When they tried to deal with her in other ways by co-operative action—either at Allied councils or by other means—they failed to adopt any joint scheme. When they acted through the league—and so secured the application of a scheme at once co-operative and constructive—they not only kept her alive but placed her in a position in which she can continue to support herself and they did this without cost or loss to themselves or anyone.

Working Now in Hungary.

"The league," Sir Arthur adds, "is now doing the same work in Hungary. The position is the same. But the political difficulties are greater—and the beneficial results in the relations of Hungary and her neighbors are also greater. The league acts by unanimity of the countries interested; and the scheme could only be put into operation when not only France, Great Britian and Italy but also Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia, as well as Hungary herself, desired the league to act. This required the prior settlement of outstanding disputes between Hungary and her neighbors. This necessity gave an impetus and time limit for the settlement of those questions, which had long embittered international relations. Agreement was reached; and an improvement in political relations, and therefore greater political security was attained as an incidental consequence of the scheme of financial reconstruction."

One of the secrets of the league success, then, is that it forms a half-way house between neutral experts and government officials. This is hinted in the paragraph above about the Financial Committee. M. Avenol and Sir Edward Blackett, both high treasury officials of their respective governments, France and England, are both put on the league's financial committee. They have the advantage of knowing both the political views and the financial position of their governments. They also, however, have their personal pride as experts. As experts they are anxious to do a good job. In spite of being patriots they will also be anxious to help a good plan to go through. In this half-way house system is cultivated by the wherever possible and is one of the secrets of the league's success in problems where other international efforts have failed.

Four Other Instances.

Having described the league's reconstruction work in Austria, Sir Arthur says: "I now come to four considerable though less important instances of reconstruction in the Saar, Upper Silesia, Danzig and Greece.

"THE SAAR—The Saar is governed by a commission responsible to the league under conditions regulated in some detail by the peace treaty. I am here concerned only with the economic side of the league's administration. The many discussions in the Saar relate to political—none, or hardly any, to economic—grievances. In the latter respect, silence indicates content; as to political grievances, I must say just this: I do not contend that they are unreal. But if you examine the conditons of the peace treaty and consider the tension of feeling between Geneva and France during the last five years, you will, I think, agree that 90 per cent of any political dissatisfactions results inevitably from the fundamental conditions of the league's work and not from the way in which it has executed it.

"The Saar is a coal basin of some 700,000 inhabitants wedged between France and Germany. Its inhabitants are German in race, speech and sentiment. By the treaty the Government is placed in the hands of a commission responsible to the league, and not to the inhabitants. The mines, which employ the bulk of the population and are the basis of its whole economic life, are French property. Above all, the final political fate of the district is to be settled by a plebiscite after 15 years. This overhanging fate has inevitably made the whole district an arena for contending political forces; has inflamed the political sensibility of the inhabitants and has made the Saar reflect the political relations of the two large countries between which it is wedged. Under these circumstances no human institute could have so governed as to avoid a sense of political administration in detail.

Saar Finances Satisfactory.

"On the economic side it is perhaps sufficient to remark that the economic condition of the inhabitants has compared very favorably, indeed, with that of their neighbors across the frontier, and that under the great difficulty of a double currency as the basis of its finance and its economic life, the budgetary position and also the economic condition of the people have on the whole been satisfactory.

"UPPER SILESIA—Here again the League did not have a free hand. It accepted the mandate of settling a task in accordance with the provisions of the treaty. The treaty provided, in effect, that the Allies should draw a frontier line dividing Upper Silesia between Germany and Poland with regard to the wishes of the inhabitants as shown by the results of the plebiscite which was held before the League had any jurisdiction. This would have disappointed the legitimate expectations of many of the inhabitants as promised in the treaty and confirmed by the holding of the plebiscite. By itself it would have caused the greatest economic loss and confusion since a frontier line drawn in accordance with the plebiscite cut through a closely interdependent economic unit. For many months the Allies failed to reach agreement with the result that while they disputed production ceased and disorder with loss of life was frequent. Finally they handed the problem to the League. The League within a few weeks found a solution which gave effect to both factors mentioned in the treaty. It was not a compromise between French and British views, but a solution combining what was essential in each.

Strife in Silesia Ended.

"It drew the frontier along the line indicated by the plebiscite, but arranged an economic convention which prevented this frontier being such an economic barrier as would disrupt the economic life of the country. The convention on a basis of principle laid down by the League, was elaborated and signed by both Germans and Poles and ever since has been observed. Disorder was at once terminated and production was at once resumed.

"DANZIG—The peace treaty constituted Danzig a free city under the protection of the League of Nations with a provision securing to Poland the right of free access through it to the sea. The position of this little sea town, German in population but so intimately connected with her powerful neighbor Poland, has been a difficult one. A League high commissioner has throughout resided there to act as an arbitrater in the discussions which are bound to arise.

"The difficult task has on the whole been successfully carried out. One special problem that had not been anticipated soon arose. The Danzig currency was the German mark. Every new depreciation of the German mark affected Danzig just as it did Germany, with this important exception: whenever the German Government printed new marks the German inhabitants lost through depreciation, but the German Government at least had the use of the marks so printed for the purpose of its own expenses. The Danzig inhabitant suffered similarly through the depreciation and the Danzig Government suffered a corresponding loss through the diminished value of its taxation receipts. But it had no corresponding gain in the use of any portion of the marks whose printing had caused the depreciation. That is to say, Danzig had all the disadvantages, without the advantages, of inflation.

Danzig Currency Stabilized.

"This presented a problem which was partly technical and partly political, as it involved a detailed agreement with the Polish Government. The task, however, has been successfully accomplished in both respects. An agreement has been signed and a stable currency has been instituted and put into circulation through the League's financial committee.

"GREECE—The Greek refugees returning to Greece as the result of the late Greco-Turkish war amounted to more than 1,000,000. This represents the astonishing portion of one in five of the total population of the country. The absorption of this large proportion in a country never rich and exhausted by a succession of wars and a period of mobilization or actual fighting lasting not four years but some 14 years, was an impossible strain on the unaided resources of Greece.

"The League with great difficulty drew up a scheme for the settlement of these refugees in productive employment, mainly upon the land. The work was being carried out by a commission including an American chairman, Mr. Morgenthau, an Englishman appointed by the League and two Greek members.

Greek Relief Financed.

"The work is being financed by a loan secured partly by the land itself and partly upon the assigned revenues of the Greek Government. Two million pounds has already been raised through the Bank of England and with some millions raised in Greece itself will enable the League to continue until toward the end of this year. To complete it, however, a larger loan amounting to not more than 6,000,000 pounds will be required.

"The present scheme has been approved by the League's finance council and it contains careful safeguards for the prospective lenders. The situation will again be examined by the League in September, in which arrangements may be made to reduce the loan. In the meantime, either through the work of this commission or by the direct efforts of the Government or individuals concerned, more than one-half of the refugees are understood to be in productive employment."

For those who are not satisfied with what the League is and would like to speculate about the future, here is an extract from Sir Arthur Salter's recent book on "Allied Shipping Control," with added chapters on "International Administration."

Succeeds by Organization.

Sir Arthur read his extract to the members of his round table. It says: "The conception here presented is thus not that of a central super-government. It may be that this will come. It may be that the central organ of the League will in time itself become possessed of executive power, which, within a wide and widening sphere, will override the powers of national governments. It may even be that in future ages the world will find a single center of legislation and executive authority by a process of development similar to that by which provinces have been united into kingdoms and kingdoms into empires. Such direct power, however, if it comes, must be delegated, not usurped. It must grow by a natural process from the gradual union of the national authorities, and the increasing harmony of their policies. It must not appear suddenly as a new, an alien and trivial force. In the immediate future executive power can neither be seized from nor is it to any very important extent likely to be delegated by, the national governments. Looking at our problem, therefore, within the perhaps restricted range of an administrative vision, we must contemplate the League attaining its end through the more humble methods of organization."

New Mexico Woman, 122, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Carmelita Barreras, oldest woman in Albuquerque, and possibly in the State, died here today, at the age of 122. She was born in Socorro, N. M., in 1802, and lived there until 10 years ago, when she moved to Albuquerque.

LETTER REUNITES BROTHERS SEPARATED FOR 58 YEARS

Lost Trace of Each Other After Parting in Italy in 1866.

John Costa, of Keysport, N. J., and August Costa, of Edwardsville, brothers—were reunited last week after a separation of 58 years.

The last they had seen of each other previously was on the pier at Genoa, Italy, when August sailed for the United States in 1866. John followed seven years later, thinking the United States a small place, and discovered that he could not find his brother, who had come to St. Louis.

August afterward moved to Edwardsville. Some months ago he wrote to Italy, to see if he could find any trace of the family and by a coincidence the letter was delivered to John, who had gone back to Italy for a visit. He returned to America and the reunion followed.

Farmer Has Terrible Experience

"I don't think anybody ever suffered more pain than I have. Twice I was operated for gall stones, and a third operation was advised. A friend in Iowa wrote me how he was cured by taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I took a bottle on his advice with good results and have also taken the full course. My pains are all gone and I feel I am permanently cured." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. CITY WILL CELEBRATE CONSTITUTION ANNIVERSARY Organization Committee for Observance in Municipal Theater Sept. 21 Has Been formed.

Plans for St. Louis to celebrate the one hundred and thirty-seventh anniversary of the Constitution of the United States with patriotic services at the Municipal Theater, Sunday, Sept. 21, have been formulated by a committee called together by the American Citizenship Committee of the Community Council.

Although the anniversary falls on Sept. 17, it was decided to hold the program the following Sunday. A speaker of national importance will be invited for the occasion. Citizens will be asked to display the flag on both Sept. 17 and 21.

An organization committee for the celebration was selected at a meeting called in the office of Mayor Kiel. A hundred reprentatives of patriotic and civic bodies were present. Gen. E. J. Spencer was chosen permanent chairman and Col. H. D. McBride, State commander of the American Legion, was elected secretary. Gen. Spencer will name a special committee to make a complete program.

CHARGE SMUGGLING OF ARMS INTO BULGARIA BY RUSSIANS

Officials Assert 18 Tons of Munitions Were Seized in Single Shipment.

By the Associated Press.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 16.—A comprehensive system for smuggling into Bulgaria large quantities of munitions by Russians at Sebastopol, is alleged by Bulgarian officials to have been revealed in additional arrests of smugglers along the Black Sea coast. The authorities also are said to have discovered a secret system of communications between Russia and Bulgaria.

The Bulgarians, in an official announcement, stated that 18 tons of munitions had been seized in a single shipment and additional deposits of rapid fire guns, revolvers and automatic rifles had been located in a forest.

It was said the smugglers had arranged food supply stations and a transportation system to the ports of Aitos and Burgas. The Government declared most of those involved, including Bulgarian agrarians, communists and Russians, have been arrested.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CARRY MASONS TO PORTLAND, ME.

Missouri, Oklahoma, Indiana and Ohio Delegates to Go Together.

A special train, known as the "General Grand High Priest and General Grand Master Special," will depart from Union Station at 8:30 p. m., Sept. 5, carrying delegates to the Masonic convocation at Portland, Me., Sept. 8—12. The special will carry about 125 delegates from Missouri, Oklahoma and points in Indiana and Ohio.

The assemblage at Portland will be the thirty-ninth triennial convocation of the General Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Mason of the United States, and the fifteenth triennial assembly of the General Grand Council, Royal and Select Masters of the United States. Delegates going on the special will be guests of the Missourians, and will be given three-hour sightseeing trips at Niagara Falls and Boston. The Pullman Porters' Male Quartet will provide music en route.

WAYS TO SAVE LIFE IN STREETS TOPIC OF CONFERENCE HERE

John Brod, Jr., and Director Fisk to Speak at Dinner Tuesday.

Further efforts to curb traffic accidents in St. Louis will be discussed at a dinner, known as a Public Safety Conference, to be given Tuesday evening at the City Club by the St. Louis Safety Council. Statistics giving comparisons of fatalities for this year with other years, an accident spot map showing traffic accidents for the past three months, the time of day most accidents occur, and other data will be presented.

Among the speakers will be John Brod Jr., chairman of the Traffic Council, and Director of Streets and Sewers Fisk. Invitations have been mailed to more than a thousand persons. Anyone interested in traffic regulation is invited.

CHARLES E. MITCHELL PREDICTS BUSINESS BOOM THIS FALL

New York Bank President Sails for Europe With Gen. Bliss, Who Will Go to Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, and Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, retired, sailed today, the former to visit branches of his bank in Europe and the latter to sit as spectator at sessions of the League of Nations at Geneva.

Mitchell predicted that the United States would experience a considerable business boom this fall.

He declined to say whether his European visit was prompted by the possibility that his institution might be called upon to participate in financing proposed loans to Germany.

The great and constantly growing number of boys and girls who have earned FREE Janesville awards is a convincing demonstration that ANY eligible boy or girl may expect success.

THE FORMULA FOR SUCCESS IS:- ENROLL-HUSTLE-PERSEVERE!

The task is not easy, but the reward is a rich and worthy prize. No worthwhile goal is won by mere wishing, nor by indifferent effort. And the earned ownership of a Janesville (Ball-Bearing) Coaster Wagon is a commendable goal—a proud achievement.

The boys and girls pictured on this page now possess a coaster wagon prize of known merit—a nationally advertised wagon that dealers carry in the high-priced groups of their stocks—a dependable, sturdy and speedy wagon, backed by 40 years of manufacturing experience.

If you want a wagon you may be proud of—one that will increase your pride in ownership by its performance—and if you are willing to work for it, ENROLL TODAY

JANESVILLE SPECIFICATIONS SHOW THE REASONS FOR JANESVILLE SUPERIORITY

10-inch, double-disc wheels—bound together with steel rim instead of rivets or spot welding.
Oversize rubber tires—put on to STAY!
36x16-inch selected white ash body.
Curved pole irons make steering easy.

Patented Janesville ball bearings—all wearing parts heat treated and case hardened.
Heavy, selected white ash bolsters—strong and durable.
Extra-heavy hound and bolster braces.

½-inch cold rolled steel axles, fastened to the bolsters with metal clips instead of weakening the axle by drilling holes.
Beautifully finished—body and bolsters in natural wood; wheels in red enamel.

ROBBERS MISS $600 IN SALOON HOLDUP.

Fail to Look in Cash Register Which Contained $500—Proprietor Assaulted.

There was $500 in the cash register and $100 under the bar, when two armed robbers entered the saloon of Toney and Paul Doder, at 800 South Twelfth street, shortly after noon, yesterday.

They forced Toney Doder, who was on duty as bartender, and a customer into the ice box, and then began a fruitless search for the money, entirely overlooking the cash register as though it contained only small change.

At length one of the robbers opened the ice box and demanded Doder to step out and reveal the hiding place of the money. The saloonman protested he had no money. The robber then cursed him and hit him over the head with his revolver. The blow floored the saloonman, but he straightened up with a chair in his hands. The other robber then fired shots into the floor and ceiling, and both ran out empty-handed.

CHARGES GREEKS ARE DRIVING BULGARIANS FROM MACEDONIA

Bulgarian Minister Says Terrorism Has Caused 14,000 to Leave Homes and Crops.

By the Associated Press.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 16.—Bulgarian officials have announced that the number of their nationals shot by Greeks recently in the region north of Saloniki has been found by the mixed commission inquiry to have been 28 instead of 19.

Foreign Minister Kalloff said that Bulgaria was anxious to establish all the facts because the affair was typical of incidents which have caused bad feeling between Greece and Bulgaria and "indicated the method whereby the Greeks are terrorizing the Bulgarian population of Greek Macedonia, causing the people to leave their homes, ripening crops and all their possessions."

Permits are said to have been issued to 10,000 Greeks to leave Bulgaria in an exchange of populations but it is declared that not a single Greek has left while 14,000 Bulgarians have fled from Macedonia into Bulgaria.

U. S. MAKES AGREEMENT WITH GUATEMALA ON CUSTOMS

Each to Accord the Other the Most Favored Treatment on Commerce Charges.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The state department today made public an exchange of notes between the United States and Guatemala whereby each nation agrees to accord to the other "unconditional most favored nation treatment with respect to the customs duties and other changes affecting commerce."

The agreement however, provides that the understanding shall not relate to future commercial relations of the United States with and of its territories or Cuba or the Panama Canal Zone. Similarly it shall not interfere with Guatemalan relations with Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador. Furthermore the agreement shall not interfere with "restrictions of a sanitary character or designed to protect human, animal or plant life or regulations for the enforcement of police and revenue laws."

OFFICE BUILDING TO BE ERECTED ON GRAND AVENUE

Arrangements Completed for 12-Story Structure at Intersection With Franklin Avenue.

RAILROAD TO LEASE UPPER SEVEN FLOORS

Schoelch Designing and Engineering Company Will Finance Its Construction.

By Berry Moore.

Arrangements have been completed for the erection of a 12-story office building at the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Franklin avenue. Contracts have been made in this connection with the Schoelch Designing & Engineering Co., with offices in the Syndicate Trust Building, which is to finance the project.

Construction is to be launched with the conclusion of negotiations through which a trunk line is to acquire a long lease of the upper seven floors of the building. Officials of the Schoelch company refuse to disclose the identity of the railroad.

The railroads have been in urgent need of office space in St. Louis, owing to the fact that office building construction here has been virtually suspended since before the war, with the result that there is a dearth of office space, especially that available for quarters on a large scale. As a matter of fact, virtually all the space in the modern downtown structures is almost 100 per cent occupied.

Annual Rental of $12,000.

The Schoelch company will have a proprietary interest in the building, which will have an extensive frontage on Grand boulevard. The site, which is owned by the Central Y. M. C. A., was originally acquired under a 99-year lease by Joseph E. Truitt, who afterward obtained an option to purchase. The lease provides for an annual net rental of $12,000, payable $3000 quarterly, while the price to be paid for the site under the option is $170,000. Both transactions were handled by the Mercantile Trust Co., in conjunction with the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co.

More than $50,000 has already been paid in rentals under the 99 year lease, pending the closing of the option still in effect. Truitt has disposed of his interest in the corner, it is understood. Plans for the remainder of the building, including the first floor, are in abeyance, pending negotiations with other interests for space in the building. Cost, exclusive of the site, will exceed $1,000,000.

Offices on the scale proposed by the railroad will doubtless prove a valuable acquisition to Grand boulevard, as giving diversification to this thoroughfare hitherto not anticipated.

Prior to the Schoelch Company's connection with the enterprise, plans were made by H. W. Kirchner, architect, for an office building for the medical profession for this site, to be known as the Grand-Franklin Building. The Schoelch Company also is evolving plans for an apartment hotel structure for a site on the south side of Washington boulevard, just west of Grand boulevard, to be erected by a client.

Realty Market Strong.

The week in realty closed with an unusual number of offers for large properties. Negotiations are practically concluded for several big holdings in the central business area and in the district to the west of Grand boulevard. The realty situation from an investment and speculative viewpoint reflects notable strength.

The most notable deal on the tapis involves control of a downtown building, recently acquired by its holder, who has remodeled it at a large outlay, with the result that it is on a much higher investment basis than formerly. Aside from its intrinsic worth the building has a speculative value owing to the fact that it is on a thoroughfare destined to rank with the most important in the city. Thus it is commanding

The realty situation from an investment and speculative viewpoint reflects notable strength.

The most notable deal on the tapis involves control of a downtown building, recently acquired by a holder, who has remodeled it at a large outlay, with the result that it is on a much higher investment basis than formerly. Aside from its intrinsic worth the building has a speculative value owing to the fact that it is on a thoroughfare destined to rank with the most important in the city. Thus it is commanding the attention of investors and speculators alike.

The deal for the building in question is contingent upon the successful outcome of negotiations on the part of the prospective purchase for a loan of $1,000,000 in the form of a first deed of trust on the building, subject to which the purchase is to be made. The building is built on a leasehold which does not figure in the deal, it is understood. Exclusive of the site, however, the building is regarded as ample security for the proposed $1,000,000 loan.

An outside wholesale house has concluded negotiations through the Mulin-Walters Realty Co. for a large building on Washington avenue. Identity of the concern, which it is said will be a valuable acquisition for this thoroughfare, is withheld at this time for business reasons.

9TH AND MORGAN CORNER SOLD

The southeast corner of Ninth and Morgan streets has been purchased by Philip Jackman. The price was not announced.

Barngrove & Specht, with offices on the ground floor of the Calumet Building, effected the transaction, which was made on behalf of R. Vernon Clark and Charles E. Richardson.

The property which consists of 10 business rooms, occupied largely by jobbing houses, has been sold twice recently through Barngrove & Specht.

This firm also announces sale of a vacant lot on the northwest corner of Marcus avenue and Hammet place to Henry Rieansnider for the account of Robert B. Snow, trustee.

BEN ALTHEIMER'S NEW HOME CLASSIC IN DESIGN

The new residence of Ben Altheimer, president of the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co., at 7106 Maryland avenue, is one of the most attractive in Maryland terrace.

It is in white stucco, with apple green trimmings and red tile roof. The first floor comprises ten rooms, reception hall, large living room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen, pantry, icebox room and lavatory. The second floor consists of three splendid bedrooms, lounge, sunroom and tile bath. Third floor two rooms and tile bath.

The house is finished throughout with hardwood floors and painted ivory. The walls and ceiling are canvassed and oiled. The house is hot-water heated and metal weatherstripped throughout. There is a garage for three cars.

The lot is 10) by 185 feet, with side drive.

BARTH COMPANY COMPLETES 4 ROBERT AV. BUNGALOWS

The Barth Building and Real Estate Co. has just completed five bungalows at 4940 to 4952 Robert avenue, that are attracting considerable attention.

The Barth Building and Real Estate Co., formerly known as the Mederacke-Barth Real Estate and Investmen ,Co. has operated extensively in both the subdivision and building fields. The change in the name was made necessary by the retirement of Richard Mederacke, but with this exception the entire organization remained intact.

Garage for 1250 Autos Will Occupy Whole Block

Construction Will Begin at Once; Top Floor Will Be Bonded Storage for Dealers.

Construction is to begin at once on the large garage designed by the Eighteenth Street Realty Co., of which Isaac H. Lionberger is president, for the vacant block between Seventeenth and Eighteenth and Pine and Chestnut streets. Plans for the structure have been made by Klipstein & Rathmann, architects, who estimate the cost in excess of $500,000. Construction will be under the direct supervision of Jack Lionberger.

The building will be of reinforced concrete construction throughout of the flat slab type of floor construction, with the exterior walls faced with dark red brick and terra cotta. Steel sash will be used throughout. The Eighteenth street frontage will comprise stores and the corners of the building public filling stations.

Points of Entrance.

Owing to the slope of the property, entrances are provided at Seventeenth and Pine, on Chestnut street, just east of Eighteenth street, at Eighteenth and Pine and at Seventeenth and Chestnut streets, providing four points of egress and ingress to the building. Intercommunication between floors will be provided for by D'Huney motor ramps, wide enough to accommodate two cars abreast. These ramps will be located in a ramp tower on the Pine street side midway between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets.

The administration offices of the building will be at the Eighteenth street entrances, and here will be a large concurse for the gathering of cars as they enter and leave the building. The south stores on Eighteenth street will face this concourse, and are to be used for accessories. The top floor of the garage building will be arranged as a bonded warehouse for the storage of dealers' cars, while the floor immediately below this will provide for truck storage, being of such capacity and strength to accommodate all makes of trucks, large and small. The remaining two floors are for general day and night storage of automobiles.

Sprinkler System.

The building will be protected with an automatic sprinkler system throughout, and heated by steam. Automobile washers will be provided on every floor and patrons may have their cars washed and oiled.

The building will have a combined floor area of 266,000 square feet and will accommodate 1250 cars.

Isaac H. Lionberger and John L. Lionberger constitute the Eighteenth Street Realty Co., which is to erect the building, and which will own it in its entirety. Contracts call for the completion of the building March 15, 1925.

MILLINERY FIRM GETS NEW QUARTERS

Will Occupy Eighth Floor of Rosenthal - Sloan Building.

Goldman-O'Brien-Nassauer Mfg. Co., located at 817-19-21 Washington boulevard, for nine years, have closed a long term lease on the eighth floor of the Rosenthal-Sloan Building, Southwest corner of Seventeenth street and Washington boulevard.

The structure known as one of the finest loft buildings in St. Louis, fronts 207 feet on Washington and St. Charles sts., and 150 feet on Seventeenth street, and contains 31,000 square feet of rentable area on each floor.

Robert Nassauer stated that fall orders will keep their plant busy, and make it impossible to move to their new location before the first of December.

The company, pioneers in their particular line in this city, manufacturers ladies' trimmed hats, and has a sales organization covering the entire United States. According to millinery manufacturers, St. Louis is now recognized as the largest trimmed hat market in the West.

The officers of the company are Robert Nassauer, president; Milton Goldman, vice-president, and Edward J. O'Brien, secretary. Isaac T. Cook & Co., represented all parties in negotiating this lease.

IMPORTING COMPANY LEASES BUILDING IN WEST END

Bigley Firm to Occupy Storeroom at Boyle and Maryland Avenues Oct. 1.

LeGrand Jones, Inc., has leased for a team of years, for Mrs. R. Pollock, a store room and building to the Bigley Importing Co., Inc., importers, cleaners and manufacturers of lace curtains linens, blankets, etc., and which has been located at Boyle and Maryland avenues for 21 years. They are the successors of the original company started in St. Louis some 40 years ago.

The Bigley Importing Co. has found it necessary to get larger quarters where it will be located to better serve their retail trade of St. Louis as well as that throughout the United States, and have therefore leased a store at 5711 Delmar boulevard, in which their showroom, salesroom and office will be located, and the large building in the rear will be used for the manufacturing of their special handmande lace curtains, etc., and also their cleaning department of lace curtains, linens, etc.

Mr. G. R. Mathieu, president of the company, manager of the Bigley Importing Co., for the last 15 years, states they will occupy it on or about Oct. 1.

RETREAT HOUSE TO BE BUILT AT WHITE HOUSE

Construction of Building to Replace Old Structure to Start Next Week.

Construction work on the new Retreat house of the Laymen's Retreat League, to be erected at White House, Mo., about 4 miles south of Jefferson Barracks on the Mississippi River, will begin next week.

This building will replace the old Retreat House which was destroyed by fire a year ago and will occupy the same site on a promontory in the center of [illegible] acres of park and woodland. This place was laid out by a landscape gardener 10 years ago and is considered one of the beauty spots of St. Louis County.

The building will be one of a group of similar type and material o be erecetd later. On the ground floor a parlor, a lobby and a spacious dining hall look out upon a sheltered loggia overlooking the Mississippi River. Above are the comfortable lounge with its fireplace and the library. The west wing contains the kitchen, storeroom and pantries, with the Fathers' residence on the second floor.

The building will be under roof, it is hoped, by Christmas, and will be ready for occupancy by the first of May, in time for the beginning of the fourth year of the White House retreats.

Soon after the completion of the building it is planned to begin the erection of a memorial chapel, the gift of one of the members of the Retreat League.

SUBURB'N PROP'Y FOR SALE

Webster Groves

YOU WILL ENJOY LIVING HERE.

Because of what Webster Groves has to offer in better living conditions, expressed in beautiful homes and charming gardens, its healthful surroundings and opportunities for safeguarded play for children, its recreational opportunities, its desirable social character, this distinctive residential city is today the home of some of the leading commercial and professional men of St. Louis, who have found here the solution to what is a pressing and serious problem to many other families in the large city.

Webster has every comfort, convenience and facility of the city, plus an environment and community spirit that means neighborliness and contentment. Here are beautiful homes, wide, smooth lawns and park-like streets to provide that healthful freedom in surroundings and restful outlook, which the city dweller vainly longs for in the usual city block, with its outlook on unrelieved paved streets and lack of green things.

In this pleasant and inviting community we have houses for sale that will appeal to every home-lover. An investment here will repay you many times over in health and happiness. Tell us your requirements and we will find a house to please you. Our organization will carefully and efficiently handle every detail of your transaction.

MAJESTIC HOMES

THE BARRIER TO A HOME OF YOUR OWN IS REMOVED

NO DOWN PAYMENT NECESSARY

You can now buy a Majestic Home by dividing the entire purchase price into monthly payments of but little more than rent would be for the same home.

The plan is possible because the Majestic Homes Corporation, devoting itself entirely to the building of fine homes, by its size, its quantity plan of building and its financial resources is capable of offering well-built, well-located homes without a penalty for liberal terms.

The plan is made to fit the needs and conveniences of substantial citizens who desire and deserve a home of their own. The usually required down payment has been standing in their way, maybe in your way, maybe there has not been time enough for you to acquire a down payment fund, maybe circumstances have not permitted it, maybe you have saved enough but need it for other purposes, or have it in investments you do not care to disturb. Now the traditional barrier is down. The home you can afford to rent you can afford to buy.

See the Majestic Communities and four furnished homes today—or tonight.

That you may better realize what life in a Majestic home will mean to you two of the Majestic Homes at Gannondale (University City) and two at Los Angeles (St. Louis) have been completely furnished.

GANNONDALE

California

LIVE BETTER and easier on a small farm in Winterless California. You can work a small farm with less capital investment and in California you can work outdoors all the year. A small one-family farm, cutting out high labor costs, insures success. San Joaquin Valley and Southern California offer great opportunities for the man of moderate means who wishes to get a home of his own. California is the richest State per capita in the U. S. A. Most of this wealth comes from the soil. No winter handicaps. Illustrated folders descriptive of California mailed on request. C. L. ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

ANXIOUS.—Consult the Board of Education.

L. J. S.—See answer to "Thankful," in the Post-Dispatch of Aug. 9.

STUMPED.—You never can tell what a college boy will put on his pennant.

A GROPING MIND—Consult the Poetry Magazine, 543 Cass street, Chicago, Ill., for the information.

GERALDINE—The 1913 nickel in question does not command a premium.

READER — Combine cottage cheese with caraway seeds to make caraway cheese.

W. H. C.—Write to the Street Car Men's Association for the number that won the automobile at their picnic.

M. J.—See Matthew, thirteenth chapter, fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth verses, for the information regarding the family of Christ.

J. S.—Major Levy is conducting the St. Louis Fashion Pageant this year. Address him at 1531 Washington avenue, St. Louis.

REGULAR READER—The Manchester street car covers 17.59 miles on a round trip, while the Broadway only covers 14.46.

L. R. S.—There are many studios where moving picture acting is taught. Consult the various moving picture magazines.

BLANKIE DEE.—Address Gloria Swanson, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, at Hollywood, Cal.

P.-D. READER. — Consult the classified section of the telephone directory for addresses of the concerns you inquire about.

M. D. — The Department of Streets of the City of St. Louis states that it has no record of the street you mention.

FLOYD P.—We are unable to quote you a price on the coin since you have not specified the denomination.

ANXIOUS—The public school system originated in Massachusetts and Connecticut shortly after the settlement of those states.

KINLOCK, MO.—The exchange in question is listed in the city directory under "Art Needlework." There are many other "art goods" shops listed also.

NATTIE—Rug weavers are listed in the classified section of the telephone directory. Inquire among them regarding the making of the rag and fluff rugs.

F. G.—You can obtain the information by consulting the dealers listed in the classified section of the telephone directory under "Picture Frames and Mouldings."

DON'T KNOW.—We suggest including in your wardrobe for your trip to California this fall a light suit, a dark silk dress and a fall coat for night wear.

T. H.—Apply to the Secretary of the Civil Service Commission, at the Old Customs House, Third and Olive streets, concerning the examinations.

Q. D. Q. — Consult the local chapter of the organization as to the initiation fees. Inquire at the art stores for a copy of the painting.

LEON—It would be impossible for us to say to what extent copper must be hardened for one to obtain a patent. Write to the Patent Office, Washington, D. C., for the information.

G. L. S.—The half dime or five cent silver piece dated 1857 is worth from 5c to 10c; the one dated 1853 with or without arrows commands the same premium as the one dated 1857.

MUSICAL—Call the theater where the pictures were shown for the information. The picture in question had its first showing in St. Louis at the American Theater.

POST-DISPATCH READER—You do not specify what you desire to oxidize, whether it be aluminum, copper, brass. Write again, being more specific. (2) You are supposed to breathe through your nose and not your mouth while swimming.

INQUIRER—Slavery is of a prehistoric origin, but was commercialized by the Romans, some of whom had as many as 10,000 slaves. In 1834, the British Colonies emancipated nearly 800,000 slaves, and the Civil War wiped slavery out of the United States. It does not now exist in any civilized nation.

READER—Iron Mountain is a famous pile of dirt and rock in the Missouri Ozarks, 90 miles southwest of St. Louis. The iron ore taken from its vast slabs of black porphyry made millionaires of the men who were there first, back in the sixties. The old company, owned by the Chouteau, Harrison, Valle and Moffit estates of St. Louis, sold Iron Mountain in 1904 for $60,000 to J. W. Darst, a St. Louis realty dealer, representing a syndicate. Darst then is reported to have sold it to W. H. Smollinger of Galesburg, Ill., for $100,000. It changed hands several times during the period from 1904 to 1919, and Leonard A. Busby is said to have paid $150,000 for the tract.

X. Y. Z.—A woman never rises from her seat when a young man is presented to her. (2) When introducing one person to a group of persons (at a small luncheon) you would say, "Mrs. King, do you know Mrs. Jones?" Mrs. King being close at hand (usually but not necessarily) rises, shakes hands with Mrs. Jones and sits down again. If Mrs. King is an elderly lady, and Mrs. Jones a young one, Mrs. King merely extends her hand and does not rise. Having said "Mrs. Jones" once, you do not repeat it immediately, but turning to the other lady sitting near you, you say, "Mrs. ———," then you look across the room and continue, "Mrs. ———, Miss B——, and the others, if they are young, they rise and shake hands and if not they just bow.

READER—The Pyramids were supposed to have been constructed between the fifth and twelfth dynasties in Middle Egypt, and not to have been used for tombs. They are built upon a square base with sides facing the points of the compass, and the earlier pyramids were constructed or horizontal layers of rought blocks fastened together with mortar. In the center of the pyramid, near the base, was built a chamber reached by a passage from the north side. It is said that some of them contain emblems or symbols, which are now used in masonry. Whether or not there were masons at the time they were built, has not yet been discovered. Many of the stones weigh as much as 30 tons each, and no one has yet been able to ascertain the power used for their transmission.

CARD OF THANKS

We hereby wish to extend our sincere thanks to all our relatives and friends for their kindess and sympathy shown us during our sad bereavement in the loss of our brother, brother-in-law and uncle, and the Rev. Livingood and undertaker, Kron, for their efficient services.
MRS. H. W. WAHLBRINK, MR. ED KEPPEL AND MR. AL KEPPEL.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to Rev. Father Finan of the Lady of the Visitation Church, St. Johns, for his consoling talk; to our relatives and friends for expressions of sympathy and many beautiful floral offerings tendered in our sad time caused by our dear husband's and father's (Charles Weber's) death, Aug. 2, 1924.
MRS. DORA WEBER AND DAUGHTER.

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives and many friends for the kindness and sympathy shown us in our sad bereavement, in the loss of my dear husband oud our dear father, Henry Nolte. We especially thank Pastor Wickham, pallbearers, the employes of the Berning Floral Co., Woodward & Tiernan, Biederwieden Undertaking Co., for their kind and efficient service.
MRS. H. NOLTE AND FAMILY.

I wish to express my heartfelt thanks and appreciation to my many kind relatives and friends for their kind consideration and sympathy shown me in my sad bereavement in the loss of my dearly beloved husband, James T. Newhouse, and for the beautiful floral offerings. I wish to especially express my thanks to Officer James Mateer, Capt. and Mrs. King of the Salvation Army, and the Kron Undertaking Co. for their kindness.
MRS. EFFIE NEWHOUSE.

To all our relatives and friends I wish to extend my sincerest thanks for their kind expressions of sympathy and the beautiful floral offerings, tendered us in the time of sadness caused by the death of my beloved husband, Mr. Henry W. Beermann. Especially do we thank the Rev. W. Heys for his prayers and benediction, the Irwin Lodge, the old veterans of the Ransom Post, the Druids Lodge, and W. Schumacher, undertaker, for his efficient and friendly service.
MRS. H. W. BEERMANN.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown us in our sad bereavement in the loss of my dear wife and our dear mother, mother-in-law, grandmother and sister, Helena Schneider. We especially thank the Rev. Mgr. Holweck and his assistants; the pallbearers, the St. Francis de Sales Married Ladies' Society, the Members of the Third Order and for the many beautiful floral offerings.
THE BEREAVED HUSBAND, CHARLES SCHNEIDER SCR., AND FAMILY.

In loving memory of Walter Leonard, died Aug. 18, 1917. Gone but not forgotten. Sadly missed by his wife, Freda; sons, George and William.

In sad and loving remembrance of my beloved son, Harry E. Perrine, who passed away one year ago today, Aug. 16, 1923.
BEREAVED MOTHER.

First anniversary high mass, in memory of Annie Gibbons, Aug. 19, 7 a. m., Rock Church. Friends invited.
MYLES F. GIBBONS, Husband.

In memory of my darling husband, Edward W. Brownfield, who died 3 years ago, Aug. 16, 1921. Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving memory of Celia M. Ely (nee Schnyder), who died Aug. 18, 1914.
Ten long years have elapsed since you were taken from us, but your memory will always remain. Sadly missed by HUSBAND, MOTHER AND BROTHER.

In memory of our dear papa, John Howard, who departed this life, Aug. 19, 1920.
God bade His angels call him home
He knew his life's work was well done.
Gone but not forgotten by his children,
ROSE FARRELL, MAMIE JOHN HOWARD, JOE NELLIE LICHTENSTEIN.

In loving remembrance of my beloved husband, William Christmann, who died Aug. 17, 1923:
The month of August again is here,
To us the saddest of the year,
Because the Good Lord, whom we fear,
Saw fit to take our father dear.
Sadly missed by his WIFE AND SON. (c)

In loving memory of dear husband and father, John McManus, who departed from this life Aug. 16, 1923.
A precious one from us has gone,
The voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

Gone, dear Rowena Eckworth,
Gone forever, how we miss your loving face;
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade,
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER AND BROTHERS
And all those who loved her.
In loving memory of our dear daughter, who departed this life Aug. 16, 1923. (c)

In loving memory of Mary Edwards, who departed this life Aug. 16, 1923:
A loving wife and mother, true and kind;
No friend on earth like her will find.
God called her home; it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best;
God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear wife, Nora Wagner, who departed this life one year ago, Aug. 18, 1923.
She bade no one a last farewell,
She said good-by to none;
Her loving heart has ceased to beat;
Before I knew it she had gone.
And when I lost you, my darling wife,
I lost my dearest pal,
I love you, and I miss you and forever shall.
Sadly missed by husband,
PHIL WAGNER. (c)

In loving memory of our darling baby Sylvia Blives, who departed this life one year ago, Aug. 13, 1923.
Days of sadness often come over us,
Tears in silence often flow.
Love shall always keep you near us
Though you left one year ago.
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade.
Our loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by MOTHER, FATHER, BROTHER, CLEMMIE and those who loved her. (c)

In loving memory of Ollie Ruschenberg, who was killed Aug. 18, 1921.
Just three years ago you left us; how we miss you, Ollie dear;
It is sad that one we cherished should be taken from our home,
But the joys that do not perish live in memory alone.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHER.

In memory of our beloved daughter and sister, Bernice Owens, who died Aug. 20, 1922:
When our journey here is done,
And we step out to follow on
Through the great heavy mantled door,
Which leads to rest forevermore,
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade,
Loving hearts shall always linger
'Round the grave where Bernice is laid.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHERS AND SISTER.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother and wife, Mrs. Chas. Masters, who departed this life Aug. 19, 1923.
Although a year its veil has drawn
Her voice still lingers in our ears,
Her face in memory bright appears,
And love softens the grief our hearts have borne.
Upright and just in all her ways,
Faithful and honest to the end of her days,
Forgotten to the world by some, she may be,
But dear to our hearts and memory she will always be.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTER AND HUSBAND.

In loving memory of my dear husband, W. W. Harrison, who departed this life one year ago, Aug. 14, 1923:
We saw your suffer
And heard you sigh;
Could do nothing,
But sit and cry.
We saw you sinking,
Hour by hour,
Yet we did all
Within our power.
But now you calmly sleep the past
While our sorrow for you will always last.
Sadly missed by
HIS WIFE, CHILDREN AND AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

Truth in Advertising

The value of advertising is in direct ratio to the amount of READER-CONFIDENCE it possesses. That is entirely founded on its quality of TRUTH.

The National Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers and the Better Business Bureau and the Advertising Club of St. Louis, in all of which the Post-Dispatch holds membership, aim to eliminate fraudulent and misleading advertising. This newspaper will appreciate having its attention called to any advertisement which does not conform to the highest standards of honesty.

The Subdivision Business Offers Great Possibilities to Salesmen.

St. Louis is fast becoming one of the big cities of the country. Look at the $8,000,000 telephone building, the tremendous Cahokia power plant, the $88,000,000 being spent to make over the city.

There is now a bigger opportunity than ever for a big, growing, well-financed subdivision company, dealing exclusively in close-in property, putting in modern street improvements, and in addition, building the right type of houses on each street or in each block.

We have developed 19 of the city's best properties, including Maryland Terrace, Vinita Park, Vinita Terrace, [illegible] Forest, Alta-Dena, University Terrace, City View, etc.

We are now developing and building Alta-Dena where more than 50 artistic homes, including the "Home Supreme," will soon be erected.

We are also putting through our biggest and most successful apartment lot subdivision, Pershing Heights. It is another "Delmar Garden" apartment house district.

We believe in the subdivision business. We are going to grow just as St. Louis grows, because we are rendering a real service, helping to build the city.

It may be just the business for you. We help you learn the business through our special sales talks.

If you are not getting ahead in a big way where you are, see us.

RELIABLE USED CARS

WHEN BUYING A USED CAR, THINK OF THESE POINTS:

1. Is the dealer responsible?
2. Does he have a reputation to maintain that will insure you honest values?
3. Are the cars he sells in mechanical condition and reliable?
4. Can his word and guarantee be relied upon?

The Newell Motor Car Co. is an established concern and can answer the above questions positively. The cost of their cars is abnormally low. See our display before you buy—Tourings, Coupes, Sedans, Roadsters. Nearly all makes and models at greatly reduced prices.

"And now she's so slender!"

"Did you ever see such a change in any one? Grace used to be positively stout. Now she's one of the smartest dressed women I know. She must have done something to regain her youthful figure."

She did do something. Realizing that her success and charm depended upon a slender silhouette, she used Marmola Tablets.

Marmola Tablets are the pleasant way to reduce. Without diets or exercises, you can regain your slender healthy figure again.

Thousands of men and women each year regain slender figures this way. So can you.

Marmola Tablets are one dollar a box at all drug stores or in a plain wrapper, postpaid, from the Marmola Co., 1700 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Try them.

A scout master to his troop

"Now Boys, mind and muscle must work in harmony to produce a good Scout. I think Shredded Wheat is the ideal food for a Scout, because it has in it every element needed to build the perfect body, and it is so easily digested. Two Biscuits for breakfast and a few Triscuits in your kit for the long hike and you are ready for the work of a Scout.

"But a Scout must build something else besides a perfect body—he must have an active alert mind. Show me a right-minded boy who loves the outdoor life and is loyal to law and faithful to friends, and I will show you a lad that is properly fed. That's why I recommend SHREDDED WHEAT.

"A boy, to be a successful Boy Scout, must be healthy, robust and wholesome-minded. Such boys are made out of pure air, rational exercise and simple, nourishing food. You can't build husky lads out of puddings, pies or potatoes."

Have you tasted our new Triscuit? It is a real whole wheat cracker, delicious, toasted, with butter or soft cheese. It is the whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded, pressed into a cracker and baked in electric ovens.

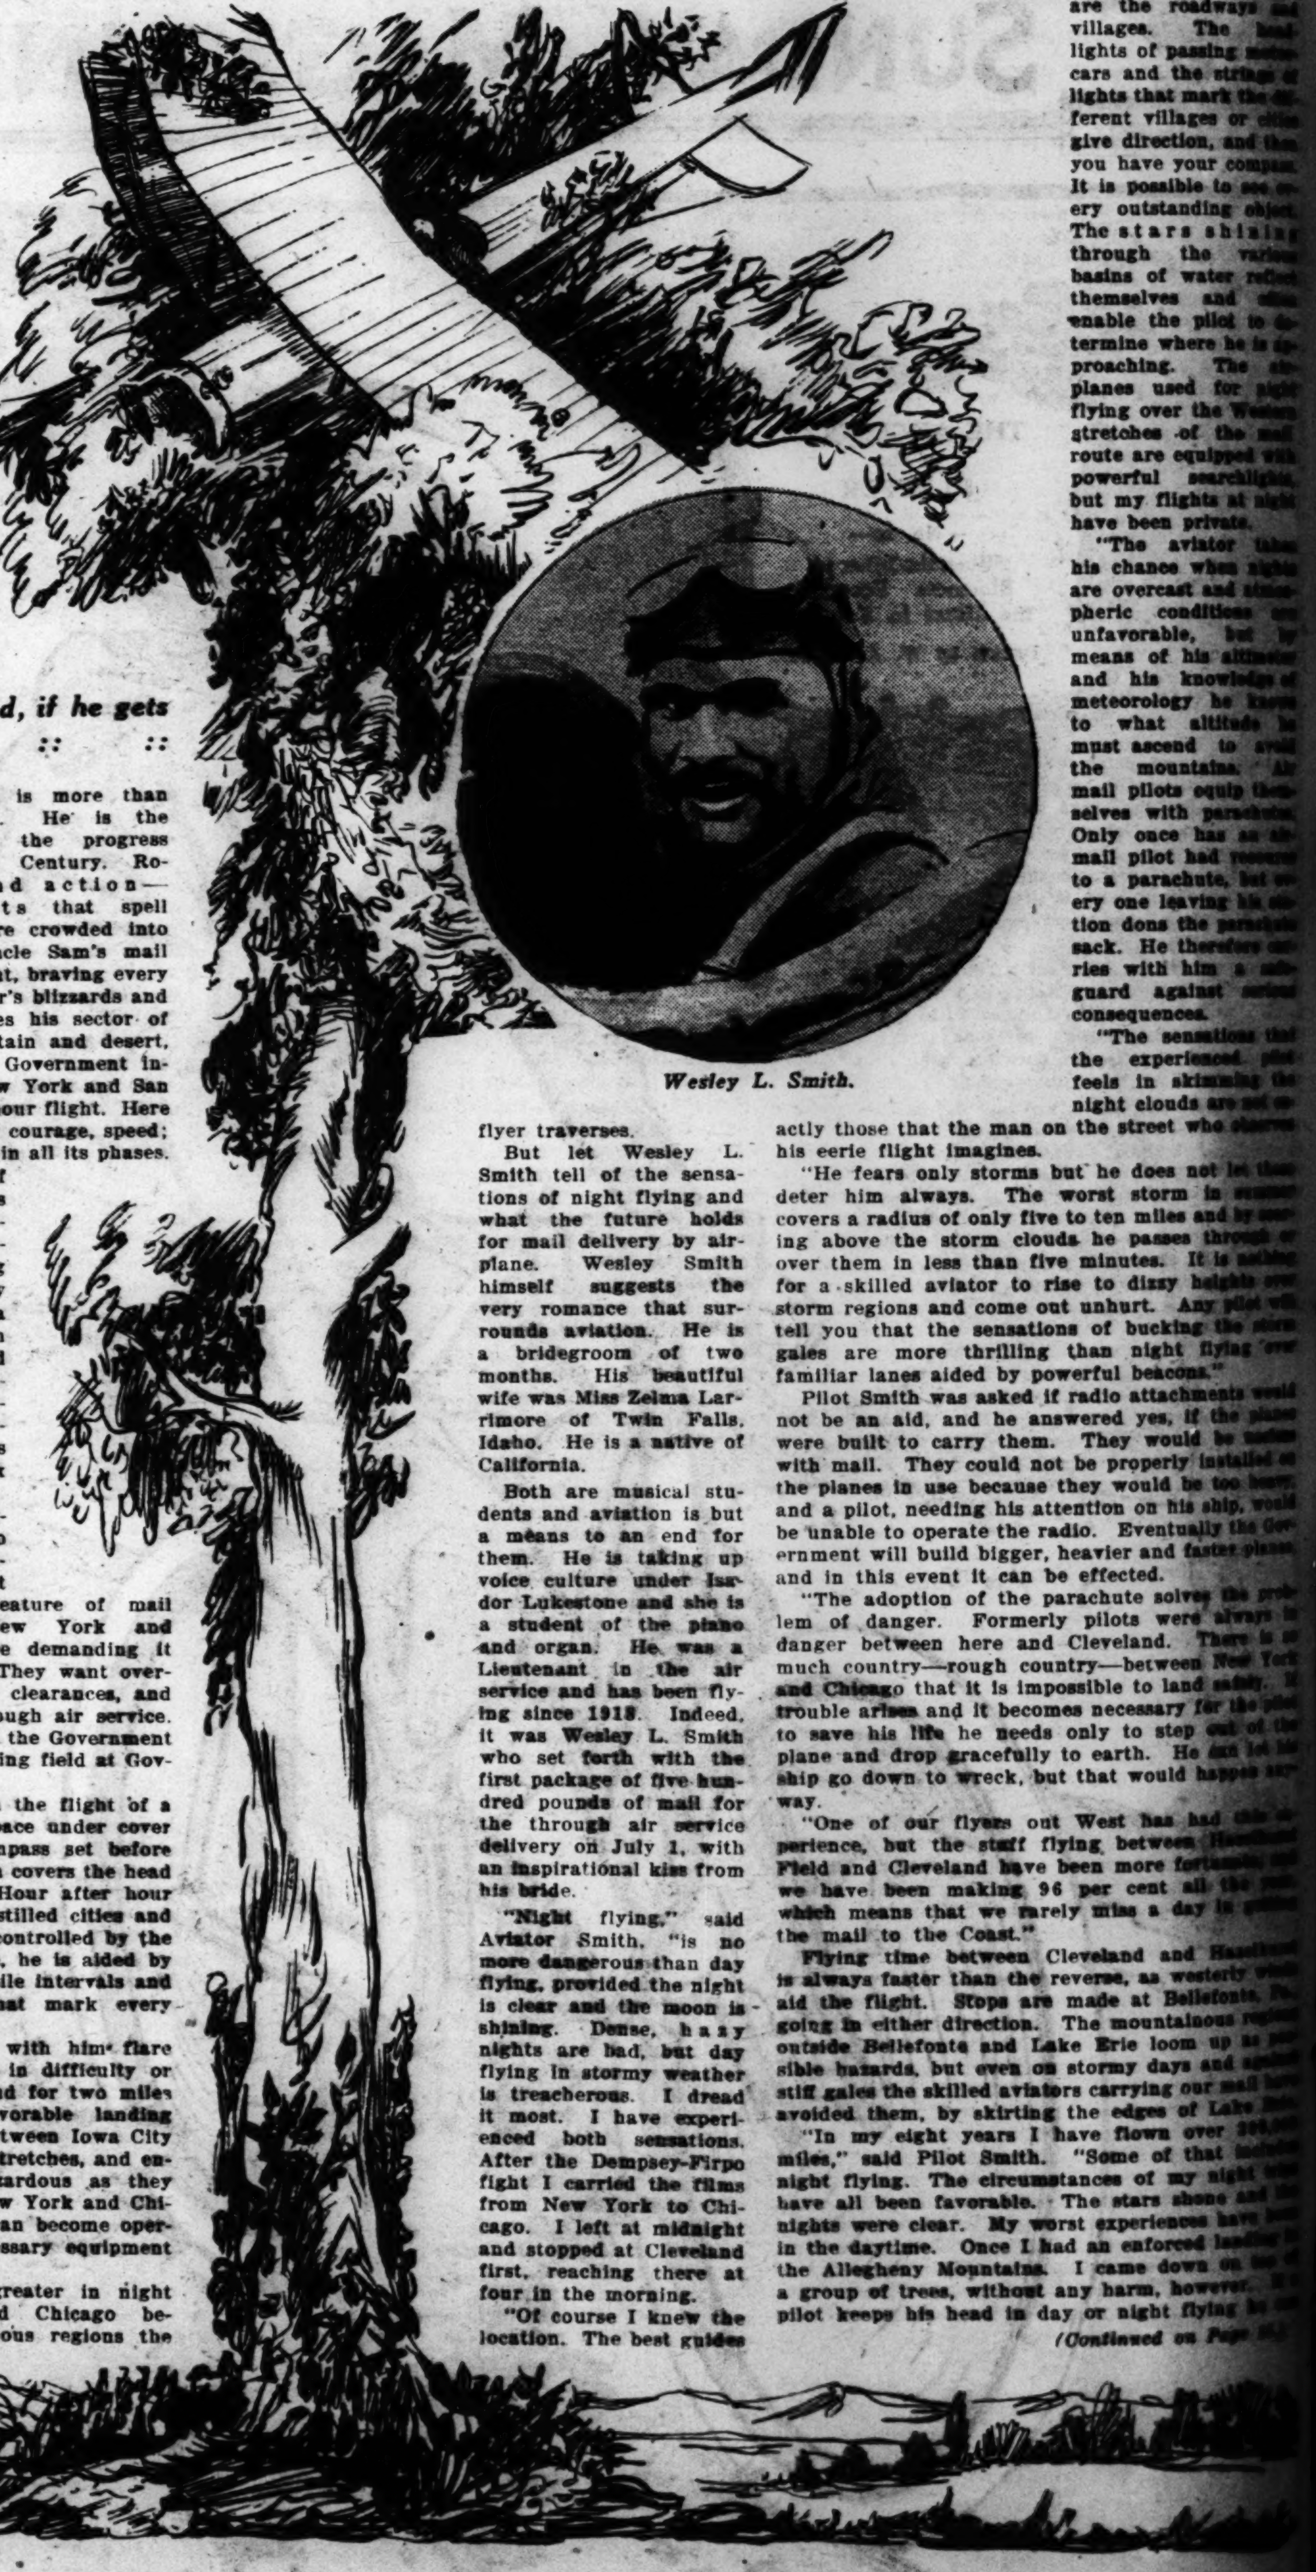
Flying at Night With the Air Mail

Wesley L. Smith, veteran aviator, says it is no more dangerous than day flying, if the weather is clear and the moon shining — More thrills in bucking a storm gale by day than in following familiar lanes with aid of powerful beacons — Every mail pilot dons parachute sack when he departs, and the night flyer also carries flare lights which will illumine the land for two miles around, if he gets into difficulty :: :: ::



Wesley L. Smith.

WESLEY L. SMITH is more than a flying mailman. He is the personification of the progress of the Twentieth Century. Romance, skill and action—three elements that spell out a drama — are crowded into his everyday life. He carries Uncle Sam's mail across the continent by day and night, braving every conceivable hazard. Through winter's blizzards and summer's terrific storms he bridges his sector of the three thousand miles of mountain and desert, lakes and rivers which, since the Government inaugurated night flying between New York and San Francisco, is covered in a thirty-six-hour flight. Here are romance, skill and action; duty, courage, speed; adventure, determination and pluck in all its phases.

Night flying had been spoken of for a long time. Intrepid aviators have from time to time flown limited distances, but under the recent order from Washington night flying has been inaugurated in fact. Every night, planes blaze their way over a big portion of the great Western stretches between Iowa City and North Platte. When the days become shorter the night flying territory will be lengthened so that during the sere winter months, flights will be between Cleveland and Rock Springs.

Under the orders of the Postmaster General night flights do not concern the aviators at Hazelhurst Field, Garden City, but ere long it will be a chief feature of mail delivery by plane between New York and Chicago. Big banking houses are demanding it because the trains are too slow. They want overnight deliveries for early morning clearances, and this can be accomplished only through air service. It is coming soon, and when it does the Government will no doubt install its airmail flying field at Governor's Island.

It is easy to conjure romance in the flight of a speeding plane hurtling through space under cover of darkness, guided solely by compass set before eyes that peer out of a helmet which covers the head and face of the skilled aviator. Hour after hour passes, but onward over the sleep-stilled cities and hamlets the plane speeds its way, controlled by the hand of the trained aviator. True, he is aided by beacon lights that shine at three-mile intervals and brilliant revolving searchlights that mark every twenty-fifth mile.

Again, the night flyer carries with him flare lights which he drops to earth if in difficulty or lost. These flares illumine the land for two miles around, disclosing the most favorable landing places. Your night flyer plying between Iowa City and North Platt is favored by flat stretches, and enforced landings are not so hazardous as they might be over a course between New York and Chicago. But before the latter plan can become operative science must create the necessary equipment for safe travel.

The elements of danger are greater in night flights between New York and Chicago because of the cities and mountainous regions the flyer traverses.

But let Wesley L. Smith tell of the sensations of night flying and what the future holds for mail delivery by airplane. Wesley Smith himself suggests the very romance that surrounds aviation. He is a bridegroom of two months. His beautiful wife was Miss Zelma Larrimore of Twin Falls, Idaho. He is a native of California.

Both are musical students and aviation is but a means to an end for them. He is taking up voice culture under Isador Lukestone and she is a student of the piano and organ. He was a Lieutenant in the air service and has been flying since 1918. Indeed, it was Wesley L. Smith who set forth with the first package of five hundred pounds of mail for the through air service delivery on July 1, with an inspirational kiss from his bride.

"Night flying," said Aviator Smith, "is no more dangerous than day flying, provided the night is clear and the moon is shining. Dense, hazy nights are bad, but day flying in stormy weather is treacherous. I dread it most. I have experienced both sensations. After the Dempsey-Firpo fight I carried the films from New York to Chicago. I left at midnight and stopped at Cleveland first, reaching there at four in the morning.

"Of course I knew the location. The best guides are the roadways and villages. The headlights of passing motor cars and the strings of lights that mark the different villages or cities give direction, and then you have your compass. It is possible to see every outstanding object. The stars shining through the various basins of water reflect themselves and also enable the pilot to determine where he is approaching. The airplanes used for night flying over the Western stretches of the mail route are equipped with powerful searchlights, but my flights at night have been private.

"The aviator takes his chance when nights are overcast and atmospheric conditions are unfavorable, but by means of his altimeter and his knowledge of meteorology he knows to what altitude he must ascend to avoid the mountains. Air mail pilots equip themselves with parachutes. Only once has an air mail pilot had recourse to a parachute, but every one leaving his station dons the parachute sack. He therefore carries with him a safeguard against serious consequences.

"The sensations that the experienced pilot feels in skimming the night clouds are not exactly those that the man on the street who observes his eerie flight imagines.

"He fears only storms but he does not let them deter him always. The worst storm in summer covers a radius of only five to ten miles and by soaring above the storm clouds he passes through or over them in less than five minutes. It is nothing for a skilled aviator to rise to dizzy heights over storm regions and come out unhurt. Any pilot will tell you that the sensations of bucking the storm gales are more thrilling than night flying over familiar lanes aided by powerful beacons."

Pilot Smith was asked if radio attachments would not be an aid, and he answered yes, if the planes were built to carry them. They would be [illegible] with mail. They could not be properly installed on the planes in use because they would be too heavy, and a pilot, needing his attention on his ship, would be unable to operate the radio. Eventually the Government will build bigger, heavier and faster planes, and in this event it can be effected.

"The adoption of the parachute solves the problem of danger. Formerly pilots were always in danger between here and Cleveland. There is so much country—rough country—between New York and Chicago that it is impossible to land safely. If trouble arises and it becomes necessary for the pilot to save his life he needs only to step out of the plane and drop gracefully to earth. He can let his ship go down to wreck, but that would happen anyway.

"One of our flyers out West has had this experience, but the staff flying between Hazelhurst Field and Cleveland have been more fortunate, and we have been making 96 per cent all the year, which means that we rarely miss a day in getting the mail to the Coast."

Flying time between Cleveland and Hazelhurst is always faster than the reverse, as westerly winds aid the flight. Stops are made at Bellefonte, Pa., going in either direction. The mountainous regions outside Bellefonte and Lake Erie loom up as possible hazards, but even on stormy days and against stiff gales the skilled aviators carrying our mail have avoided them, by skirting the edges of Lake Erie.

"In my eight years I have flown over [illegible] miles," said Pilot Smith. "Some of that included night flying. The circumstances of my night trips have all been favorable. The stars shone and the nights were clear. My worst experiences have been in the daytime. Once I had an enforced landing in the Allegheny Mountains. I came down on top of a group of trees, without any harm, however. If a pilot keeps his head in day or night flying he [illegible]

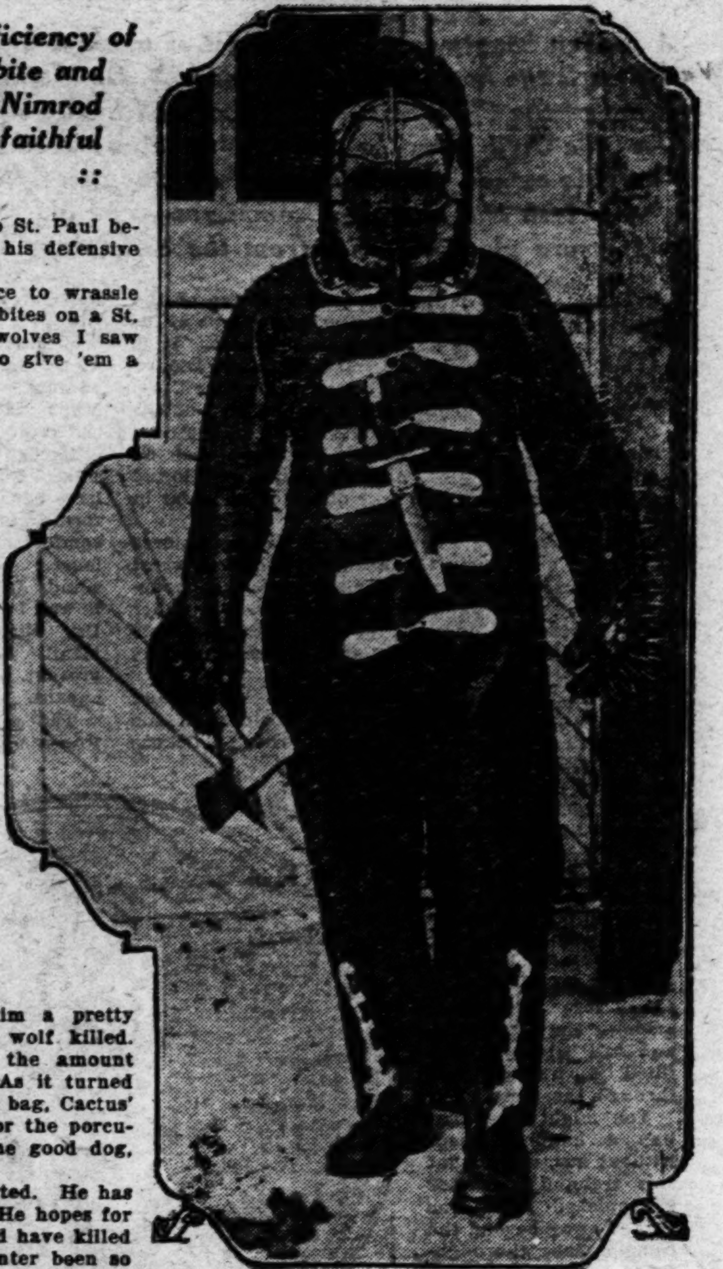
LADY

SPIKED UNION SUIT FINE FOR WOLF HUNTING

St. Paul man whose nom de chase is Canadian Cactus demonstrates efficiency of his cowhide covering with 1200 steel spikes sticking outward—One bite and the wolf loses its appetite—With no weapon but an ax this modern Nimrod lays low two terrors of the big north woods—Sad fate of Fanny, the faithful dog, in battle on an icy lake :: :: :: :: :: ::



Stanley Clarkson and his pointed defense against the wolves.

CANADIAN CACTUS' way of keeping the wolf from the door is the porcupine's pajamas. He has proved it by coming back to so-called civilization with the pelts of two ferocious beasts which were man killers up to the fateful moment when they tried to bite hunks out of Stanley Clarkson's Arnold von Winkelried union suit. They thirsted for his blood, but the drink was spiked.

As a wolf hunter Stanley Clarkson, who has nicknamed himself Canadian Cactus, has many good points. To be exact, he has 1200 good points, 1000 of which are an inch long. The other 200 are three-eighths of an inch shorter, but sharper than a serpent's tooth. These spikes are the outstanding feature of the go-to-meetin' suit which Cactus wears when he goes to meet wolves in the Canadian woods. They stick out like quills upon the fretful erethizon dorsatus. In fact, any young porcupine that caught sight of Cactus might have made the pardonable mistake of running home and gleefully announcing: "Al's here." Of course, porcupines, as a rule, don't wear baseball masks, but that detail might well be overlooked in the excitement incident to such a visitation.

But the biggest point of all is that Cactus went into the Canadian wilds in his spiked suit and stayed there all winter and lived to come back and say: "I told you so." Not only that. He brought the two wolf pelts with him as exhibits A and B. He demonstrated to the world that a man can go into that howling wilderness of predatory prowlers and subdue the bloodthirsty wolves without using firearms.

On his return to St. Paul after more than six months of wolf hunting, Cactus had only one complaint. His cowhide suit, studded with spikes, was too good. The wolves took one look at the human porcupine, put their tails between their legs and made new Canadian Marathon records.

Cactus nearly ran his spiked legs off in his efforts to overtake the fleeing terrors of the timber and to get close enough to dare them to bite him. His hide was safe all the time, because it was hiding behind cowhide which bristled with the spikes hereinbefore mentioned.

As party of the first part, Cactus stood ready to fulfill his contract to rid a large section of the Canadian woods of wolves, but as parties of the second part the wolves defaulted.

So it is that Cactus on his return to St. Paul bemoaned the too-great effectiveness of his defensive armor as a fright promoter.

"If I only could have had a chance to wrassle those babies," he complained between bites on a St. Paul sandwich. "But most of the wolves I saw wouldn't come near enough for me to give 'em a good hug. They must have thought I was a bee with a thousand stingers. Couldn't even get close enough to hit 'em with my little tommyhachet."

This hatchet, really an ax, and a hunter's knife were the only weapons Cactus carried. The ax was double-edged and had a short but sharp bayonet attached to it, so that it could be used either as a cutting or a stabbing weapon of offense and defense. It accounted for the two wolves that bit the snow after a foolhardy attack on the human porcupine.

Cactus enjoyed every minute of his stay in the North woods and came back a picture of health, though the expedition didn't put as much in his pocket as he had visions of earning when he started for Canada last December.

The Canadian Government pays a bounty on wolves. You kill your wolf, bring in his ears and get your bounty. Cactus figured that his "wrassling" with the Canadian man killers would yield him a pretty penny on the basis of $32 for each wolf killed. This would include the bounty and the amount realized from the sale of the pelts. As it turned out, with only two wolves in his game bag, Cactus' big hunt didn't yield enough to pay for the porcupine's pajamas. Besides, he is out one good dog, killed by the wolves.

Nevertheless, Cactus is not downhearted. He has demonstrated the value of his points. He hopes for better luck next time and says he would have killed more wolves this time had not the winter been so open. This condition of the weather made rabbits so plentiful that the wolves always had enough to eat and did not have the urge of extreme hunger, which alone whets the wolf's appetite for human flesh.

In fact, Clarkson saw only five wolves in all his long stay in the Canadian wilds. On March 8 he came across tracks, from which he judged that a pack of 10 or 12 wolves had passed that way. The next night he put on his prickly pear evening clothes and went out for a walk, accompanied by his dog, Fanny, on a chain. It was unfortunate for Fanny that she didn't wear the porcupine's pajamas, as the sequel will show.

Very soon after the man and the dog entered the woods the wolves took up the trail.

The night was stormy. The wind sent the snow scurrying about in great white clouds on the icy surface of a nearby lake. It was 40 below zero.

Cactus craftily led the wolves out onto the lake, where the fight would be in the open.

"What I was afraid of was that they might not attack me," said Cactus when recounting his adventure. I sure did want a chance to hug some of those babies. "The howls behind me as I headed for the lake sounded as if there were more than 40 in the pack. As soon as we got out of the woods three big wolves came tearing after us from behind. I could see two more circling around, but they kept their distance.

"One of the wolves made a dash for the dog and struck the chain with such force that he broke it.

"Two of the others charged on me. That was where my spiked suit showed what it could do. One made a grab at my leg, but didn't get a fair mouthful of the spike points. The other snapped his jaws

The House of Yesterday in St. Louis

A hidden beauty spot in the midst of modern industrial ugliness is the home of Dr. Alexander N. De Menil, descendant of the Chouteaus—First occupied in the middle year of the Civil War, the dwelling remains sacred to its venerable owner, who writes and dreams there, heedless of the clash and clatter of commerce—The old residence a treasure place of relics from the early days of the city DOWN in the very heart of one of the oldest and least alluring sections of St. Louis is a hidden beauty spot. It is the lovely old mansion and wooded estate of Dr. Alexander De Menil, St. Louis historian, savant and man of letters, at 3352 South Thirteenth street. There the De Menils have lived for more than 60 years, while the tide of commercial life has flowed up, and past, and left this relic of the old days far in its wake.

Just beyond the double row of tall sycamores fringing the property the unsightly walls of great modern factories rise. Not far away are the smokeless chimneys of famous breweries that in other times provided employment for most of the residents of that section. On all sides are the ugly earmarks of industrial progress.

But inside the garden walls all is beauty and peace. Birds twitter in the leafy coolness of the ancient oaks and maples; pigeons wheel, chickens peck industriously in the runs, and a family of fat goldfish floats contentedly in the tank. In the early spring giant lilac and snowball bushes make their colorful protest against the surrounding drab; winding paths bordered with old-fashioned blossoms lose themselves among the greenery, and tall white flower-filled urns gleam through the trees.

You might pass that way a hundred times without suspecting that this tranquil reminder of vanished years was tucked away beyond the commonplace thoroughfare.

The plain gray brick exterior of the house to which South Thirteenth street gives access is the rear, not the front, of the mansion. But a short walk past the stable, now remodeled to accommodate its motor cars, brings you face to face with the stately old house, with its picturesque porches and fluted columns rising almost to the roof.

Except for such insignificant changes as have been made to conform to modern ideas of comfort and convenience, the residence stands today exactly as it was built in 1863 by Dr. Nicholas N. De Menil, father of the present owner and occupant.

The elder De Menil was a practicing physician and part owner of the first successful chain of retail drug stores ever established in St. Louis. He had been a Lieutenant in the French army and came to America in 1833 on a visit, with no intention of making his home in this country. He arrived in St. Louis in 1834 and two years later married Emily Sophie, daughter of Col. Auguste P. Chouteau.

Dr. Alexander N. De Menil is thus the great-great-grandson of that intrepid Madame Marie Therese Chouteau, "the mother of St. Louis," who was the first woman to establish her household in the [illegible] ing post destined to be one of the [illegible] America and of the world.

Lightning and Your Radio Antenna

An interesting experiment with a cardboard house, a toy aerial, and 500,000 volts of electricity to represent a highly surcharged storm cloud —

By KENNETH M. SWEZEY, A. I. R. E.

OUT OF some ten thousand letters of inquiry from radio fans which I have read and answered, the impression has been cut deep into my mind that the majority of people still hold the superstitious belief of the ancients in regard to lightning and its accompanying thunder.

Especially do they seem to link their fear of nature's awe-inspiring fireworks with radio apparatus and antennae. It is the hope of the writer to explode these ideas with the dynamite of the facts in the case, and thereby ease the minds of the millions of radio listeners throughout the country.

Strange and numerous are the antics which lightning has been reported to have accomplished—and some of the strangest come from the pen of no less authority than the great French scientist, Flammarion. Shoes and clothing have been torn off from people without injuring their bodies; a pitchfork has been carried fifty yards and the prongs twisted into corkscrews; blindness has been caused and cured; ponds have been demolished and all the fish killed; a man on the scaffold to be hanged has been instantly killed by a lightning bolt.

Yet, now, with our increased knowledge of the subject, we fear its pranks less and less; for like all things which we understand and become accustomed to we can make ourselves right at home in its [illegible]

Many theories have been advanced concerning the nature of the conditions that cause lightning, but a few things are certain. First of all, it is caused by the difference in electrical pressure, or potential, between two objects or points. These objects may be two clouds, one cloud and the earth, or between two points in a single cloud.

How these different charges are produced is a rather technical subject, and the theories are highly involved, so just a slight mention will be made [illegible]

The earth is considered to have a moderately uniform negative charge. Clouds coming near the earth sometimes have positive charges induced in them. Sometimes they receive a negative charge from coming in contact with mountains. The action of the sun's rays on the particles that make up a cloud can, under certain conditions, produce a state of electrical charge. Warm air currents can cause a movement that separates the two charges in a single cloud.

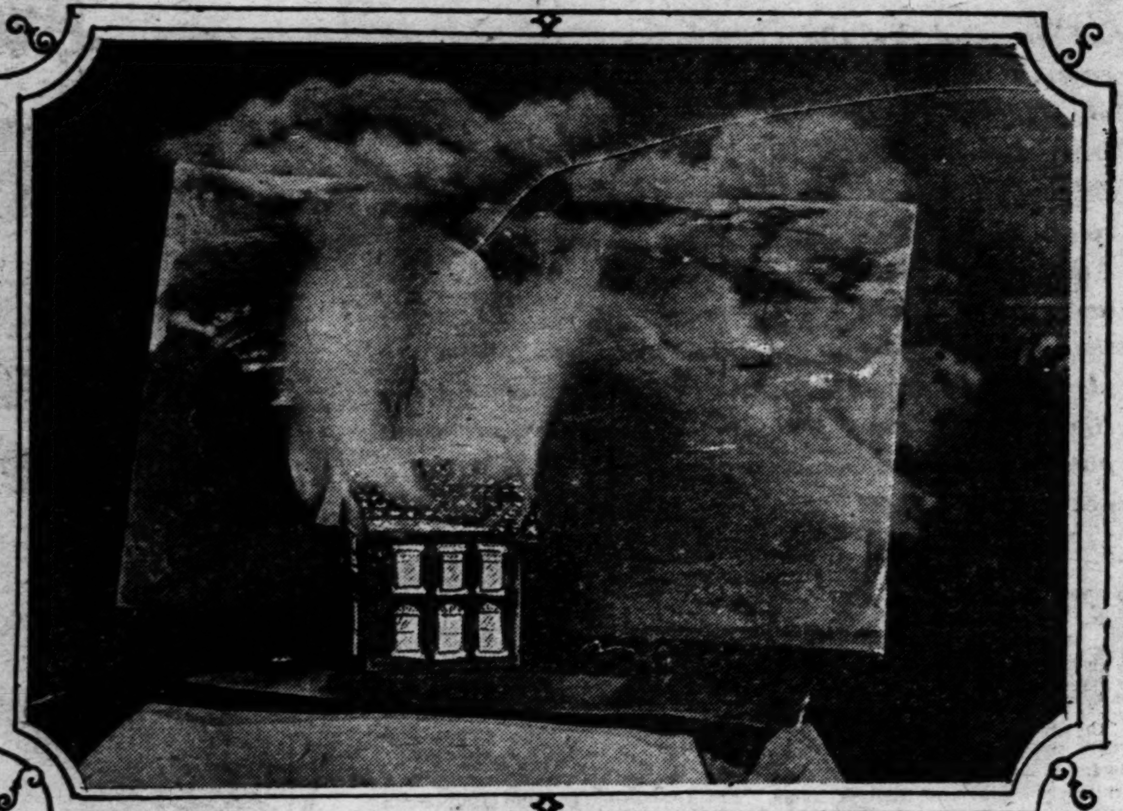
When the electrical pressure within a cloud, or between a cloud and the earth, becomes great enough, the air and vapor between can no longer stand the strain, and a lightning flash takes place. Trees are rent, people and animals are killed, and buildings demolished, not so much because they attract lightning, but rather because they happen to be in the path which the lightning has already chosen to take. Trees and houses are demolished only because they offer so great a resistance to the current that the heat generated cuts its way like an arc or an oxy-acetylene torch through the obstructing material.

Lightning is nothing to be feared, any more than sickness or any form of accidental death. In fact, the chances of being struck are extremely remote. I believe that fear of lightning has caused more injury and death than has the spectacular phenomenon itself.

In the first place, most lightning takes place within a single cloud or between two clouds high in the air; comparatively seldom does a bolt reach the earth. And when it does strike the earth, it usually strikes in the mountains, or some wide expanse of open land, upon which there are a few high points.

However, although we are quite sure our house will not catch fire, we still have it insured. Likewise, if there is the faintest trace of the possibility of getting struck by lightning, it is well to take all preventive measures. Remember that large masses of conducting material are protective—a person in a metal box or cage that was well connected with the ground would never be injured. It is dangerous to stand under single trees during an electrical storm, but a thickly wooded forest is quite safe.

In large cities, lightning is less potent; the high strung electric wires, metal building frames, grounded smoke, all tend to prevent great charges from gathering overhead, by allowing the difference in pressure in the atmosphere to slowly equalize itself by flowing through them. The modern steel skyscraper is one of the most completely protected refuges that there is. High steel radio towers, and the Eiffel tower in Paris, have been struck repeatedly by lightning, but without any serious damage.



The above photograph shows a cardboard model house over which is suspended a wire charged at a potential of half a million volts representing a bolt of lightning. The house had no protective devices such as a lightning rod or a radio antenna. Sprays of current may be seen passing from the charged wire to the house, thus pictorially indicating what takes place when lightning "strikes" an unprotected building or tree.

In isolated places the danger is slightly greater, but well-installed lightning rods give good protection. These have fallen somewhat into disuse, of late, but simply because they are not understood. Where damage has occurred on protected houses, the fault has not been with the rods themselves, but with faulty installation—for an improperly installed lightning rod is worse than none at all.

Except on very tall objects such rods do not appreciably attract lightning, and therefore they do not in any way increase the danger; but if lightning should choose to strike in the immediate vicinity, and some of the current jumps to the wire, or is induced in it, damage might occur if the lower end was not properly grounded, or if there was a break in the circuit.

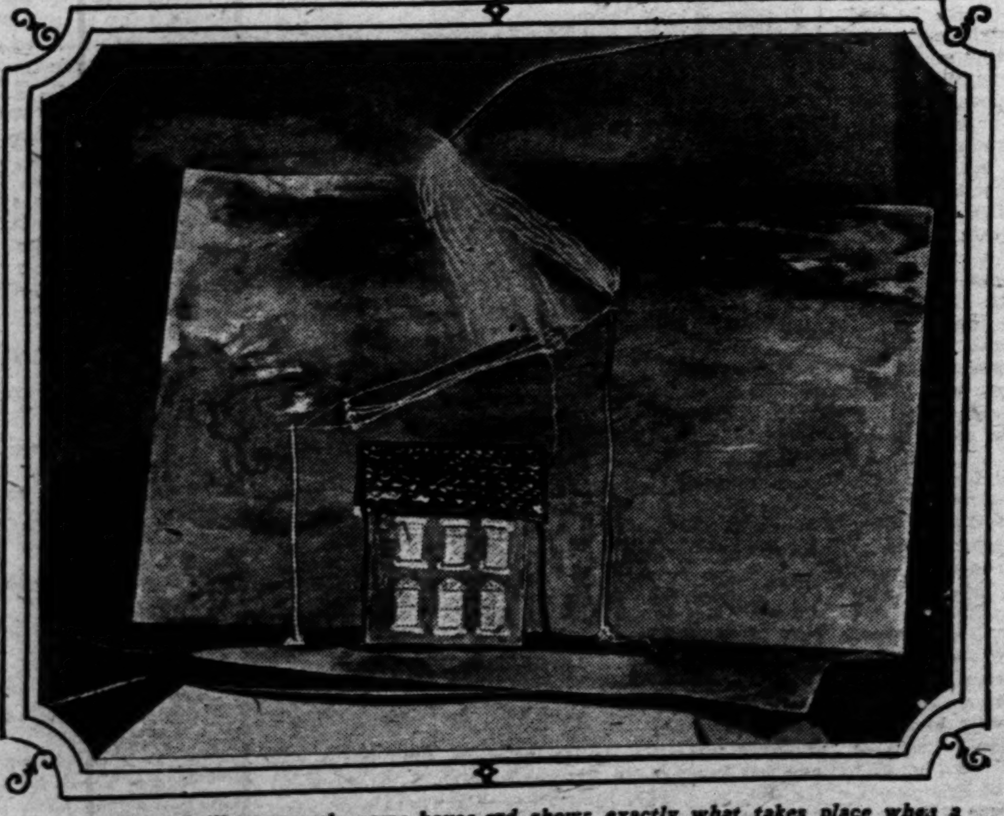
When we speak of lightning in connection with radio antennae, we must first break down a lot of time-honored superstition. Happily, much of this has already been broken down in the past two or three years by actual proof of its folly.

Somehow or another, some people have been led to believe that the outdoor aerial of the radio set is a dangerous addition to any house, and should, therefore, be put under the taboo. They believe that such an affair attracts lightning, and after attracting it, proceeds to set fire to the house, or kill some of the occupants, or something else equally as horrible.

Many a poor radio enthusiast has written to me, asking what he should do for an aerial, since either parent or landlord would not consider his erecting one on the roof on account of an "eminent fire hazard."

Theoretically this is all wrong, for a lightning discharge that would leap a gap of air a mile long would hardly consider a measly little fifty-foot aerial as a short-cut to the ground. If such a bolt was aimed near a house, why just forget about the house and the aerial and everything else, and just say goodby—nothing would save the house, except, perhaps, a cage made up of copper bars an inch thick.

Luckily, however, such discharges seldom have to be contended with—small offshoots, or induced currents, being the chief cause of trouble. In such cases an aerial is an advantage, for such currents an aerial can handle, and carry safely to the ground—working, within its capacity, as a lightning rod.



This photograph illustrates the same house and shows exactly what takes place when a bolt of lightning accumulates in close proximity to a building equipped with lightning rods or an aerial which has been properly grounded. The energy from the conductor passes to the aerial wires, thence to the earth, where it is harmlessly dissipated. It is not necessary that the wires be located directly over the building to serve their protective purpose.

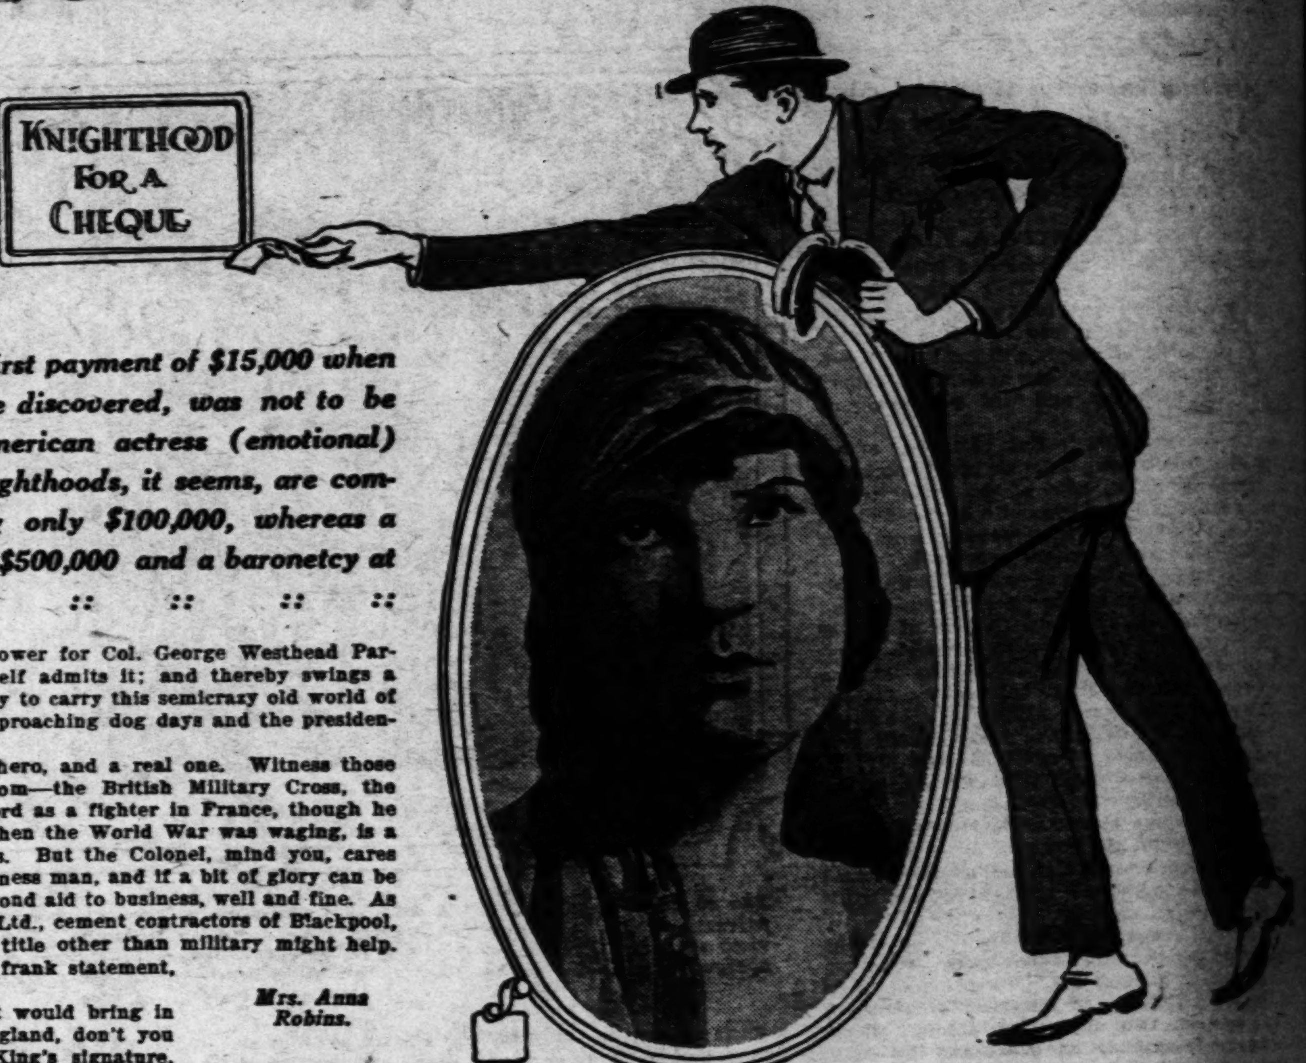
A single wire aerial, such as is commonly used for receiving, is an almost negligible factor in either attracting lightning, or in protection; but with a good lightning arrester or lightning switch, soldered connections, and a good ground, it will effectively carry off all the stray currents that otherwise might prove slightly troublesome.

The author tries to show, in the experiments illustrated by the photographs, how lightning would affect a house with, and without, aerial protection. The voltage used is half a million, which, although small compared with the average lightning bolt, is quite proportionate to the size of the house and the aerial installation.

From the practical standpoint, the danger from lightning in conjunction with the radio aerials is practically nil. With the thousands of sets used in New York City alone, it is surprising to learn that the fire department has not a case on record in which a fire could be definitely laid to this cause.

When Knighthood Was Not in Flower

Proof supplied by the case of Col. Parkinson of Blackpool, who tried to buy a British title when one was offerred by a College of Ambulance (Limited) and sued to recover his first payment of $15,000 when the promised blossom, he discovered, was not to be plucked by him—An American actress (emotional) figures in the case—Knighthoods, it seems, are comparatively cheap, costing only $100,000, whereas a peerage is priced at $500,000 and a baronetcy at $125,000. :: :: :: :: :: ::



Mrs. Anna Robins.

KNIGHTHOOD is not in flower for Col. George Westhead Parkinson. The Colonel himself admits it; and thereby swings a narrative sufficiently funny to carry this semicrazy old world of ours safely through the approaching dog days and the presidential election.

Col. Parkinson is a war hero, and a real one. Witness those glittery badges on his bosom—the British Military Cross, the French Croix de Guerre. His record as a fighter in France, though he was far along in late middle life when the World War was waging, is a part of the glory of British arms. But the Colonel, mind you, cares little for glory per se: he is a business man, and if a bit of glory can be used now and then as a sort of second aid to business, well and fine. As a director of J. Parkinson & Sons, Ltd., cement contractors of Blackpool, Lancashire, the Colonel felt that a title other than military might help. That is why, according to his own frank statement, he set out to acquire a knighthood.

"Sir Westhead Parkinson"—that would bring in the contracts, wouldn't it? In England, don't you know, a "Sir" cemented by the King's signature, "George Rex," is a sort of reinforced concrete bid for business as well as for social recognition.

Unlike many of the retired army officers, Col. Parkinson has been highly prosperous since the armistice suspended the field fighting. He held an interest of $500,000 in his company and $100,000 on individual deposit when he began his quest for the flower of knighthood a few years back, but he had no objection to the acquiring of additional wealth. As it was represented to him, he could pluck the blossom of knighthood by paying the comparatively small sum of $100,000. As you read along you will discover why this amount is comparatively small.

But Col. Parkinson, being, as averred, a business man, hoped to save half of this item of expense: he haggled over the price, offering $50,000, and so a compromise was offered, whereby he could get $100,000 worth of knighthood without paying the full amount in cash. Why should a good business man buy a knighthood without getting a bargain?

The story all came out the other day in the High Court, Lord Lush holding down the woolsack. There was a jury. It was the business of the jury to determine, from the evidence, whether the College of Ambulance, Ltd., and Mr. Ernest E. Harrison, managing secretary of the college, should return to Col. Parkinson the sum of $15,000, which he had paid as first installment on his knighthood. As you see, the Colonel was buying his title on the installment plan, as we in America sometimes buy a Ford car or a floor lamp. So much down, so much at certain intervals. Use of title, car or lamp whilst paying. Handy arrangement, don't you know.

There was, to enhance the interest, a lady in the case. An American lady, too. She lives in London now, but she was born and reared in the United States. Now, Mrs. Robins, she was Miss Anna (some say Hannah) Stannard, and one of her ancestors was an early Governor of Massachusetts. As Anna Stannard she was an emotional actress. At present she occupies a more or less dignified post as social and political go-between in the bestowal of British honors. Occupying a fashionable apartment, she entertains the high and mighty and those who aspire to highness and mightiness. Mrs. Robins was one of the most interesting witnesses at the recent hearing before Lord Lush.

The College of Ambulance, Ltd., co-defendant with Managing Secretary Harrison, was described as having been organized in 1918, and as having "among its objects the education of the public in ambulance and kindred subjects." Knighthood was not mentioned specifically as one of the "kindred subjects," but the inference was plain. Peerages and baronetcies also were kindred subjects.

Early in October, 1921, a M. de Caux appears to have approached Col. Parkinson inquiring if he were interested in a knighthood. The Colonel said he wasn't. Later, he said it might interest him "for business purposes." M. de Caux then introduced Col. Parkinson to Mr. Harrison, who told him that through the president of the College of Ambulance, Ltd., Princess Christian (since deceased), the institution had "a call on royal honors, and also a certain call on political honors."

Col. George Westhead Parkinson.

"I am arranging at present," said Mr. Harrison to Col. Parkinson, "for a peerage and a baronetcy, in respect of which $500,000 and $25,000 respectively have been paid in; and for $100,000 a knighthood can be secured for you. The plan is that you pay down $50,000, then $10,000 a year for the two years following, then $5000 a year for five years."

A lawyer in court, who seems to have a fine head for mental arithmetic, remarked that those sums figure up to only $95,000, but neither Mr. Harrison nor Col. Parkinson made correction. It was shown conclusively that the Colonel at the time of the interview, made it clear that he was not going to pay down a red penny except for a certainty. It was knighthood or nothing. The Colonel owned some fine horses. The College of Ambulance, Ltd., per Mr. Harrison, suggested that he put up a horse for sale at Tattersall's, letting it be known that the money was to go for charitable objects and thereby getting a higher price for the animal. The Colonel seemed to have balked at this suggestion, though he did not kick over the traces.

There was an interview between Col. Parkinson and his lawyer, Mr. Harrison being a third party. On Oct. 11 (1921, remember), Col. Parkinson sent his check for $15,000 as first payment for his knighthood. He was also to build a new lecture hall for the college, at cost price, and to hand the college another check (in England they spell it cheque, to make it last longer), for $25,000, when the knighthood was secured, clinched, cinched, [illegible] clamped. Three days later the Colonel received from Princess Christian, president of the college, a letter expressing her "great appreciation and sincere gratitude for his splendid gift to the college."

Ostensibly, as you see, the Colonel's money was a "gift" to the college. Quite naturally, one can't expect to buy a knighthood outright, cash or credit, in the fierce light that beats upon a throne.

Things seem to have gummed up somewhat, and by Oct. 19 it became necessary to invoke the aid of Mrs. Anna (or Hannah) Stannard Robins in behalf of the title for the future Sir Westhead. The Colonel told Mrs. Robins that he had approached one of the political "whips" but had been turned down. Mrs. Robins became active. She told the Colonel, later, that she had arranged an interview for him with an official at the Conservative offices, and she gave him an introduction.

"What can I do for you?" inquired the official at the Conservative offices, when Col. Parkinson presented the letter.

"I was surprised at such a question," the Colonel testified, "and I asked whether the letter did not explain."

"It does not," replied the official.

"Well, the truth is," bluntly blurted the Colonel, "I have come here to get a knighthood."

"I'm afraid you have been fooled," remarked the official.

"I am perfectly certain I have," averred the Colonel, having done some quick thinking.

"I know nothing about this Mrs. Robins," explained the official, "but I suppose she has been pushed off onto me after worrying my chief, whom she visited the day before she wrote this letter."

Counsel for the College of Ambulance, Ltd., asked the plaintiff-witness:

"Did you consider yourself worthy of a knighthood?"

"Yes."

"Are you content to buy an honor?"

"Yes."

"Your standard of honor permits you to do such a thing?"

"Yes, like thousands of others. They are being bought every day, and you know it."

"It is all a question of price?"

"Yes, 90 per cent, I say, are. If the Government do not want these things hawked about they ought to stop it."

"Was it the cheapness that attracted you?"

"No."

"When your brother got his knighthood—it was galling to you? Do you know anything about this college?"

"No."

"Any other vehicle for the knighthood would have been just as good?"

"I was a purchaser."

"Then a home for starving cats or a mission to bargees would have been the same to you?"

"Yes."

"Who did you think was selling it?"

"Mr. Harrison, for the benefit of the college."

"Did you think these things could be [illegible]

"Z. Taylor, Colonel Commanding"

An interesting bit of history is found among the old archives of the Sixth Infantry, now stationed at St. Louis again—Official report of the man who afterward became 12th President of the United States, upon hot engagement with the Seminole Indians at Okeechobee, Christmas Day, 1837 — "Old Rough and Ready" gives unstinted praise to the members of his command :: :

AN INTERESTING discovery has been made by a Lieutenant of the Sixth U. S. Infantry, stationed at Jefferson Barracks. In delving through some old records of the regiment he found the official report upon one of the most sanguinary engagements in which the Sixth Infantry ever anticipated.

The battle occurred on Christmas day, 1837, with the warlike Seminole Indians of Florida. The report was written by Col. Zachary Taylor, afterward President of the United States.

In the 87 years since then the Sixth Infantry has won distinction on many a hard-fought field—in the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Philippine Insurrection and the World War, not to mention the chronicle of service against Western Indians and of police duty upon the frontier which began more than a century ago.

Even now, however, the fight in Okeechobee swamp is regarded as one of the most notable incidents in the history of the regiment, largely because of the high percentage of officers and men who became casualties. In other respects, too, the affair was quite remarkable.

Col. Taylor's report to the Adjutant-General of the Army, at Washington, was written 10 days after the fight, when Col. Taylor had gotten the survivors of the various units under his command out of the swampy wilderness, along with all the wounded.

The story should be of unusual interest to St. Louisans, for the Sixth Infantry helped to build Jefferson Barracks, in 1827, and regarded it as "home" until 1858. The regiment, or detachments of it, went forth on various stern errands, and when these were finished they returned.

In the year 1858, however, the Sixth Infantry followed after the westward-moving frontier, being stationed first in Utah, whence they marched across what was then called the Great American Desert to Benicia, Cal., 1017 miles away. St. Louis knew the outfit no more until November, 1921, when all but one battalion of the regiment completed a 900-mile march from Camp Jackson, S. C., to Jefferson Barracks. A parade downtown was reviewed by Marshal Foch and Gen. Pershing. The remaining battalion "came home" in September, 1922, from Camp McClellan, Ala.

When he served as commander of all the troops at the battle of Okeechobee, Col., Taylor was 53 years old, and a seasoned soldier. A Lieutenant in 1808, and promoted to a captaincy two years later, he won the rank of Major in 1812, when, with 50 men, of whom two-thirds were ill of fever, he defended Fort Harrison, on the Wabash, against a large force of Indians led by Tecumseh.

During the War of 1812 Maj. Taylor was employed in fighting the Indian allies of Great Britain. In 1832 he was a Colonel in the Black Hawk War, in which the Sixth Infantry added to the regimental prestige. Then both he and the Sixth, as well as other troops, were sent to Florida, where the Seminoles were stubbornly resisting their removal to what is now Oklahoma. It was the costliest Indian war in the history of the Government, resulting in the loss of thousands of lives and the expenditure of $10,000,000.

When Col. Taylor fought the battle of Okeechobee, in 1837, he little dreamed that his military successes, and chiefly his spectacular victory at Buena Vista over the Mexican General, Santa Anna, would result 11 years later in the election of "Old Rough and Ready" to the presidency.

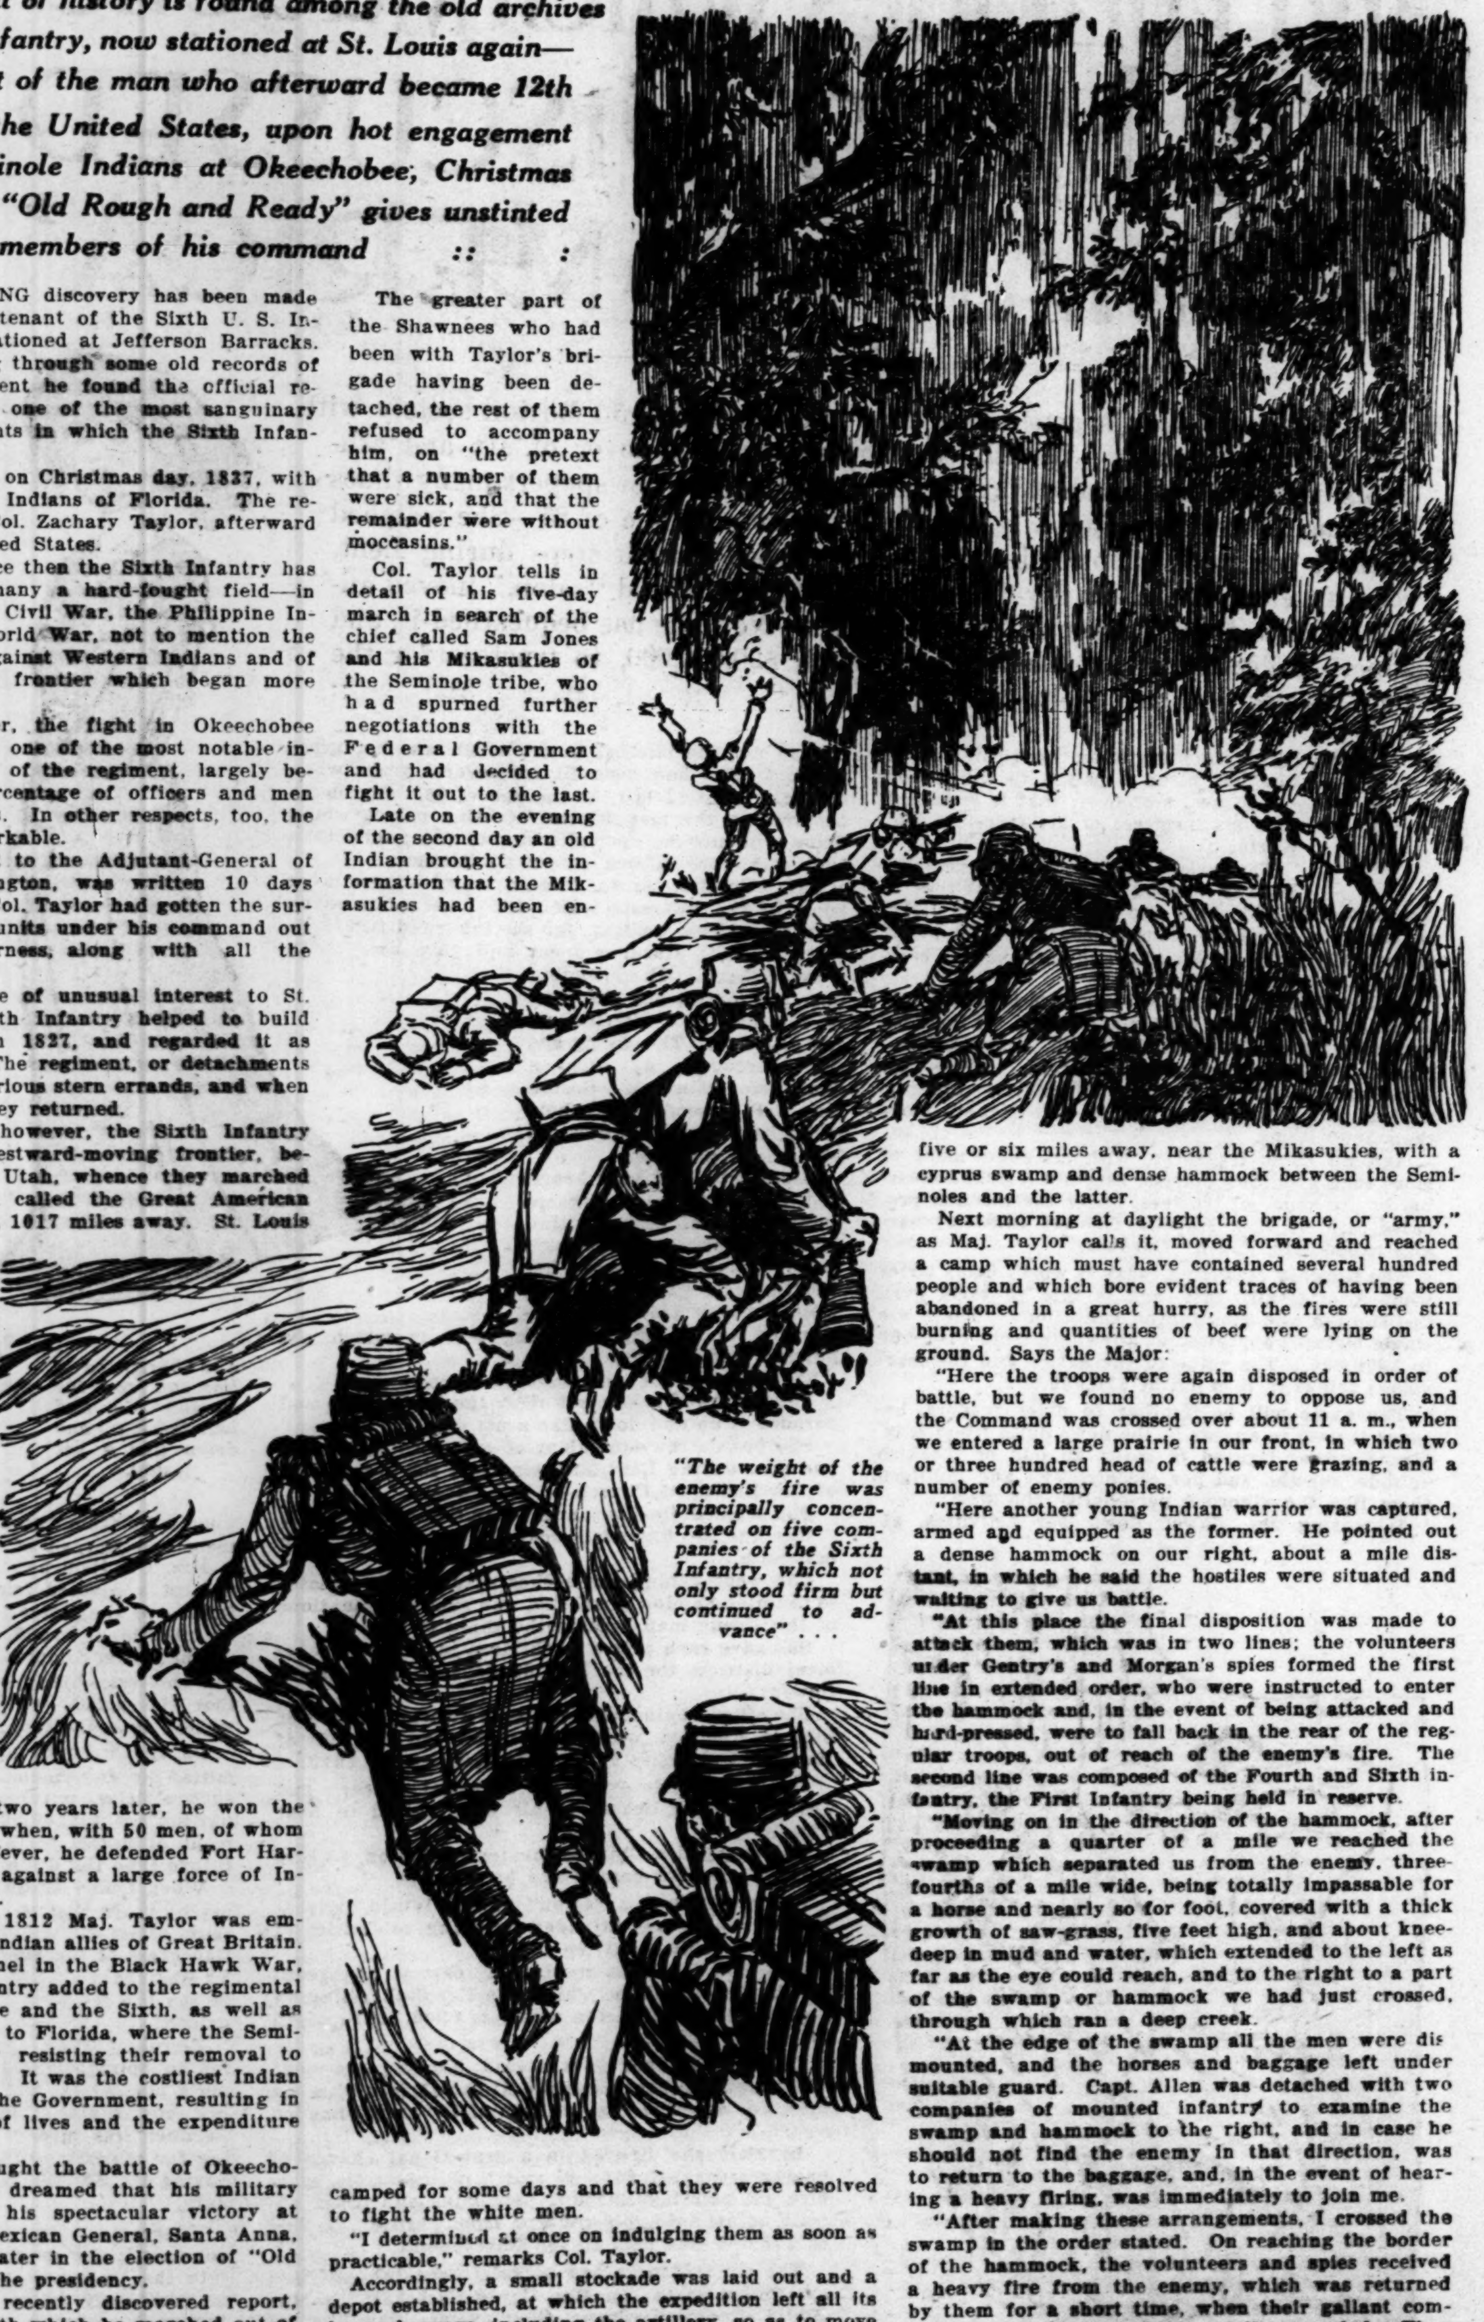
Col. Taylor, in the recently discovered report, enumerates the force with which he marched out of Fort Gardner, Fla., on Dec. 20, as follows:

"Capt. Monroe's company of the Fourth Artillery, total 35 men; the First Infantry, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Davenport, 197 strong; the Fourth Infantry, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Foster, 274; the Sixth Infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel Thompson, 221; the Missouri Volunteers, 180, and Morgan's Spies, 47; Pioneers, 30; Pontoniers, 13, and 70 Delaware Indians, making a force, exclusive of officers, of 1032 men."

The greater part of the Shawnees who had been with Taylor's brigade having been detached, the rest of them refused to accompany him, on "the pretext that a number of them were sick, and that the remainder were without moccasins."

Col. Taylor tells in detail of his five-day march in search of the chief called Sam Jones and his Mikasukies of the Seminole tribe, who had spurned further negotiations with the Federal Government and had decided to fight it out to the last.

Late on the evening of the second day an old Indian brought the information that the Mikasukies had been encamped for some days and that they were resolved to fight the white men.



"The weight of the enemy's fire was principally concentrated on five companies of the Sixth Infantry, which not only stood firm but continued to advance" . . .

"I determined at once on indulging them as soon as practicable," remarks Col. Taylor.

Accordingly, a small stockade was laid out and a depot established, at which the expedition left all its heavy baggage, including the artillery, so as to move with the greatest celerity through a difficult and uncharted country. For garrison a company of infantry was left there, also the pioneers, the pontoniers, some of the friendly Indians and 85 sick and disabled infantrymen.

Now and then the advancing column captured enemy spies, from whom information was obtained. On the night of the twenty-fourth a captured Indian told the white men that a large body of Seminoles, headed by John Cohai (Co-a-choo-chee) was encamped five or six miles away, near the Mikasukies, with a cyprus swamp and dense hammock between the Seminoles and the latter.

Next morning at daylight the brigade, or "army," as Maj. Taylor calls it, moved forward and reached a camp which must have contained several hundred people and which bore evident traces of having been abandoned in a great hurry, as the fires were still burning and quantities of beef were lying on the ground. Says the Major:

"Here the troops were again disposed in order of battle, but we found no enemy to oppose us, and the Command was crossed over about 11 a. m., when we entered a large prairie in our front, in which two or three hundred head of cattle were grazing, and a number of enemy ponies.

"Here another young Indian warrior was captured, armed and equipped as the former. He pointed out a dense hammock on our right, about a mile distant, in which he said the hostiles were situated and waiting to give us battle.

"At this place the final disposition was made to attack them, which was in two lines; the volunteers under Gentry's and Morgan's spies formed the first line in extended order, who were instructed to enter the hammock and, in the event of being attacked and hard-pressed, were to fall back in the rear of the regular troops, out of reach of the enemy's fire. The second line was composed of the Fourth and Sixth infantry, the First Infantry being held in reserve.

"Moving on in the direction of the hammock, after proceeding a quarter of a mile we reached the swamp which separated us from the enemy, three-fourths of a mile wide, being totally impassable for a horse and nearly so for foot, covered with a thick growth of saw-grass, five feet high, and about knee-deep in mud and water, which extended to the left as far as the eye could reach, and to the right to a part of the swamp or hammock we had just crossed, through which ran a deep creek.

"At the edge of the swamp all the men were dismounted, and the horses and baggage left under suitable guard. Capt. Allen was detached with two companies of mounted infantry to examine the swamp and hammock to the right, and in case he should not find the enemy in that direction, was to return to the baggage, and, in the event of hearing a heavy firing, was immediately to join me.

"After making these arrangements, I crossed the swamp in the order stated. On reaching the border of the hammock, the volunteers and spies received a heavy fire from the enemy, which was returned by them for a short time, when their gallant commander, Col. Gentry, fell mortally wounded. They mostly broke and, instead of forming in rear of the regulars, as had been directed, they retired across the swamp to their baggage and horses, nor could they again be brought into action as a body, although efforts were made repeatedly by my staff to induce them to do so.

"The enemy, however, were promptly checked and driven back by the Fourth and Sixth infantry, which,

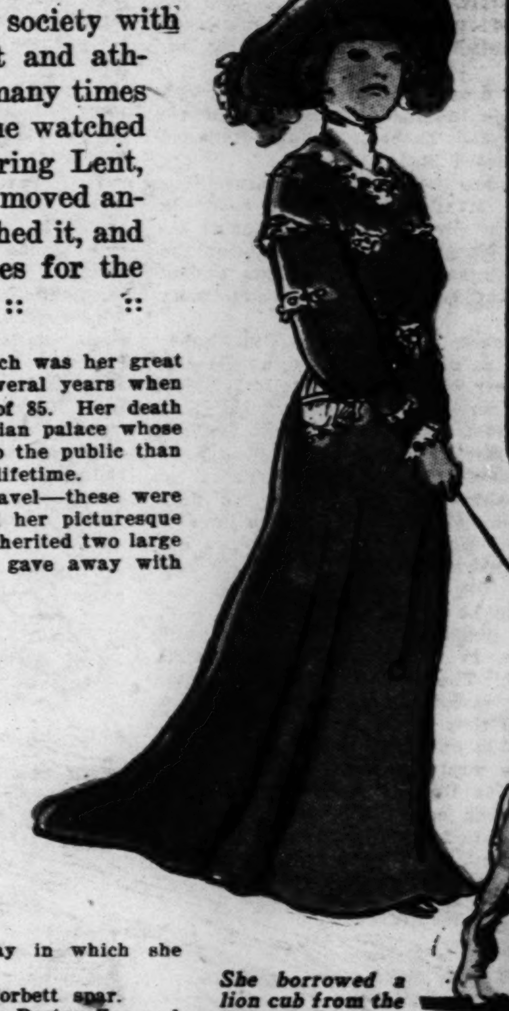
MRS. "JACK" GARDNER and Episodes Which Made Her "THE MOST DISCUSSED WOMAN in AMERICA"

It was she, more than a generation ago, who shocked staid Boston society with her unconventionality—Wealthy and open-handed, a lover of art and athletics, religious and fond of thrills, she figured in the newspapers many times but was almost forgotten when she died recently at age of 85—She watched Corbett box, took a lion cub for a walk, washed church steps during Lent, rode an elephant in charity pageant, held an Old World "salon," moved ancient palace from Venice in Italy to Boston—Now she has bequeathed it, and superb collection of art masterpieces worth $20,000,000, to trustees for the public's use :: :: :: :: :: :: :: ::



She borrowed a lion cub from the Boston Zoo and paraded it up and down like a pet dog.

THIS is the story of an American woman who has given a palace to the public—a palace, moreover, that is crammed with masterpieces of art from the Old World.

The palace stands in the exclusive Fenway district of Boston, whither it was moved 20-odd years ago from Venice, in Italy, having been carefully dismantled, piece by piece, shipped 4500 miles to America and then just as carefully reassembled on its new site.

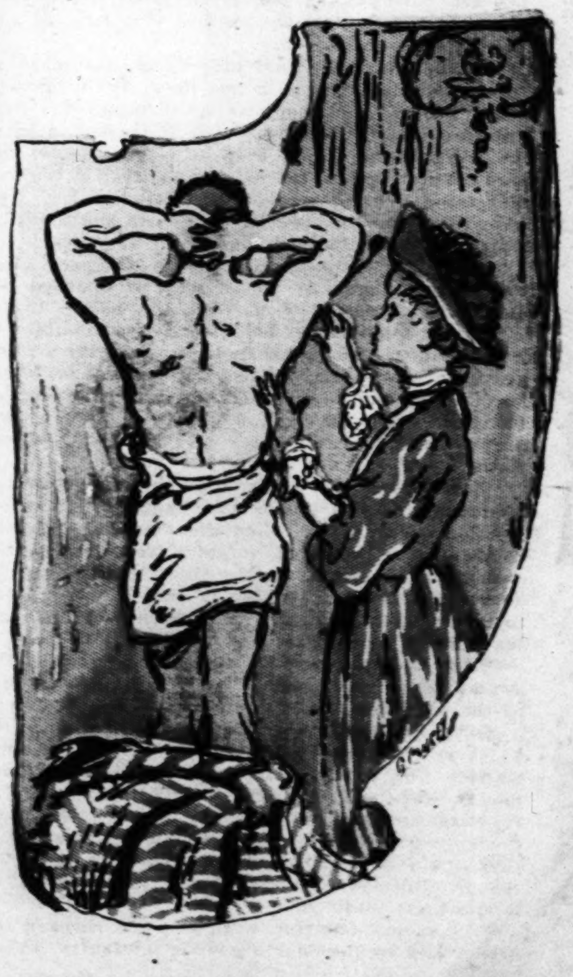
Sheltered in the transplanted palace is an art collection of bewildering beauty and value. It includes works by Titian, Raphael, Botticelli, Rubens, Rembrandt, Velasquez, Durer and Holbein. There are paintings, mosaics, statues, tapestries, bronzes, ancient manuscripts and armor—altogether, more than 5000 items.

And all these treasures, with an endowment of more than a million dollars, becomes a public museum in the hands of trustees, under the recently probated will of Mrs. Isabella Stewart Gardner, usually called Mrs. "Jack" Gardner.

The Gardner collection today is worth many times what it originally cost, and is said to excel even the Morgan and Huntington collections. There are single pictures appraised at anywhere from $100,000 to $500,000. The value of the palace and the marvelous things in it is put at $20,000,000.

The name will be familiar to older readers, because it used to appear in the news quite frequently. Mrs. Gardner figured in many an odd or freakish episode, for she had her eccentricities and indulged them like the vigorous personality she was.

Increasing age slowed down her activities, although not the interest in art which was her great passion. She had been ill for several years when she died, July 17 last, at the age of 85. Her death occurred in the magnificent Venetian palace whose doors will now be opened wider to the public than they ever were in Mrs. Gardner's lifetime.



She went behind the scenes of a Boston theater to examine Sandow's muscles, and such examinations of the strong man became the thing to do.

Art, athletics, music, foreign travel—these were some of the interests which filled her picturesque career. Always wealthy, for she inherited two large fortunes, Mrs. Gardner spent and gave away with a lavish hand. The spending upon art objects she did wisely, for she was a discriminating collector. The giving she did generously, as many a charitable cause in Boston may well remember. To help struggling art students caused her special pleasure.

Along with her kind heart, and her social charm, there were plenty of eccentricities. Indeed, despite Mrs. Gardner's family connections and her wealth, exclusive society in Boston never grew quite acclimated to the thorough-going way in which she pursued her hobbies.

She hired a box and watched Corbett spar.

She borrowed a lion cub from the Boston Zoo and paraded it up and down like a pet dog.

She put on the equivalent of sackcloth and ashes, one year during Lent, and scrubbed the front steps of the Episcopal Church of the Advent.

She studied jiu-jitsu, and became an expert at it.

She was the financial backer of a newsboys' baseball team.

She went behind the scenes of a Boston theater to examine Sandow's muscles, and such examinations of the strong man became the thing to do.

She gave cash prizes to children in Boston's tenement districts for the best displays of home-grown flowers.

She aided in financing the first aviation meet ever held in America, which was under the auspices of Harvard University at Squantum, Mass., in 1910.

She hired Paderewski for a special concert, and distributed the tickets to all who wished to hear him.

She engaged a Chinese theater in Boston, to give performances for herself and her friends.

She maintained a "salon" in Old World style at Boston, which was attended by many celebrities of this and foreign countries.

She took the most spectacular part in a pageant for the benefit of the Children's Hospital, riding on a circus elephant in the richly jeweled attire of an Oriental Princess.

Of Mrs. Gardner it was said, many years ago: "Although she has worshiped at the shrines of many fads, her devotion has not been of the empty-handed sort."

In 1908 she figured in a sensational charge of having smuggled $80,000 worth of tapestries, marbles, oil paintings, armor, porcelains and other objects of art into this country from abroad. A fine of $70,000 was paid to the Government.

The art treasures had actually been brought into the United States, on Mrs. Gardner's behalf, by Mrs. Emily Rockwell Crane Chadbourne, daughter of Richard T. Crane, millionaire head of the Crane Manufacturing Co., Chicago. Mrs. Chadbourne landed in New York with several large packing cases labeled "Household Goods." She made a declaration that she was the owner of the merchandise therein. Attached was a statement that the contents were household goods, had been in use for less than one year abroad, were her personal property and as such were entitled to admission without duty. The valuation placed on the "household goods" was $8000.

The cases were shipped in bond to Chicago, where, upon a tip from abroad, the customs officials them and learned of the ruse.

Mrs. Chadbourne's part in the affair was that of a devoted friend of Mrs. Gardner.

such articles, purchased abroad at high

When Leslie M. Shaw was Secretary of the ury he heard that Mrs. Gardner's idea of a tion came to the Secretary that an admission

$2 was charged, and that even then persons to pay the fee were not always allowed to

Secretary Shaw applied to Attorney-General for an opinion, and the latter held that ner's palace was not such a public museum law contemplated in its exemptions.
Gardner was given the choice of throwing the museum open to the public or of paying the $200,000 duty. She paid the duty.

Thereafter, Mrs. Gardner kept up a constant fight to get her art purchases into the United States free of duty, but as constantly failed. She continued to buy such treasures, however, and stored them in Paris, where at one time she had quarter of a million dollars' worth of rare tiful works of art, purchased for the Boston.

Fenway Court, the Italian palace in which marvelous Gardner collection of art objects is installed. After a photograph taken from the south and copyright by Thomas E. Marr & Son.

It was two years after Gardner's death that the widow conceived the idea of transporting an old European palace to the Back Bay Fens of Boston and filling it with works of art. In Venice she found just what she wanted—the Palazza Barboro, said to have been standing for four centuries. The owner was an impoverished Italian nobleman who did not feel averse to parting with the home of his ancestors for a sum that would enable him to live luxuriously in Paris the rest of his days.

From roof to foundation stones the palace was dismantled and shipped to America, along with its old furnishings. Then artisans came from the Old World to the Fens in Boston and rebuilt the palace just as it had been, putting every brick and stone and pilaster back in its original position.

"Will she have lagoons around it, too?" asked some of the Boston folk, amazed once more at the latest originality of Mrs. "Jack" Gardner. They were spared the lagoons, gondolas, etc., but all about the palace gardens were laid out in the Italian fashion, and the installation of beautiful objects began.

To the amazement and amusement of sedate Boston was added, for awhile, something like pique. Pending completion, nobody was admitted to Fenway Court except the workmen. The nearer the end of the work approached, the more jealously was the secret guarded. Mrs. Gardner was determined that her palace and contents should not be seen until all the finishing touches had been given.

Complications arose. The building had been wired for electric lighting, and there came city inspectors whose duty it was to examine all such wiring before it could be used. Mrs. Gardner refused to admit them. In vain the inspectors told her that electric lights could not be used until they had given permission. Mrs. Gardner still refused to let them enter. But she must have light of some kind, so she bought a large supply of candles and illuminated her treasure rooms in this primitive way until the first receptions in the new palace had been held.

Another story is told of this same period, which may or may not be true. It seems that Mrs. Gardner wanted to know something about the acoustic properties of the rooms, but was unwilling to admit a curious crowd into their unfinished spaciousness. So, the story goes, she invited the inmates of the blind asylum to visit Fenway Court in a body, entertained them in royal style, and, at the same time, obtained the information she wanted.

The first private reception took place early in January, 1903. The heating apparatus of the palace did not behave in a very hospitable manner, and the crowd shivered. Some wit remarked that "Mrs. Jack had added a new treasure to her museum—the Frieze of the Four Hundred."

Contrary to all expectations, including their own, none of the distinguished guests had a cold in consequence, since there were no drafts to cause one. Another comment of the day was that "Mrs. Gardner has contrived a palace without drafts, which certainly is not according to Italian style."

The palace was first opened to the public, in the limited way which Mrs. Gardner decreed, in February of the same year. The rule observed for many years at "The Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in the Fenway, Inc.," was that the public should be admitted on four days of each month, from 11 a. m. until 3 p. m. There were only 200 tickets, sold at $2 each. Since the majority of the tickets were taken up months beforehand, by Bostonians, the casual visitor in the city had practically no chance of admission.

On these public days the whole palace was thrown open to sightseers except some apartments on an upper floor where Mrs. Gardner resided and which were cut off from the rest of the building by iron grills.

Friends of Mrs. Gardner said that out of more than 5000 works of art in the palace, there were only 29 on which no duty had been paid and which therefore could be considered as "public museum" pieces. Practically everything was on view, however, so Mrs. Gardner and her friends felt that she was being more than liberal with the public.

On such occasions, in the early years, Mrs. Gardner was always present, going from room to room in hostess fashion, while in every room sat one of her friends to watch and direct the visitors. It used to take 10 uniformed policemen and nearly as many trim maids to do the honors, for many came in carriages and with wraps, and everything was arranged for their comfort.

"The severely plain, square building, as it rises up from the level, snowbound Fens, speaks in every line of the ability to stand against inclement winds," wrote one of the first to attend on a public day. "Moreover, the red-tiled roof and the few Venetian windows are piquant if slight suggestions of the palace's real contents."

Perhaps the feature of the palace which most impressed visitors was the great central court, like a Spanish patio, roofed with glass and kept at an agreeable temperature, even in midwinter. There were palms, oleanders and acacia trees. Brilliant flowers bordered the paths. In the fountain, water fell unceasingly from the mouths of marble dolphins. The perfume of hyacinths and lilies filled the air.

by RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

JUSTINIA NEUTERDAHL was famed for her shoulders; they were said to be the most beautiful shoulders in America. Justihia married Simms-Vane, whose name will always stand for a vast fortune in merchandising. He died over 20 years ago.

.To her John Simms-Vane was the world and she never recovered from the shock of his death. For nearly two decades she has been a hopeless paralytic.

"As one bends over her to listen to her voice, seldom more than a whisper, one can smell the faint perfume of a withered rose," said one of her attendants. "She is inert—like a faded flower."

Miller the Hawk began to take an interest in Mrs. Simms-Vane from the rainy evening when Thomas Ford, a discharged worker of the Fifth avenue branch of Downing et Cie, jewelers of Amsterdam and London, was tolled into the rathskeller on Fourteenth street known as "The Grotto."

"But the Simms-Vane necklace is as interesting a piece as one would wish to see," said Ford, trying to focus his eyes upon The Hawk. "It's only once in a year or two we get a chance to see the Thirty-three, as we call it. The old dame is paralyzed so stiff that they say she is as brittle as blown glass, but she still has her whims, and one of them is to keep a $40 000 trinket where she can see it every day. She has it in a box right in her own room all the time. The story goes that her husband gave it to her on her thirty-third birthday and it alternates blue-white and canary stones in a setting done by Boitard. There's a piece of sentiment for you! Thirty-three stones like them around an invalid's room as if they were a string of horse-chestnuts! Gad! What a comedy!"

It took The Hawk five months to plant Lucille Galliene in the Simme-Vane household, and required that he give up his labors as a dancer at one of New York's gilded cafes and that he slide down the ladder of social distinction to the position of chauffeur. So did he make the acquaintance and gain the good will of that particular employment agency which furnished the servants to the Vane establishment. He had had too high a regard for his own liberty to risk taking the "inside of a job" himself. Therefore he introduced to the employment agency the pretty young Lucille who, by her demure manner, her clear, blue eyes and pointed, well-kept fingers, was able to make a favorable impression. In fact, the impression was so good that Lucille had difficulty in avoiding the places offered to her during the delay which preceded the marriage and retirement from service of the parlor maid at the Simms-Vane mansion.

Lucille Galliene, an orphan, had been the accomplice of a fashionable milliner. The Hawk said to her: "Any girl who has been used to sell $2 worth of junk in the form of glue, straw and dressmakers' scraps for 38 iron men has a record already." This was a year after The Hawk's careless, easy, affectionate ways and Lucille's spirit, courage and eternal opening-flower freshness of appearance had made the two seem indispensable to each other. The Hawk was over 30 and appeared as 20. Lucille was over 25 and appeared as 17. Furthermore, when The Hawk had said, as he had often said to others: "You are the most beautiful toy in the world," the Galliene girl had sniffed at him and said: "I am no toy, mon cher. It's to be pals and an honest-to-goodness wedding or you can fade." This was a new experience to Miller; he liked it. He was a bit tired of his own vanity.

When the twenty-fifth day of September had dawned, Lucille had acted as parlor maid at the Simms-Vane house for more than two weeks. She had had no meetings with Miller, her reports had come to him by mail; he considered them masterly, even though the news they transmitted in a rough code was disappointing. Lucille described the interior of the house, the timid character of the "old dodo" who, as butler and factotum, had served for a quarter of a century; the personality of Miss Jones, an English girl, over-educated, fond of poetry and stupid, who was the companion and attendant of Mrs. Simms-Vane; the servants below stairs; the complete absence of any small, yapping dogs, and finally her own failure to find any trace of the famous Thirty-three.

Miller had hoped that Lucille could get the Thirty-three and thus save him from all risks to himself. He believed he could count upon finding cover for her in Chicago until after the robbery had "grown cold," and he was certain that his bold upon her affections was such that when the time came he could go to her and find that the 33 stones were still in her possession. That she had failed even to gather a single clew as to the place where old Mrs. Simms-Vane kept the necklace was unfortunate indeed. The Hawk sighed and in a scrawling hand wrote on the back of a souvenir postcard: "Mother is worse. I'm going to a matinee this week. Lovingly, Bessie." Lucille understood this message perfectly. The following afternoon during the hour when her new mistress was taking her airing the Galliene girl met The Hawk at the hairdressing shop of Edenese Soulier, formerly Minnie Mulvey, a girl of two lone virtues—that of having no disclosed curiosity and that of infinite silence.

The first question Lucille propounded did not concern in any way the matter at hand. She said, sullenly: "What did you pick out this place for? Have you had Minnie out to lunch or dinner?"

"Not in a thousand years," replied The Hawk.

"You had somebody out?"

"No; I'm going on the level. I haven't even looked at anybody. It takes fiber to go straight. Have I got fiber or haven't I? I ask you."

"You got it, Jack—what did you say?"

"Fiber—the stuff a man or woman is made of. What's the matter—jealous again?"

"Why wouldn't I be?" she said, clenching her little pink hands. "I've got everything I got on you, haven't I?"

"Well, you can play it for all its' worth," he said. "It's fate. You are my destiny. This job is going to take the both of us: I'll have to come to the scene myself. Thursday, the butler—Hines you call him—is off. Well, then—listen."

Lucille listened. She fixed her large blue eyes upon the hypnotic, dreamy gaze of The Hawk, and as a result of her listening shortly after 2 o'clock on Thursday she waited near the telephone in the wainscoted hall which had been one of the first, if not the first, interior to be taken from an ancient chateau in Normandy and reconstructed in an American home. She waited there expecting a call, and the call came.

At 2:10, according to Miss Jones, Lucille came to her and said that the Merchants and Dry Goods Trust Co. were calling from their main banking offices in Nassau street. Miss Jones, among her other duties, had charge of the domestic management and accounts, and it was she who, as attorney for Mrs. Simms-Vane, signed the checks; when she came from the telephone she told Lucille that she was much disturbed, that the assistant cashier of the trust company had discovered what appeared to be an alteration in a check given to Barrabas, the fruiterer, that $200 was involved and that she had been asked to go immediately to the downtown offices.

"You will have to stay upstairs in Mrs. Simms-Vane's room," she told Lucille. "There will be nothing to do for her, and in spite of the downpour she will probably insist upon taking her daily ride at 4. By that time probably I shall return."

"Very good, Miss Jones," said Lucille.

At 2:28 the English spinster left the mansion and, descending the steps, line, bent with all seriousness upon

The mechanical chair in which Mrs.

"Who is this gentleman, Lucille?"
"Why does he come?"

"I'll do the talking," said The Hawk with mistaken in you. That is too bad. And you, sir—will you kindly step back three or four steps. I am unable because of my infirmity to turn my head. You must forgive me. I prefer to talk looking into the eyes"—

The Hawk stepped in front of the mechanical chair and met the old lady's unflinching gaze.

"That's right, Mrs. Simms-Vane," he said. "I think you understand. . . . Leave that door open, Lucille; if any of the servants come for anything go out and send them off. Tell them this lady's asleep."

He walked to the extension telephone set upon the table and with his open pocketknife severed the green cord.

"And now, Mrs. Simms-Vane, we're here. I came for the Thirty-three and you're going to tell me where it is."

The old lady smiled. There was no movement in her or about her except the almost imperceptible stir of the lace about her neck and at her cuffs.

"You made a mistake to come here," she said, softly. "It's true that I am a helpless invalid, and cannot call out for assistance, but there is that which will cause you to fail—you shall have a disaster."

Lucille stared at her. The old lady's words sounded like a sentence pronounced by an impartial and unemotional Judge.

"You may call on God," sneered the man. "That's what you mean. My nerve is good for that stuff."

"Here is not," said Mrs. Simms-Vane.

The Hawk turned toward Lucille and saw that she was breathing a little fast.

"It's a lie!" cried Lucille passionately. "The old fossil!"

The little slow smile passed once again across the face of the old lady.

"I did not refer to divine assistance," said she. "You will fail, my dear young people, because you are not made of the stuff which succeeds. Your birth and breeding are held in absolute contempt by me, because I see that you are made of the base metals. You are unrestrained, passionate and vulgar. This is the reason I think you made a mistake to come into conflict with one who was the wife of Mr. Simms-Vane. At the very outset you, sir, made a mistake. You disclosed that you did not know where the necklace was laid away."

Miller threw his wet raincoat on the floor, but did not take off his hat. He had listened to her with curious interest, fascinated, perhaps, by the brightness of the eyes which glowed like the warmth of eternal youth out from their setting of ashes and age.

"You are not very clever yourself," he said with a leer. "You've admitted that the Thirty-three was in this room."

He stepped out of her line of vision and she heard the drawer of the writing desk open.

"Will you trust in one who never has broken her word to anyone?" came the voice of Mrs. Vane again. "Suppose I promised to reward you both to the full. The necklace is the most treasured possession I have. It is not because of its money value but because my husband gave it to me when we were young and very happy that I will not have it taken from me."

The Hawk gave a coarse laugh.

"Listen to her!" exclaimed Lucille.

"Then look out for yourselves," the old lady said. "I warn you."

Miller walked back until he stood in front of her. He had taken from his side pocket a little, ugly-looking automatic and he thrust the muzzle of it into her face.

"Where's the thing hid?" he growled.

Mrs. Simms-Vane shut her eyelids slowly and slowly opened them again.

"Oh, what folly, my mistaken young man," she said. "Do you believe that I fear that you will pull the trigger? Can you not see how beautiful that would be for me? But I forget myself. It is too much to hope. After all, you are only a bad sportsman, too cowardly to kill and only brave enough to lie and steal and poison poor young fools like pretty little Lucille. You would not shoot me, because that would make a noise and you could not go on with your search. I cannot hope that you will pull that trigger."

The rain slapped against the long windows and Lucille moved one foot a little on the hardwood floor.

"You're a tough old nut," said Miller.

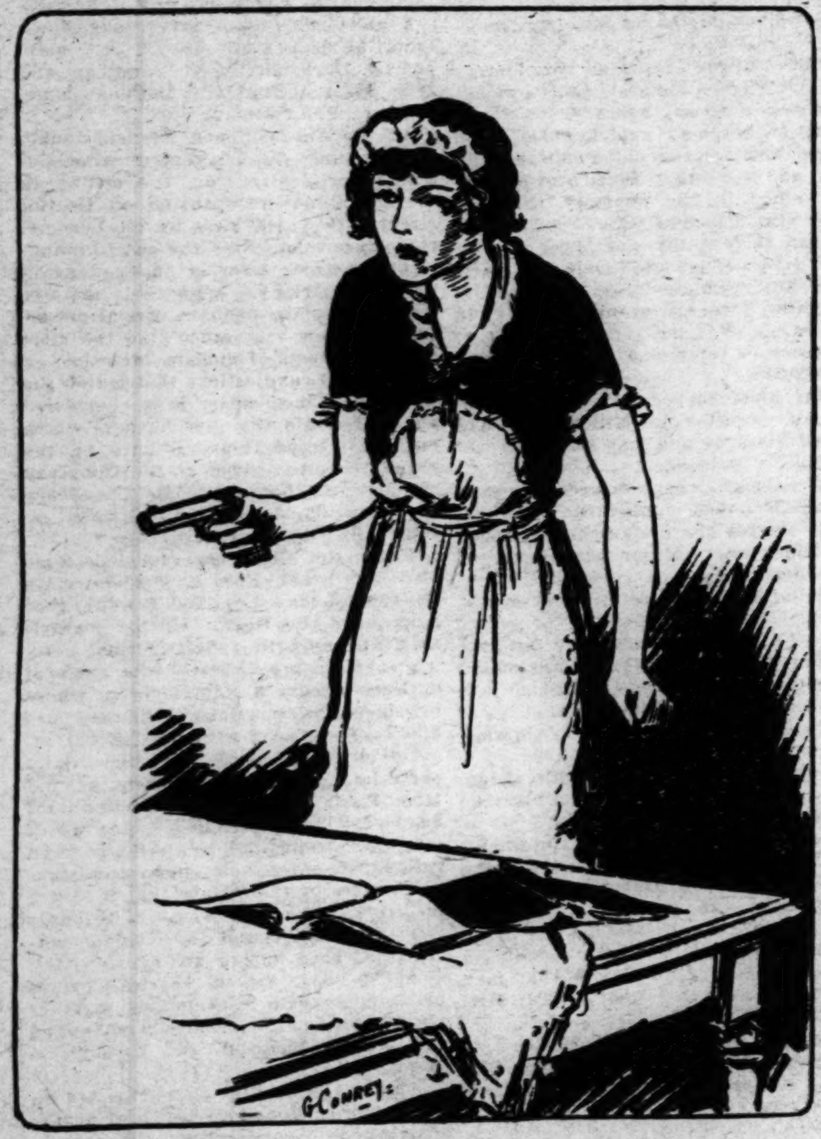
"Thank you, sir," replied Mrs. Simms-Vane. "That is very kind."

"Pull out the books, girlie," The Hawk commanded. "We've got to finish this whole room. Go through it systematic and fast and look in the vases. Remember, she said it was 'laid away.' That's the cue."

He began to examine the tea table beside the invalid's chair; from this he went again to the writing desk, tossing papers and boxes onto the floor; he opened and emptied the drawers, he moved ornaments on the mantel above the fireplace. In the corner of the room he found a teakwood cabinet in which one drawer was locked, and this he splintered open with the end of a pair of steel pliers. He had left his revolver on the table while he made his round and while Lucille pulled down the rare editions which lined the walls and peered behind them on the shelves, and now he came back and stared down at the little weapon of death and bit his lip. He raised his eyes at last and met the gaze of Lucille. The girl had lost her usual color, her face was desperate and drawn and this appeared to anger him. The room was a welter of disorder, and suddenly his face went into disorder, too. It was as if his mask had slipped down and exposed the real man who lived behind it.

"Time wasted!" he growled, with an oath. "It's rough work, but it's got to be done."

He stepped toward the motionless old lady and closed his hand over one of her wrists. Her fingers moved a little.



"Stand back now, you dog, you dog, you dog!" Lucille barked from her dry throat.

"Huh! There's feeling in this hand," he said. "I thought so. Where's the necklace?"

No answer was given him. He slipped the toothed jaws of the pliers between her thumb and forefinger down upon the soft flesh in the crotch of her thumb and closed the steel upon it.

"Better tell," he said in a hoarse whisper. The old lady closed her eyes.

"Better tell," he repeated.

Lucille shuddered as she saw that he was now squeezing the pliers in his tightening grip.

"Curse you," said he. "Out with it. Where's the necklace?"

"That is painful, young man," said Mrs. Simms-Vane. "But I have suffered much pain. I shall not tell you."

"Stop! Stop!" exclaimed Lucille. "The blood is coming. She won't tell. You're crushing the flesh. Stop! Stop!"

"Ah, she has weakened," said the old lady, opening her eyes. "What did I tell you? I said you were both made of inferior stuff. This French doll of yours, sir, was willing to see you torture an old lady who cannot move, and yet a few drops of red makes her cry out. What a pair you are! You are all boastfulness and bragging, but your nerves are made of shoddy."

The Hawk put the pliers in his pocket and, looking at Lucille, sneered.

"Don't!" the girl said. "Don't look at me like that!"

"Why not? The old dame is right."

Far away in some distant hall in the great house there sounded the soft chimes of a clock.

"It's 3," said Mrs. Simms-Vane. "I ordered my hot milk for 3."

Miller wheeled toward the Galliene girl. "Somebody will bring it up?" he asked.

"I suppose so," Lucille answered, sullenly. "I suppose so, if she ordered it. Your guess is as good as mine."

"Quick, then," he commanded. "Go down and say she sent you for hot milk. Quick. Leave the door open. I'll take another look for tne thing."

Mrs. Simms-Vane waited until she heard the sound of the girl's steps fade away and then she said: "I would not waste my time looking in those drawers, young man. Come here and stand in front of me. Perhaps I will tell you what you wish to know."

The Hawk found himself once more looking into the bright eyes.

"You are a handsome young man," said the old lady. "And you may be surprised to know that I respect you for your willingness to take any step necessary to gain your ends. I do not know, young man, whether you are a gentleman or not. Napoleon was not a gentleman. When I was a young girl I would have been attracted by you. I have always been attracted by ability wherever it showed itself."

"Words," said The Hawk, contemptuously, but he pulled off his hat and threw it onto the table. He had a high white forehead and he felt it gave him an air of distinction.

"It is not pleasant to have you here," said she, gazing at him. "I cannot help admiring the boldness you have shown. It is too bad that young men of your magnetism and power should throw themselves away on such worthless young women. Lucille—Pah! Why, sir, did you see her cringe? A pretty face—that's all, and you are infatuated with her—you who could win and conquer women far above the shopgirl class. Did I say you were lacking"——

"Fiber?" he asked.

"Yes—fiber. I was wrong. But she—that silly little maid—what has she to attract you? She may cost you $40,000 in the next 15 minutes."

"How's it figured?" he asked, leaning forward.

"I don't trust her," said Mrs. Simms-Vane. "I could trade with you."

"Trade?" asked Miller.

"Did it occur to you that $40,000 is very little to me? If I spent it, it would be charged to my heirs, my good sir. I would willingly send you a check for that amount if you would go away. But it is too much to ask that you take my word. I could take yours, however. But not if Lucille were involved in it. I distrust her. The stones my husband gave me he picked out himself with his own eyes. I love them most of all material things. I would not trust them to her."

The Hawk looked over his shoulder toward the door. He was alert again.

"How's that again?" he asked. "Talk faster."

"I cannot," said Mrs. Simms-Vane. "I meant that if I could trust you—and you alone—with the necklace to keep it until we could arrange for me to buy it back from you, I would pay you more for it then than its appraised value—25 per cent more."

"Where is it? I'd do that. I'd take a chance on that and plan it out later," urged the crook. "Where's the Thirty-three?"

"I fear the girl. You are enamored of her," complained Mrs. Simms-Vane. "You love her, and a man in love is not to be trusted. What fools you men are! Twenty thousand dollars is a high price to pay for this cheap little creature's favor."

"I don't have to pay it," he said. "Unless she knows I've got the sparklers. Then I would, because she's a little wild cat and she'd squeal."

"You mean, young man, that you would not reveal the fact of your having the necklace to her?" asked Mrs. Simms-Vane. "You would give me the chance to purchase back the diamonds from you? You would promise to take nothing else from this house?"

"What else is there?"

"There is a stamp box on the writing desk. You opened it. I heard its lid click. It is of solid gold."

"Gold! That made of solid gold! Well, I'd play straight," said The Hawk. "But how would I know that you"—

"You would have the word of Justinia Simms-Vane," the old lady said.

For a long moment the crook stared into her face.

"I'm no fool," he said. "The girl's not worth the fuss. Where's the necklace?"

"Come near me," commanded the mistress. "There. Open the buttons on my dress."

"Judas Garryowen!" exclaimed The Hawk. "She wears it! What stones! What stones!"

"Take it quickly."

From the neck and shoulders, once famous on two continents, Miller the Hawk took off the famous Simms-Vane necklace. He uttered a guttural growl of avarice and triumph.

"What are you doing?" asked the old lady. He thought her face had grown more ashen than ever.

"I'm picking the rocks out of their settings," he said, with a laugh. "It's a way we have."

"What was that noise?"

"That was the chain going into the wastebasket. I'm not taking chances with gold."

"Ah!" said Mrs. Simms-Vane. "Surely you will do me the favor to button my dress. Lucille"——

"Oh, I know, I know," replied Miller, impatiently. "But look at them! Thirty-three perfect ones. Bird's eggs! What a handful! Look!"

"They are very pretty."

Miller dropped them into his pocket, fastened the two buttons at Mrs. Simms-Vane's throat and made an awkward attempt to adjust the lace collar.

"She's coming," said the old lady. "She's bringing my hot milk. If there is any kindness in you ask her to feed it to me. This has been very hard on me."

"All right," whispered The Hawk. "I'm supposed to be still looking for the stones. You understand."

He began to pull open the drawers below the bookshelves. Mrs. Vane heard him stop. Beside the door is a heavy oval mirror set in a carving by Schauffler. Reflected in this mirror was the writing desk and the eyes of Mrs. Simms-Vane, fixed upon this mirror, saw a hand which reached for the brass stamp box upon this desk and, having grasped it, was withdrawn.

She sighed and closed her eyes. Lucille appeared in the doorway.

"I've frisked the room all over again," came the voice of The Hawk. "No result. The old lady has done us."

"Look some more," the Galliene girl urged. "Pull out those drawers below the bookcases and look under them."

Mrs. Simms-Vane opened her eyes suddenly.

"I want my hot milk," she said querulously.

"Forget that," Lucille said.

"No, give her the milk," commanded Miller. "She's been game. I'll look under these drawers and then we're through. Give the old dame her milk."

Lucille held out the tray.

"You forget, my dear, that I can't move," Mrs. Simms-Vane said. "Put the glass to my lips. Careful. What's that? Dirt? Dirt in my milk. Look closely. Is there dirt in my milk?"

Lucille, with a gesture of impatience, bent her head over the glass until her black hair brushed the old lady's face. Then suddenly she heard a soft whisper in her ear.

"Do not show any surprise, Lucille," said the muffled voice of Mrs. Simms-Vane. "Keep looking at the milk. You have been a little fool. He has the necklace. If you show him you know it he will kill you. Don't move."

The girl's mouth closed. Mrs. Simms-Vane heard Lucille's pretty white teeth snap together.

"Is it dirt in my milk?" the mistress said, aloud and complaining. "Look again. What are these specks?"

"I'm trying to see," said Lucille, sharply, bending over again. "You are trying to make a fool of me."

"No, no," came the voice. "He has the diamonds. The necklace without the stones is in the wastebasket. The revolver—ah, my dear young woman—the revolver—it is on the table. Poor little fool you are!"

Suddenly the glass of milk slipped from Lucille's grasp and fell onto the floor with a crash. The girl ran quickly to the wastebasket and looked in. Then from her throat rose a cry of bitter grief which fell into a snarl of rage.

The Hawk jumped to his feet.

"You got it, you dog!" she said, red with hate.

Miller glanced at the table where the short, ugly automatic pistol was resting and made a rush for it. The girl, like a cat, sprang forward and it was she and not he who snatched it up.

"Stand back now, you dog, you dog, you dog!" Lucille barked from her dry throat. "You double-crossed me. After I loved you so!"

"Listen, girlie," whined The Hawk. "Listen! It's all right. The old lady has framed us. I love you, girlie. You get your share. This was the only way I had of getting the necklace, dear. It was all for you."

Lucille was shaking from head to foot.

Mrs. Simms-Vane's voice came muffled and low, but clear. "Oh, Lucy, you little fool. The other woman is the one!"

The wrist of the Galliene girl stiffened, her body settled into tenseness.

"I thought so—you dog!" she whimpered. "I'm going to kill you!"

In this whimpering voice The Hawk recognized something far more dangerous than rage. The widespread fingers of both hands he thrust out in front of him feeling in the air as a blind man feels, for he would not take his eyes from hers.

"I love you," he said.

Suddenly the girl, without relaxing, shut her eyes as if the pain in her heart could no longer be borne. At this instant Miller seized one of the heavy brass candlesticks and flung it with all his power at her body.

The massive metal object went wide of its mark; it struck Lucille a glancing blow upon the shoulder.

"You dog," she whispered, and fired three times. The Hawk staggered until his back struck the wall and here he settled down in a sitting posture unconscious.

Downstairs there sounded a faint scream and the sound of running feet.

The girl looked toward Mrs. Simms-Vane. The eyes of the old lady were open; the old lips had not changed their expression.

"I said it would be disaster for him to cross me," she said, slowly. "The fiber was lacking. He broke his agreement with me; he took the little stamp box when he thought I could not see. And now, my dear young woman, you are a murderess, I fear!"

"No! No!" shrieked the Galliene girl. "Don't say that! No! No! Save me!"

"Ah!" said Mrs. Simms-Vane "Do you know, Lucille, I wonder if you are really bad? I doubt it. I think you should have your chance. Come to me, Lucille. We must hurry. I shall say you defended me. I am quite able to protect you if you deserve it."

"Oh, I don't deserve it!" the girl cried out.

"Hush! Go put your hand over that young man's heart. There! what do you feel?"

"It's—it's beating," breathed the girl.

"Ah, well—perhaps that is for the best."

Mrs. Simms-Vane closed her eyes.

"And now, my dear," she said. "Put your hand into the young man's coat pocket—the left side. Do you feel the diamonds? Of course they are all there. There ought to be"——

"Thirty-three," said Lucille.

"Count each one and drop it into my hand," said Mrs. Simms-Vane. "Are you sure you have them all? My husband gave them to me. You did not leave a single one?"

"No, I'm sure," answered the Galliene girl. "One—two—three—oh, how wonderful they are! Four—five"——

There was the sound of feet upon the stone steps and a constant ringing of the doorbell.

"Fifteen — sixteen — seventeen — eighteen—nineteen—twenty," counted Lucille.

The ringing ceased at last and there followed the clatter of heavy shoes on the stairs.

"Thirty — thirty-one — thirty-two — thirty-three"——

"Thirty-three!" repeated Mrs. Simms-Vane. "Then I have all that my husband gave me, back again?"

"All back again," said Lucille.

Two men, one a patrolman in uniform and the other in a brown raincoat, stood in the doorway with the white, stupid face of Miss Jones peering between their bulky shoulders.

"A fine young job!" said the raincoat man. "Funny I just happened to be coming down the avenue. Is the old lady safe? Yes. All right. Look at the room. Telephone wire cut, too. Some job!"

"But look, Inspector!" said the patrolman, pointing to Miller, who had opened his eyes and was staring up at them.

The Inspector bent down and gazed into the wounded man's face.

"By the big and little fishes!" gasped the Inspector. "Miller the Hawk, or I'm a dead one."

"Hello, Garrity," said the crook, feebly.

"Gee! What an experience for the old lady," Garrity said, turning toward the motionless invalid. "Excuse me, ma'am. Who shot this man?"

"The maid," replied Mrs. Simms-Vane.

"I was defending her," Lucille added.

"Is that right, ma'am?" asked the detective.

The Hawk's raucous voice interrupted. "It's a lie. The little rat was the inside on this job, Garrity. She shot me because she thought I double-crossed her. We messed it up."

"Oh, how he talks!" cried Lucille, in a shrill voice. "I never saw that man before in all my life. Did I, Mrs. Vane?"

"My dear young woman, I tried to give you a chance," said the old lady, closing her eyes again. "You were his accomplice. I advise the officers to arrest you."

"You said—you said"—— gasped Lucille. "You promised"——

"Certainly," replied Mrs. Simms-Vane. "But in my necklace there were not the number of stones you counted out to me. You kept one. You naughty girl! The necklace was given to me by my dear husband on my thirty-fourth and not my thirty-third birthday."

"Ha!" exclaimed The Hawk. "That serves the little devil proper. But it's just like her! Look under the hair that droops over her ears, Garrity. She'll have it in her ear. I know her tricks."

"Keep away from me," snarled Lucille. "I'll give her the stone."

She reached under her hair and then threw the diamond into the lap of Mrs. Simms-Vane.

"Please take these persons away," said the old lady. "And please thank the two gentlemen of the law."

"Of course you will not take your ride today?" asked Miss Jones in a trembling voice.

"I believe I will," replied Mrs. Simms-Vane. "Turn my chair around."

The rain had stopped. The first fresh slanting sunlight of clearing weather lit the walls across the avenue.

"Oh, yes, Miss Jones," the old lady went on. "It will be pleasant in the park."

The House of Yesterday in St. Louis

have been living continuously since.

It was necessary to move in while the interior was still unfinished, because of the depredations of soldiers quartered at the United States Arsenal, about three blocks away. Stout iron bars were placed across all the windows, and still remain, a reminder of the lawless period in the city's history. For months, according to the family tradition, sentries were kept on guard on the premises by Maj. (later Col.) La Motte, who was in command at the Arsenal.

The old house stands on the crest of what is still known as Arsenal Hill. From the third story windows there is a magnificent panorama of the city, with its wilderness of roofs and spires. To the east the silver ribbon of the Mississippi unwinds its impressive length, with glimpses of the woods of Illinois beyond, and at night the lights of the free bridge making geometrical patterns against the blackness.

Inside, the house is a veritable treasure trove, a paradise for the relic and antique hunter. Most of the furnishings, chairs, tables, mirrors, four-posters and bric-a-brac have come down from the great-grandfather of the present Dr. De Menil, Pierre Chouteau, and from his maternal grandmother, Mme. Auguste P. Chouteau.

In the old-fashioned French double parlor hang the chandeliers that depended originally from the ceiling in the old Chouteau mansion on Gratiot street. Designed first as oil burners, they were made over for gas illumination and more recently changed again to use electricity. With their massive brass bodies and pendant crystal prisms they are now very much like the most recent products of modern factories.

A pair of candlesticks that match the chandeliers have never been remodeled but still retain the very burners which may have shed their radiance on the grand reception given at the Chouteau residence in honor of His Excellency the Marquis de Lafayette, when he visited St. Louis a century ago.

From the Chouteau mansion come also the great French mirrors, with their hand-carved, gilded frames, that hang over the Italian marble mantelshelf and opposite. And in their shining surfaces are reflected the graceful outlines of carved walnut chairs whose pristine scarlet velour brilliance has now been replaced with sober green.

On the parlor walls hang the family portraits. One is a likeness of old Mme. Marie Therese Chouteau in quaint headdress and 'kerchief, showing a forceful, intellectual, yet sensitive and refined, countenance, with unmistakable traces of the beauty that is still a tradition. The copy is one of the only two in existence and the original portrait has been lost or destroyed.

Among the smaller mementos are an ancient brass door knocker, bearing the inscription "Auguste P. Chouteau," and one of two lanterns which were the property of Pierre Chouteau.

The library of the house is rich in associations of another character. Here are rare old editions of the classics, copper-plated folios, quartos of the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and files of the earliest English and American newspapers and periodicals; and against this background, like a jewel in its antique setting, rests the personality of its presiding genius, Dr. Alexander N. De Menil, now in his seventy-fifth year but vigorous as one of his own oak trees.

After his name in "Who's Who in America" trails an imposing array of letters indicating many academic degrees, some of them honorary. Dr. De Menil has had a distinguished local public career also, in which are included terms in the City Council and House of Delegates. He was at one time an unsuccessful candidate for the mayoralty, was a director of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and was chairman of the local Draft Board during the World War. For his services as executive officer of the Missouri Commission for the Relief of Belgium, Dr. De Menil was decorated by the King of the Belgians.

In a monograph published as the result of painstaking research among old documents and church records here and in New Orleans, Dr. De Menil lays the ghost of scandal which has dimmed the memory of his ancestress, Mme. Marie Therese Chouteau, for many years. He proves that during the time when the much-maligned lady was accused of being involved in an intrigue with Laclede Liguest, she was living quietly in New Orleans, rearing her five children in the Catholic faith, and waiting dutifully until she could safely join her young husband in the struggling little settlement to the north.

Dr. De Menil's reputation as a writer is not confined to St. Louis. He is recognized as an authority on the history of St. Louis and of Missouri, and his published works include a "Bibliography of St. Louis," "The Literature of the Louisiana Territory," "A Century of Missouri Literature" and a "Bibliography of Missouri." Another volume is to be published shortly. In addition, Dr. De Menil is the author of "[illegible] and Town," a collection of lyric poems.

What is to become eventually of the historic old house and gardens on South Thirteenth street? Will they give way to the demands of industry or will they stay on, as a heritage for the family and the city whose history is so closely interwoven with the story of its fortunes?

Dr. De Menil refuses to commit himself on the subject. While he lives, undoubtedly, the property will continue to defy the passing years. So deeply has he struck root into his ancestral soil that nowhere else on earth is there peace of mind or body for him.

But afterward?

"After I'm gone," says Dr. Alexander De Menil, "they'll have to fight it out between them. But when I do go—it's going to be feet first."

"The Most Discussed Woman in America"

High up, in the sunshine, birds utter their happy songs.

It was to preserve the atmosphere of reposeful beauty, so perfectly attained in the arrangement of the various treasures, that Mrs. Gardner wished to avoid a crush. More than 200 persons at a time in the palace would destroy that atmosphere, she felt.

As the visitor crossed the threshold of the Dutch room, for example, it was not only the five Rembrandts, the splendid Rubens portrait of Thomas of Arundel, the stately Van Dyck, the Holbein and Durer, that counted in the general effect. There were the two large tables, with their vases of rare orchids on the dull green of the cloth; the fire on the hearth of the great stone Renaissance fireplace, flickering brightly across the wide, open space of the room; the cabinets and chairs, two of which had belonged to Napoleon at Elba, and one containing beautiful bits of old Dutch silver; the carved sofa whose cover of finest needlework was made by the nuns of Rocroi in 1620.

All these objects would lose their significance, the owner believed, if surrounded by a pushing, restless throng.

Another notable apartment is the Raphael room, with its carved marble doorway, its rich curtains, having the arms of a Cardinal embroidered on them, its carved and gilded Italian wedding chests, its panels, triptychs, vases and tables—exactly the right setting for the masterpieces by Raphael, Lippo Lippi, Mantegna, Francia and Botticelli on the walls, and the easel painting by Fra Angelico, with its pure celestial blues and clustered aureoles.

Other specially arranged rooms include the Veronese room so called from its ceiling by Paul Veronese, showing the "Coronation of Hebe"; the Titian room and the Chinese room. The latter evoked comment as perhaps the most remarkable example of its owner's ability to weave things into artistic harmony. Magnificent hangings from the Winter Palace at Pekin are there, also temple gongs, carved monsters, wonderful china and Cloisonne, yet Western pictures and furniture blend into the Eastern whole and make no discord.

Some of the more notable paintings at Fenway Court include Titian's "Rape of Europe," Velasquez's "Pope Innocent X" and Da Fabriano's "Madonna and Child." Modern painters are represented in works by Sargent, Whistler, Hunt and Zorn—the latter a portrait of Mrs. Gardner. Sculptures from palaces and monasteries in Europe were built into the walls.

"If Fenway Court were not a palace," commented one critic, "it would still be a fine museum of art. But, then, museums of art are unartistic, and this, it must be added, is artistic to the point of genius."

Fenway Court includes a Gothic chapel which is a gem of architectural beauty, and allusion already has been made to one startling manifestation of Mrs. Gardner's piety. Indeed, her religious feeling was one of her strongest characteristics, as might be suspected from the many charitable acts which are known, and probably there were many more.

Yet, united with this and with a keen sense of propriety, Mrs. "Jack" Gardner loved excitement and thrills. She acquired such a reputation, at least in Boston, for being shocking that it no longer made any difference what she did—people were shocked anyway. She was, probably, at one time the most discussed woman in America.

Once she chartered a special train and rode in the engine cab from Boston to Beverly, so that she might overtake a coaching party which she had been unable to join in Boston. She startled the gathering at an artist's carnival by appearing there with a tiny negro page to carry her train. In her remarkable garden she raised her own violets and never was seen in public without a bunch of these favorite flowers. Not only did she raise flowers, but also won a prize for her cabbages.

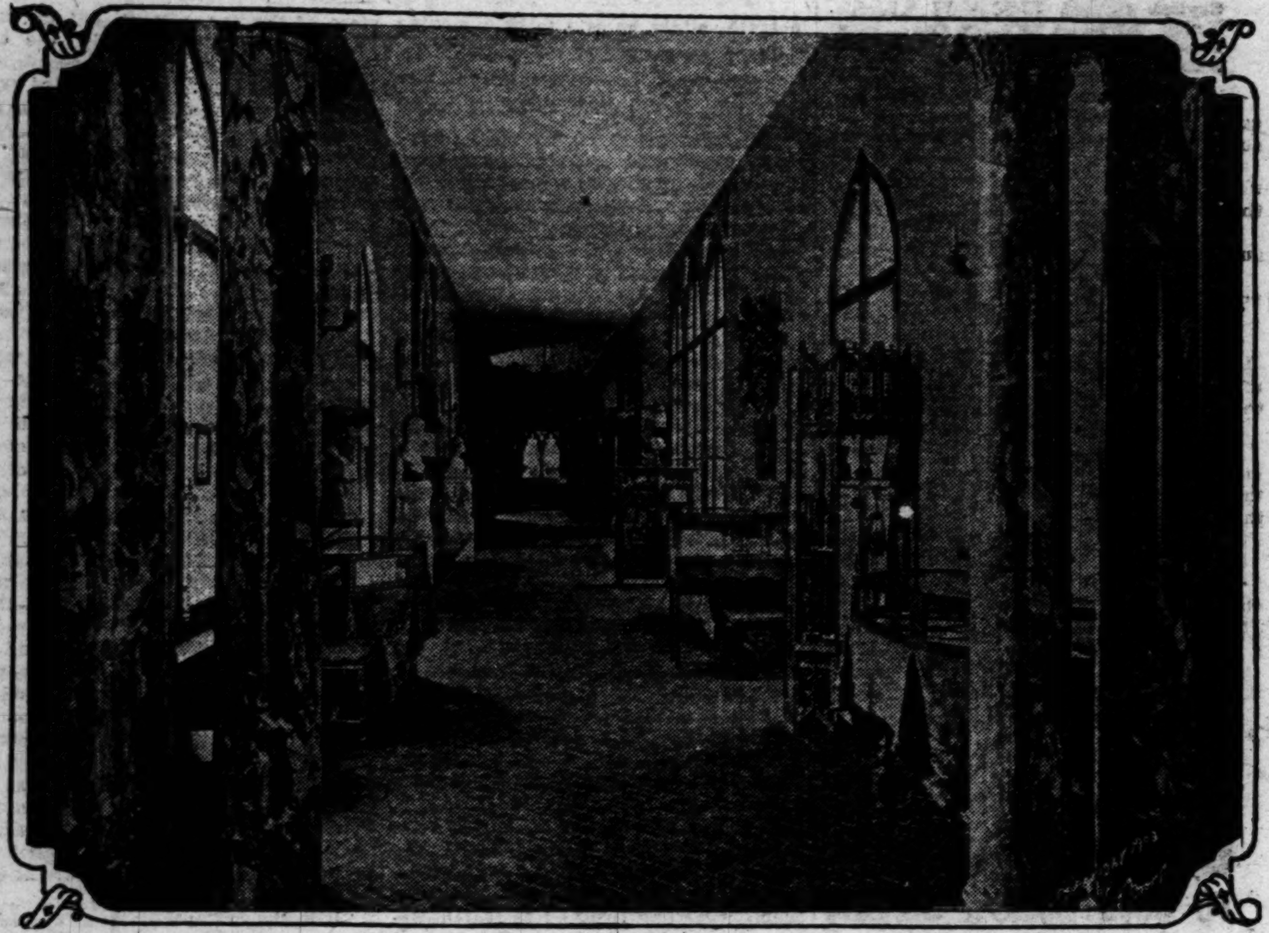
To her other gifts were added a marvelous tact and intuitive diplomacy. The consideration that she had for others shines forth in an anecdote which was told by an eyewitness of the incident. Soon after the palace of art treasures was opened to public inspection, the members of a well-known club were admitted for a private tour.

During the inspection a souvenir hunter—or perhaps thief would be a better word—attempted to cut a large square piece out of the life-sized Dutch figure in a rare tapestry. Evidently using a large pair of tailor's shears, she had almost succeeded when the approach of others apparently frightened her away. One of Mrs. Gardner's employes discovered what had been attempted. Desiring to find out who the guilty party might be, he suggested to Mrs. Gardner that the doors be locked and each member of the party searched.

Mrs. Gardner absolutely refused to allow any such proceeding, although her feeling of indignation may easily be imagined. The inspection went on as though nothing unpleasant had occurred. But, ever after that, a personal friend of Mrs. Gardner's stood guard in every room when the public was admitted.

The following description of Mrs. Gardner was published at the height of her social success:

"A rather small, exquisitely proportioned woman, with masses of reddish hair, pale complexion, pale eyes, large, rather Scottish features and no beauty of face except a quick mobility of expression; a woman with a subtle charm in her voice and with unusual vivacity of manner." She dressed well, and with much originality.



Long gallery at Fenway Court, filled with beautiful and valuable objects of art. In the distance can be seen the Gothic chapel.

Kansas City Doctor Invents New Truss

New Discovery Heals Rupture Without an Operation.

A new discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of the well-known Hernia Specialist, Dr. Andrews, 2288 Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today. "Z. Taylor, Colonel Commanding" in truth, might be said to be a moving battery; the weight of the enemy's fire was principally concentrated on five companies of the Sixth Infantry, which not only stood firm but continued to advance until their gallant commander, Lieutenant-Colonel Thompson, and his adjutant, Lieut. Centre, were killed, and every officer with one exception, as well as most of the noncommissioned officers, including the Sergeant-Major and four of the Orderly Sergeants, killed and wounded of those companies; when that portion of the regiment retired a short distance and were again formed, one of the companies having but four men left untouched.

"Lieutenant-Colonel Foster, with six companies, amounting in all to 160 men, gained the hammock in good order, where he was joined by Capt. Noel, with the two remaining companies of the Sixth Infantry, and Capt. Gillam of Gentry's Volunteers with a few additional men, and continued to drive the enemy for a considerable time, and by change of front separated his line and continued to drive him until he reached the great Lake Okeechobee, which was in the rear of the enemy's position, and on which their encampment extended for more than a mile.

"As soon as I was informed that Capt. Allen was advancing, I ordered the First Infantry to move to the left, gain the enemy's right flank and turn it, which order was executed in the promptest manner possible; and as soon as that regiment got in position, the enemy gave one fire and retreated, being pursued by the First, Fourth and Sixth Infantry and some of the volunteers, who had joined them, until near night, and until these troops were nearly exhausted and the enemy driven in all directions."

The action continued from 12:30 until after 3 p. m. As soon as the enemy were completely routed, Col. Taylor turned his attention to the care of the wounded. He ordered an encampment to be formed at the edge of the swamp, where all the baggage had been left before the attack.

He now directed Capt. Taylor, a commissary officer, to construct a small footway across the swamp to this camp and, "with great exertions," it was completed in a short time after darkness fell. All the 24 dead and the wounded were carried across to the camp in litters made for the purpose, with the exception of a private in the Fourth Infantry, who had been killed but whose body could not be found.

"And here," writes Col. Taylor, "I trust I may be permitted to say that I experienced one of the most trying scenes of my life; and he who could have looked on it with indifference, his nerves must have been very differently organized from my own.

"Besides the killed, among whom were some of my personal friends, there lay 112 wounded officers and soldiers, who had accompanied me 145 miles through unexplored wildernesses, without guides, who had so gallantly beaten the enemy, under my orders, in his strongest position, and who had to be conveyed back through swamps and hammocks, from whence we set out, without any apparent means of doing so."

The day after the battle the expedition remained at the camp, burying the dead, caring for the wounded and constructing rude litters for the return march. Their only tools were ax and knife, their materials just poles and dry hides, the latter being found in great abundance at the Indian camp. The litters were carried by horses and by men, and the wounded thus transported with more comfort to the sufferers than Col. Taylor would have believed possible. The camp on the Kissimee, where the artillery and other heavy baggage had been left, was reached about noon of Dec. 28, and by Jan. 1 the wounded had been forwarded to Tampa Bay.

Col. Taylor praises his command generously, both the various units and individual officers, most of whom seem to be mentioned by name. He writes:

"The Missouri Volunteers under the command of Col. Gentry, and Morgan's spies, who formed the first line and, of course were the first engaged, acted as well, or even better, than troops of that description usually do.

"They received and returned the enemy's fire with spirit for some time, when they broke and retired, with the exception of Capt. Gilliland and a few of his company, and Maj. Blakely, also, with a few men who joined the regulars and acted with them until after the close of the engagement, but not until they had suffered severely, the commanding officer of the volunteers, Col. Gentry, being mortally wounded while leading on his men and encouraging them to enter the hammock and come to close quarters with the enemy." A son of Col. Gentry, 18 or 19 years old and Sergeant-Major of the regiment, was severely wounded at the same time.

But the warmest praise in all of Col. Taylor's report is given to the regiment of which he was Colonel for many years, and which now is stationed in St. Louis. The Colonel comments:

"I am not sufficient master of words to express my admiration of the gallantry and steadiness of the officers and soldiers of the Sixth Infantry. It was their fortune to bear the brunt of the battle. The report of the killed and wounded, which accompanies this, is more conclusive evidence of their merits than anything I can say. After five companies of this regiment, against which the enemy directed their most deadly fire, were nearly cut up—there being only four men left uninjured in one of them, and every officer and Orderly Sergeant of those companies, with one exception, were either killed or wounded—Capt. Noel, with the remaining two companies, his own Company K and Crossman's B, commanded by Second Lieutenant Woods, which was the left of the regiment, formed on the right of the Fourth Infantry, entered the hammock with that regiment and continued the fight and the pursuit until its termination.

"It is due to Capt. Andrews and Lieut. Walker to say they commanded two of the five companies mentioned above until they were both severely wounded and carried from the field, the latter receiving three separate balls."

And the report, which is signed simply Z. Taylor, Colonel Commanding, particularly praises Lieutenant-Colonel A. R. Thompson of the Sixth Infantry, who fell at the head of his regiment. Says Col. Taylor:

"He was in feeble health, brought on by exposure to this climate during the past summer, refusing to leave the country while his regiment continued in it. Although he received two balls from the fire of the enemy early in the action, which wounded him severely, yet he appeared to disregard them and continued to give his orders, with the same coolness that he would have done had his regiment been under review or any other parade duty.

"Advancing, he received a third ball, which at once deprived him of his life. His last words were: 'Keep steady, men; charge the hammock—remember the regiment to which you belong!'"

MYSTERIOUS GAS DETECTED IN ATMOSPHERE OF PLANETS

DONALD MENZEL, American astronomer, has discovered evidence that some mysterious, unknown gas exists in the atmospheres of the outer planets of our solar system; the planets Neptune, Uranus, Saturn and Jupiter. Some of the spectrum bands found in the light that comes to us from these planets cannot be matched on earth. Mr. Menzel suggests that this unknown gas may be some chemical compound that can exist only at temperatures far below zero, for the atmospheres of these outer planets are supposed to be very cold. They are so far from the sun that they receive little warmth from it.

HAY FEVER
PROMPTLY RELIEVED BY NEW DISCOVERY
Eyes Quit Itching. Nose Stops Running and Burning. Makes Life Worth Living. Money Refunded if It Fails.

At last! Real relief for hay fever. The long search by scientific men for something that would counteract the effect of pollen has resulted in a new discovery. It is now possible to go through the hay fever season and hardly know that you ever had this terrible affliction.

"Dis-pollin" is the name of this new compound. It is absolutely harmless, contains no injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Simply apply it in the nostrils, and almost instantly you realize that hay fever has met its master. The nose clears up and stops running. The fever cools off. Breathing becomes easier. The redness and itching of the eyes ease and soon cease almost entirely. A few applications a day enable you to work in comfort and sleep in peace.

Hay fever is caused by pollen from weeds, vegetation, etc., which irritates the mucous lining of the nose. Dis-pollin keeps this pollen infection under such control that it doesn't make your life miserable. It is easy to use and acts like magic.

"Gave Wonderful Relief"

"I started using Dis-pollin for hay fever last July, and obtained most wonderful relief. For the first time in many years, I slept soundly during the hay fever season, and was able to work with very little of the usual trouble. I recommended Dis-pollin to others and all of them received the same relief I did."—C. H. Rogers, Mgr. Hotel, 36 So. Capitol Ave.,

"My First Real Relief"

"I have found complete relief with Dis-pollin all through the Rose and Hay Fever seasons. My suffering used to be very bad. Dis-pollin cleared my head, stopped the itching of the eyes, made my breathing easy and made it possible for me to work and get a good night's sleep. It is the first real relief I have found and has had no bad effect."— Walker, 736 Edgemont Ave.,

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY

You can try Dis-pollin without risking a penny. If it fails to please you, your money will be promptly refunded. Try it—try Dis-pollin at our risk. When Knighthood Was Not In Flower

"These things have been on sale for years, as you know."

Col. Parkinson was asked if he still held the King's commission—as a Colonel. He said he still held it.

"Don't you think," inquired counsel for the defendants, "that you were putting an intolerable insult upon his majesty in paying this money?"

"It didn't occur to my mind."

Counsel for the Colonel told the Court and jury that when he and his client went to see Mr. Harrison the latter explained how the title was to be procured by saying that "they had a call on royal and political honors," and produced a list of names which, he said, they were going to forward for recommendation.

"There were only two vacancies, Mr. Harrison told us. He said Col. Parkinson would have to be quick, as there were two other gentlemen eager to get the honors of knighthood. Later, when I applied for the return of my client's money, a member of the council of the College of Ambulance told me that the receipt of $15,000 for an honor was against public policy, and that it was a subscription or donation to the college."

"Did it seem to you to be a disgraceful bargain?" asked defendant's counsel.

"No, because we have heard about selling honors, but nobody has proved it. I must say that such a thing is almost undesirable and distasteful. I offered no protest while in the room with the plaintiff and Mr. Harrison."

Now comes Mrs. Robins, the American playlady, or emotional actress, and, being duly sworn, tells the Court that Mr. Harrison told her, late in 1921, that Col. Parkinson was handing over some money, or contribution, to the college, and that he (Harrison) had promised to do something for Parkinson in return. Mr. Harrison knew she was acquainted with some very influential persons, and she told him she would be pleased to meet the colonel and give him a "political letter of introduction."

In summing up, his lordship said:

"A contract for the purchase of a title or honor is against public policy, and it might be of such a character as to call one to say that it is a disgraceful contract to make. It is idle to say that we have not heard of cases in which people have made munificent donations to charity, and cases where the generosity has been considered in deciding whether the people were going to have an honor or not. But the very idea of purchasing honors from a sovereign is a suggestion no one would look upon with approval."

With regard to damages, the jury intimated a desire to have the plaintiff recover the $15,000, and the Court set a date for hearing legal arguments on the jury's findings.

Flying at Night With the Air Mail

save himself, either by jumping out of his plane and depending on his parachute, or by shutting off his motor and landing with a 'dead stick.'

"This is not difficult for the skilled flyer. He can glide a mile within a radius of 1000 feet, and he can glide three or more miles, into a valley, if necessary, without serious consequences. No, the sensations of night flying are not so thrilling as day flying in the face of a storm and the pilot's feelings are not nearly so acute because he is following a given course, safe in the assurance that his little flare light will show him the way, if needs be.

"I have followed railroad trains over part of my course in night flights, but at a speed of 100 miles an hour and more (depending on the driving winds), the airplane too frequently leaves the trains behind. All aviators dislike fog. It is their bugaboo, because objects are hidden from view and the instrument is not yet in use that will indicate a near approach to an object, whether it be the earth or the side of a mountain. Such an instrument, however, is now being perfected and then fog will have no more terrors.

"While flying in the night the pilot's chief concern is to keep his motor functioning, knowing that his destination will then be certain. Landings are safe because of the brilliancy of the field, lighted with beacons and flares. In my flight to Chicago by night I missed my course a bit due to the winds, but I found it again when I discovered the coke ovens at Bellefonte. A pilot flying in a storm often veers to either side—not to the point of flying upside down, but something approaching it. He is then directed off his course perhaps for miles. Only after passing through or over a storm is he able to manipulate his compass to set himself right."

Spiked Union Suit Fine for Wolf Hunting

like a steel trap around my arm. Then it let go, howling with pain. I plunged my ax bayonet into its neck as it leaped away. It staggered off a short distance and dropped dead.

"The other wolf didn't see the point. He came at me again. Before he had a chance to take another bite at the spikes (I'll admit I was a little excited by this time) I just threw my ax at this fellow. It got him right in the neck. A few kicks and he was a dead wolf.

"I still had a score to settle with the one that had rushed my dog. He was still hanging around. I recovered my ax and hit him with it. I must have cut him pretty deep, but I didn't get him. He let out an awful howl and fled with the other two that had been prowling around at a safe distance.

"My dog, Fanny, was lying there dead in the snow—just a little black spot on that big frozen lake. I sure did want to get even with them for killing Fanny. So I rushed into the forest after those wolves. I chased 'em about half a mile through the underbrush in the dark, but I lost the trail.

"The spiked suit was all right. Without it I wouldn't have had a chance. When I went back to the lake I examined the dead wolves. It was light enough out there in the open for me to see that their tusks were as long as the one-inch spikes on my suit."

This battle with the wolves took place in the district east of Fort Francis and about 80 miles north of the Canadian border. The nearest trading post is Atikoka.

The now famous porcupine's pajamas did not come with Clarkson. He left the spiked suit carefully stowed away in a locker at the trading post—because he is going back next winter to kill more wolves.

Cactus does not think much of hunting with firearms. He says the first shot scares the wolves away and the hunter with a gun can never get near them a second time.

Both wolves killed by this gunless hunter were more than six feet long and both were fat, showing that there was no scarcity of food.

But conditions are not always so. When goaded by hunger the wolves of the Canadian woods do not hesitate to attack men. In lean winters they are a constant menace of the lumber camps and they have killed many trappers.

It is the dream of Cactus to get into those big woods some time when the wolves are desperately hungry and let them try out their fangs on the porcupine's pajamas.
